Mary Ann	Blair	Ardmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bk	Hartley	Jacksonville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Berlin	Coconut Creek	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Pickett	Pagosa Spgs	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Warren	Chan	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Howell	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Jackson	Belleville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Obarr	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucille	Honig	Yorktown	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Wildman	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Geissler	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jen	Hof	Clearwater	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Elbert	Oviedo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Latham	Norfolk	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernadette	Margel	Elkridge	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Minton	Hillsborough	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faith	Hamlin	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bronwen	Hughes	Woodland Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Riley	Saint Simons Island	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Tymczyszyn	Middletown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristen	Palazzo	Great Barrington	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
michelle	rollman	stewartsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laureen	Katana	Elkins Park	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
STEFANIE	LYNEN	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marv	Poulson	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Greene	Bristol	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Hahn	Wesley Chapel	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	O'Sullivan	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Griff	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	White	Albany	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Hallard	Tinton Falls	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Shawndra	Holmberg	Butler	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We need local news, local businesses, local voices. Say no to the merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Erald	Sino	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Zimmerman	Winchester	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Sticker	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lin	Poynter	Troy	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Jones	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Marek	Jacksonville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Hotchkiss	Chatsworth	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Hess	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Newman	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Gelb	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanne	Forrest	Pocatello	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Jones	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Valva	Manchester	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	MacKrell	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krista	Nordstrom	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Hodgson	Tracy	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amelia	Barker	Madison	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Joan	Woolfrey	West Chester	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is very close to state run broadcasting. Sinclair should not be allowed to buy upradio stations and dictate their broadcasts. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Hruska	Brattleboro	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Justin	Levesque	Sunapee	New Hampshire	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

alex	baudouin	norwalk	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Herman	Hardy	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Hay	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Logue	Parker	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

edward	yeatman	collinsville	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Pater	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leland	Robinson	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Micah	Veilleux	Blacksburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Wilson	Chelsea	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mansur	Khawaja	Pembroke Pines	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Juanita	Galindo	Miami Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	McGinnis	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Sabatino	Somers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Gibson	Medford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Barboza	Port Saint Lucie	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Glasser	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hali	Rederer	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carrie	Beckman	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Ramsey	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hayley	Saccoman	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sandra	batchelder	Barre	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Kasperson	Ephrata	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Lutz	Petersburg	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Krista	Florin	Englewood Cliffs	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jandra	Sutton	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Taylor	Winter Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corinne	Tomlinson	Plainfield	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Kelley	Newport News	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peg	Tams	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Klinger	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clark	Whiting	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawn	Newman	Springfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Chisolm	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Largent	Muncie	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Walraven	Ashburn	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Scott	KENNESAW	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Barsel	Buckingham	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Abby	Mandel	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Congdon	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Doughty	Vienna	Virginia

This merger would create a broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power and would contradict the FCC's own policies.

Michael	Marrero	Powell	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Bendich	Little Falls	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	McIntyre	Easton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Howard	Clark	New London	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James R	O'Brien	Ridgewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Henry	Cole	Rehoboth Beach	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monitta	Lowe	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Neely	London	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Hasselwander	Honeoye Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Saxen	London	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Erlich	Fairfax Station	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eugene	Hernandez	LANCASTER	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Uher	Columbia	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christina	Alvarez-Perry	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norma	Kacen	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Goldhamer	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Williams	Mystic	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Cox	Plymouth	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Hausmann	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amaya	Maura Deniz	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robbi	Chisholm	Wyandotte	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hoehn	Augusta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Lamothe	Edwardsville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Rousseau	Munising	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Fradd	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Straniere	Bonita Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Carnevale	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Brye	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Copper	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Gash	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Sanders	Cheyenne	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pauline	Rotmil	Fort Lee	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

veronica	rodriguez	Odenton	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Bristow	Brentwood	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Davis	Topeka	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Bull	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Aniel	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Sidell	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Starbird	Leeds	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Rose	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hans	Reiser	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Kanazawa	High Point	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Crespo	Cayey	Puerto Rico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Dube	Salem	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Byron	Tucker	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Howarth	Waukegan	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean-Jacques	Chaltiel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raymond	Valinoti, Jr.	New Providence	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Agashan	Ganesharajah	Bellerose	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Farber	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elsy	Shallman	Loxahatchee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Peter	Lotto	Fayetteville	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Here in the Syracuse area, Sinclair already controls the majority of radio and television. This merger would give them total control and leave us with only one source of information. Most tragic is that the information they convey is more propaganda than fact, and is already a danger to our country.

Nancy	Monachino	Marion	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Robbins	Ewing	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Guillermo	Gonzalez	Pembroke Pines	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Skiles	Howard	Winter Harbor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Perry	Heppler	Saint Joseph	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Goldman	Wellington	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lea	Stabinski	Norristown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Geist	Ludington	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Oppenheimer	Norwalk	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Antoinette	De luca	Sunset Beach	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry L	Siegel	Cleveland Heights	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keiji	Asakura	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Goldman	Wellington	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Freedman	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

dan	shapiro	Yorktown Heights	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Mc Gilchrist	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Lambert	Bruceton mills	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Jennings	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elsy	Shallman	Loxahatchee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Natasha	Goldstein	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Epstein	Mount Prospect	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	O'Toole	Scarborough	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Clark	New London	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Neil	Monrovia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Lockwood	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Mariotti	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Don't do it.

John	Rohrbaugh	Shady Side	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralf	Lenigk	Schenectady	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cyndi	Johnson	Broken Arrow	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald S	Brant Jr	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	LaMar	Keeseville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Beth	Woodward	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Truthful and uncensored news is essential to economic efficiency and justice. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would favor profits of one corporation over the benefit to all of having competition among news providers, by creating a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. This merger would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy and economic decision-making.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

David	Hughes	Cape Coral	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Himmer	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Dillard, Jr.	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
terri	kominsky	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	St Germaine	El Paso	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Kohel	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lisa	sablosky	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Alaia	Gilbert	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Soteropoulos	Chatham	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Grace	Sage Musser	Golden	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Chatfield	Blackstone	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nance	Becker	Corte Madera	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilsa	Olson	Westbrook	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noel	Claro	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie B.	Johnson	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Herrema	Venice	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ardeshir	Razmyar	Mooresville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Larson-Kelley	Nyack	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa-May	Reynolds	Beaufort	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Les	DelPizzo	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	St Germaine	El Paso	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janice	Acevedo	Cambria Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Wind	Ferndale	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Eck	Ada	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As Americans, we expect the news to be reported based on facts. Those of us watching local news need to be protected from corporate mandated reporting that presents a subtle bias that affects our ability to form our own opinions on the events of the day. It’s known as propaganda in many of the countries that lack democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Paul	Barsel	Buckingham	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phil	Massengill	Flora	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deb	Antar	NYC	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheldon	Dorph	Belvedere Tiburon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Prichard	Ashland	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Berleth	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Vescio	Cary	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jody	Ashenhurst	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Buckley	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Broderson	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vivian	Debrauwere	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Camila	Ceballos	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Cooper	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Whitten	Waco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Oberle	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Conrad	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivan	Smodlaka	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrian	Bergeron	Halfway	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Patterson	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andy	Doller	Sharpsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan P.	Vessicchio	New Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leon	Hosang	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Mccloskey	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joelleen	Bidwell	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kris	B	Ft Hunter	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edd	Manges	White Castle	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ryan	Freeport	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Hooper	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Anna	Thompson	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tempest	Houghton	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Arnold	Torrington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Fulcher	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Andrade	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J. Dean	Carro	North Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Bryan	Sewanee	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Carey	Chevy Chase	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Wilson	Bryan	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Lake	Marshalltown	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Mills	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Rosenthal	Rego Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandy	Wagstaff	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elspeth	Macdonald	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Bown	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lilliam	Fermin	Joliet	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Lee	Florence	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Corby	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janie	Johnson	Englewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Thomas	Steinbach	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I fully support a Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a honest and refreshing TV broadcasting and news network.

Cassandra	Campa	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Prichard	Birmingham	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	Sparks	Lancaster	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosemary	Szepesi	Bridgeport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

freda	karpf	Neptune	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Calvin	Cotton	Eureka Springs	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Make a decision to BLOCK the merger. Thank you.

Leo	Bistak	Parma	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
WILLIAM	CAMPBELL	LAKE RIDGE	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madalyn	Parker	Coral Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Sanchez	Candler	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet D	Magoon	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wesley	Aldridge	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chrysteen	Moelter-Gray	Grand Haven	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Zachary	Schwartz	Minneapolis	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The FCC has made many poor choices lately and a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trey	Fanney	Columbus	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Nelson	Maplewood	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Belozer	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mike	braman	Mohawk	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Moretti	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Glasscock	Portales	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Estelle	Gold	Penn Valley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Monica	Ortiz	Wellington	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

joyce	shapiro	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sheila	rosenberg	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Weidinger	Plymouth Meeting	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	FitzGerald	Freedom	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Willey	Lewisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Thomas	Cape Girardeau	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Sisson	Spring	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marge	Heggison	Bradford	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dominique	Grant	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Barsel	Buckingham	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Juve	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Cohen	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Freeman	Bradford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Archer	Glen Ellyn	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Smith	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Sloan	Bel Aire	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Siebert	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jenn	Baumgartner	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Loafman	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Iser	Roeland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Blake	Swopes	Moorpark	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Steepy	Penfield	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Topar	Hopatcong	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Rigney	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Dicostanzo	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chad	Boykin	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kaye	Mission	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Penwell	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia L	Chastain	Waleska	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Connie	Cavara	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Tindall	Cleveland	Ohio	A monopoly of this size and power cannot be good for us as a country. There is no need for these two companies to merge.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by
Emily	Brandt	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Winton	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
carolyn	cole	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We need to maintain a more balanced press. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

CAROL	BEAL	Rockwell city	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ricky	Michael	Powder Springs	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	McCanless	Glen Ellyn	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Horwitz	Long Beach	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Kimberlin	Olpe	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Steigerwald	Glenn Dale	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Hansen	Northville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Ford	Franconia	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodger	Ricketts	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Edelstein-Zhang	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aimee	Yankowski	Manchester	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diana	Ryan	Honey Brook	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Cleghorn	Baltimore	Maryland	State TV in America? Who would think we would ever go there? But this merger would take us there, part of a decades-long right wing effort to boost corporate power over Americans, now evident in a corporate-friendly nominee for the Supreme Court. Near monopolies over media like this would have our founders up in arms. This is not free speech. This is a bold attempt to establish right-wing corporate control over the media. It should not be allowed, whether for ring-wing or left-wing political views to have this kind of power to influence Americans.
Graham	Greer	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free
				Please block the Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would be too large and i

Rosemary	Topar	Hopatcong	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Harvey	Lincolnville	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Gorman	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Cox	Leonardtown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Engeldt	Wyoming	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Guleke, Jr.	Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cara	Mitchell	Port Isabel	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Felicia	Crosby	Northfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

shannon	milhaupt	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Nye	Jamesville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Rhea	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Powell	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Kelly	Westfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Olcese	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robbie	White	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Gascoigne	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Sides	Healdsburg	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjorie	Miller	Toledo	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paola	Gonzalez	Valrico	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
E.	Williams	Hamilton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Capt Robert	Beauregard	Columbia	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Lawson	Liverpool	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Blau	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Amos	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Lichtenstein	North Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Ryan	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Sevilla	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Garrett	Maineville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	De Haan	Sun Valley, CA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Johnson	Shelburne	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Spanos	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggi	Parkhill	Schertz	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Inger	Barron	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Glennon	Trenton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

beth	katner	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roy	Campbell	Champaign	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Bowman	Morton Grove	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Pettke	Niles	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Dunn	Newfields	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Schneider	Somersetr	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Senecal	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louis	Sabin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Norris	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cindy	Hansen	Cumberland	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Warren	Hurley	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cat	Cohen	Rochester	New York

I am extremely concerned about a possible Sinclair-Tribune merger. It is crucial for the integrity of a truly free press--and thereby our democracy--that a TV broadcasting conglomerate of such size and power NOT be allowed to be created. This is especially important since Sinclair's broadcasts have clearly contained political bias. If allowed to expand to this extent, other views would be suppressed and undermined, going against the value expressed by the Supreme Court in 1969 (Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC).

Please protect our democracy and block this merger!

Mary	Fischer	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	McDonald	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Brodsky	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Juliet	Kapsis	Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecelia	Youmans	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dave	Horsman	Huntersville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Bissell	Kansas City	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Krokowski	West Memphis	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L.	Bagley	Albuquerque	New Mexico	Monopolies in media destroy diversity, creativity, freedom of speech while erasing democracy as a whole! Stop this merger and uphold diverse journalistic integrity! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Hendler	Eastport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marietta	Smith	Salisbury	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cindy	Kodish	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Brand	Orland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Eudy	East Point	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Borden Mercer	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

linda	Draper	Cumberland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Ensor	Annapolis	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Woodall	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Campbell	The Villages	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jenna	Barnaby	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Albert	Woodstock	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maria	Manriquez	Bluffdale	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Mackey	Chesterfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
A.	S.	Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kat	Wexford	Newport News	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ruggles	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Shadduck	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mickael	Gramont	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Roesel	Roeland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Devine	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Reynolds	Bangor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Korner	Logan	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Brownlee	Narberth	Pennsylvania	Permitting this merger is a dangerous decision. A more controlled media lends itself too handily to authoritarianism. You could be the unknown heroesof democracy if you were to stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger. Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
James. Yvonne	Tittle	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Yerton	Clermont	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angus	Dawson	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathy	charette	Wallingford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Lion	Stamford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Avery	Sackets Harbor	New York

Dear FCC,

I am a member of the ACLU. I recently received a communication alerting me to a possible Sinclair-Tribune merger. The ACLU had this to say: "The Sinclair Broadcasting Group forced its local TV stations to air segments blaming liberals for exaggerating the family separation crisis." I don't think this is right at all. I support fair reporting, open dialogue, and education. I don't think media companies should be telling their employees what to say to viewers who may have no awareness that they are not hearing reporting but the personal views of the media company owners.

Joe	Muscara	Houston	Texas

I support the following statement from the ACLU: A Sinclair-

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Friedman	South Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia C.	Gunn	Athens	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Greene	South Windsor	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Vile	Northbrook	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Orin	Hargraves	Niwot	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leigh	Bright	Durango	Colorado

Now more than ever, this country needs a diverse media landscape to counter the loss of press freedoms.

Please block the Sinclair-Tribune merger for the sake of my children.

william	steltenkamp	winter park	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tamara	Miles	Usa	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

beth	murphy	St. Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terri	LaPenta-duffek	Newington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

wendy	wark	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jay	Worsham	Lake Worth	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Bradshaw	Saint James	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Nini	Indian Land	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	W	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Will	Lambek	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Norton	Yarmouth	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Oliver	Wason	Sunnyside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Baluyut	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail	Albert	Woodstock	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Knodel	Pearland	Texas	I have a friend who works for Sinclair broadcasting - and he is apalled by the restrictions placed on their news team. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tammy	Kicak	Rome	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Massa	Horsham	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Ryttie	Burnsville	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Riley	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Shoemaker	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharyn	Kerrigan	Rensselaer	New York	Stop this merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
stephanie	scherr	Freeport	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Stahl	ASTORIA	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Kelly	Dalton	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Brozinsky	Hamden	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eduardo	Schroder	Mayagnez	Puerto Rico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pauline	Goodman	Savannah	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
audrey	gurtman	port washington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Gallo	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robby	Westenkirchner	Zionsville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Soule	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Beck	Bondville	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

beth	murphy	St. Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Brace	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Lujan	Oreland	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gertrude	Reeves	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Bliemeister	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jane	Schott	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamara	Leuty	Rehoboth Beach	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Cross	Papillion	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Britton	Cheltenham	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Farber	Willowbrook	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Clayton	Vienna	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	Waters	Guilford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Harvey	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Jump	Ukiah	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	M	Minnneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Caci	Melvin Village	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Knuttila	Bloomington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristin	Siemon	Concord	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Lusto	Waynesville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Wettersten	Oberlin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Perkins	Auburn	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Barkin	Macon	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Moiles	Saginaw	Michigan
Kiara	Sanchez-Mora	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger is not in the best interests of free thought

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghan	Woods	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Chepeska	Howell	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hunter	Haney	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Wishcamper	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Goodson	Waynesboro	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Greene	Fairfax	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reena	G	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Pote	Auburn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Vile	Northbrook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Silver	Saxtons River	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaclyn	Tierney	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Adam	Stamm	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Boyd	Alcalde	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Feeney	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Alagammai	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brad	Roth	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Newbury	lexington	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Trimble	Modesto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Lynn	Springfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am seeing the effects of Sinclair in my area-horrible! This needs to stop NOW.
Nancy	Loeb	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Goodson	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lester	Silberman	West Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Shearer	Columbia City	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Wirch	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Kisor	Gahanna	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evan	Sils	Croton On Hudson	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryan	Hermsen	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James A	Stewart	Downingtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caryn	Davis	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Bloom	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jose	Greco	Danbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carey	Dowling	Oxford	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tanjeena	rahman	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

michael	leary	chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Handler	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	Hamilton	Pittsburg	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Pijor	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Price	Mc Kenzie	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Stamilio	The Woodlands	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Hopkins	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Hendler	Eastport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Fetter	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chilton	Gregory	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Kirkeby	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rin	Turner	Ellenwood	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Johnson	Plainfield	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonardo	Legorreta	Neponset	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and monopolistic power in this country giving a fringe far-right fascistic group economic and political control over our media. It would lead not only less competition, less innovation, less selection, and higher prices. It would also lead mass disinformation, racism, incitement to violence, and hate crimes against people of color, including those of Indian ancestry like corrupt FCC Administrator Ajit Pai. Aajit Pai is a moron motivated by his family tradition of corruption back in India, and thinks he can recreate the shit-haven from this ancestral land here in his new home; but the moron fails to realize he is giving fodder to the very fire that will fry his black ass and
Melissa	Farr	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Pomerleau	Gibsonia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andy	Chen	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackie	Jones	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Yanish	Katonah	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Archie	Symonds	Old Bridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
kathleen	makoid	Norristown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Wang	Montclair	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Smith	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Lopez	Rutland	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eva	Phelps	Evart	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gina	Rizzo	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Langs	Plymouth	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Haile	Hampton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Mendoza	Laredo	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Merin	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Winters	Marcus Hook	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Wilkerson	Herndon	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pennie	Azran	Manhasset	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlin	Wenger	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Large	Royal Oak	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Evron	Cedarhurst	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Crombie	Lanesville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Derek	West	Mentor On The Lake	Ohio	I believe you should reject the Sinclair-Tribune merger. This gives one company too much control over free speech. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
David	Phillips	Budd Lake	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Rosenzweig	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sylvia	Aruffo	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Montgomery	Key West	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Riskin	Lawrenceville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

E	James	Griffin	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mako	Haruta	Simsbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Vitale	West HARTFORD	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Ryan	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Brooks	Newark	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ted	Bealmear	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Mathews	Belvedere Tiburon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Bayne	Mount Carmel	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Loken	Falling Waters	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Knieriemen	Summerfield	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Raper	Marshall	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sanford	Hirsch	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Causey	Titusville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Weiner	Ellington	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ryan	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Maher	Rockville Centre	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne S	Martocci	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Andrew	Sprung	South Orange	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Until recently, laws, regulations and regulatory norms protected our country from undue media concentration, which is a danger to democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies.That is particularly dangerous since Sinclair is a propaganda network that forces fake news commentary on its affiliate stations. Allowing this merger will constitute a giant step toward creation of a state propaganda network that will undermine U.S. democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Mary	Hawkins	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rhonna Leigh	MacKnight	Washington	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Segalowitz	East Setauket	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. Curtiss	Durand	Port Jefferson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Null	San Jose	California	I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
louis douglas	hines	New Windsor	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Scholl	Neptune	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Brooks	La Salle	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Spitz	Zionsville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trina	Short	Pleasant Hill	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William M	Taht	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Meyer	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Cachopo	Santa Clara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Mitchell	Woodstock	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Ferguson	Arkadelphia	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Worth	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norbert	Weissberg	East Hampton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsey	Collins	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Miller	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cedo	Banjanin	Trenton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Sweitzer	Franklin	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Sullivan	Brattleboro	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayme	Olitzky	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Johnson	Lake Ann	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ballard	Boyd	Sunnyside	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Walker	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Rieger	Westerly	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Didi	BAILEY	Edgewater	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Diamond	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Casella	New Rochelle	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Buckles	Angier	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jane	Palmer	Kirkwood	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Floyd	Demmon	Michigan City	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Miller	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Korst	Plainfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Nardi	Alpena	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynette	Cvikota	Hinsdale	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Cubbage	Paw Paw	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne-Maria	Makhulu	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Brown	Boiling Springs	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Thompson Jr	Knox	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Roy	Rockwood	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Halio	Newark	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Juan	Canet	Hopewell	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Maple	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alicia	Berg	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	George	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
scott	dance	Utica	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Smith	Flippin	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
David	Baker	Clearwater	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Approving this merger would be suicide for our democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Rice	Gladstone	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Lawrence	Whitmore Lake	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Roman	Hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helena	Shaskevich	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Geno	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rona	Malakoff	Ivoryton	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Lyons	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Helen	Venos	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Bawden	Taylorsville	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Anand	Flora	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Barrett	Brevard	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Joffe	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Wood	Milford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maryann	Kaminsky	Glen Allen	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Black	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Wayne	LA QUINTA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Chilton-Belloni	Mineral	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Fechner	Wayne	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alicia	Booker	Fairfield Township	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Dyer	Denton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Crafton	Burke	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Birn	Delmar	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

STACY	OSBORNE	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Holley	Lange	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colin	Mennett	North Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Corning	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Sgrignuoli	Reading	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
pam	king	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Durrett	Glenwood Springs	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Beller	Waxhaw	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Topus	Marriottsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Dohmen	Bar Harbor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Cubbage	Paw Paw	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Zell	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Hollenbach	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Walker	Dummerston	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Routh	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Rooney	Coventry	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Pastor	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Lewis	Poughkeepsie	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. America deserves better than becoming Russia.

Alice	Stehle	Butler	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James Kent	Williams	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Kenzig	Elyria	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Peacock	Lynn Haven	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Krueger	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Morgan	Cormia	Cliffside Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Kaplan	Wyomissing	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo Anna	Hebberger	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Sexsmith	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Blake	Puhak	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenna	Eaves	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Gardner	Missouri City	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Rodriguez	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Rissenberg	Bovina Center	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Johnson	Shawano	Wisconsin

I am extremely bothered by this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Straubinger	Centreville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Borg	Lexington	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Beers	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gillie	Mc Intosh	Fort Washington	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meg	Gag	Cascade	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heide	Coppotelli	Cedar Mtn	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lou	Priem	Cooperstown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M. D.	DOMINICK	Stillwater	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Fowler	Kingston	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Horenstein	Ventnor City	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandi	Katz	Aromas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Bjorum	Intl Falls	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Silvia	Munger	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Beck	El Cajon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Maroney	Evansville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Parisi	Kingston	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Laefer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivan	Cavieses	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It’s imperative.
Buddy	Turner	Barnum	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Mangold	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Kutzik	Phila	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Weil	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Kale	Green Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Koepsell	Troy	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
arthur	oleary	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Young	Kettering	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Lieberman	Lansdale	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Houlihan	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Les	Parmelee	Jacksonville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Polite	Libertyville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Vitlar	Wexford	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Adducci	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Craig	Risinger	Montclair	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Deny the Sinclair-Tribune merger. TV stations need freedom to express different viewpoints without onerous control.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Greg	Reynolds	Pelham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Esposito	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Barbee	Klamath Falls	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Vaughn	Rainier	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Colburn	Orono	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Behr	Conway	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melyssa	Haack	Parkville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanette	Horn	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KATE	RICHMAN	East Brunswick	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Napoleon	Yardley	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Rice-Jones	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elisabeth	Bell	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Silvers	Carrboro	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Shapiro	Naples	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Westlake	Brookfield	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Rundell	Scarborough	Maine

I am very concerned about this proposed merger and its potential in

Valerie	Graham	Charlotte	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Ginsberg	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Murtagh	Keller	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
david	white	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Weil	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Farrior	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Clendening	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Greta	Gustafson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S	Vazzano	Crystal lake	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Berman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roxanne	Summers	Lexington Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jack	Vitlar	Wexford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	DeNapoli	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Ehrlich	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Galloway	Fleming Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Garrett	Carrollton	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Hlodnicki	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger creates something new and dangerous. The size and political clout of this merger masquerading as "news" is a threat to idea of public media as a marketplace of ideas. The Sinclair-Tribune TV broadcasting conglomerate would be unprecedented in size and power in this country. As such it contradicts the FCC's own policies. Its singular political perspective and immense size will drown out all other voices. Our free speech and the diversity of views in the press is necessary for a healthy democracy.
Tim	Peierls	Manhasset	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts focus on a consistent, unwavering political bias. The Sinclair merger discourages and undermines a diversity of viewpoints. But a diversity of viewpoints is a value upheld by
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Bruckner	Edgewater	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Wetzel	Quakertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Creese	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barry	Wolff	Avondale	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mian	Kabir	Cypress	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Madzik	Bethel	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KayLee	Taylor	Clearfield	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wajida	Quintero	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	McKinley	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	Farren	Shelburne	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Madden	Croton on Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Rodriguez Garcia	Hinesville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Hrabar	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Myron	Johnson	Wahoo	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aislyn	Keyes	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Indictor	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mathilde	Pignol	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Cone	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jorge	Linero	Rye	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Evans	Shakopee	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbi	Melaragno	Mentor	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Engel	Fort Lauderdale	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Haley	Roanoke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Koesters	Plantation	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ariel	Mora	Laurel	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

marsha	brook	Granger	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caleb	Geiser	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen	Graff	Spirit Lake	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Salgado	Manteo	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Farnsworth	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Myalil	Arlington Hts	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Constance	Bevitt	silver spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Luthin	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Reed	Riverton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Morris	Woodside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becky	Gardner	Albany	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Hamrick	Stephenville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Kurz	Monroe	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Kunkle	Winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Norris	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Kelly	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Signorile	Tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Florence	Hajas	Latrobe	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Dlugos	Maywood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Felicity	Howlett	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Buchanan	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Hinkle	Forest	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edwin	Rosenberg	Califon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cesar	Calle	Weston	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jay	Saylor	Myerstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Cannon	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Davis	Woodstock	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marylin	House	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martin	Cohen	Ridgewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Fisher	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Peek	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sierra	Hillebrand	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Helford	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	McCart	Irvine	California	No one should own controlling interest in 200 TV stations throughout the country. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Seidman	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Steponaitis	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Meghan	Duffy	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I do not support the ST merger and it should not be passed.

Maria	Monras-Sendet	Glenside	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Casee	Maxfield	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	McCarthy	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tova	Weitzman	New Paltz	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Roysdon	Jamestown	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margot	Rosenbaum	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Spanos	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Davis	Whittier	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecilia	Garza	Laredo	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Ioffreda	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and BLOCK THIS MERGER.

Martha	Henry	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Yanus	White Haven	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Ross	Leesburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bettina	Mayer	Croton On Hudson	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyle	Bracken	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisa	Helford	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Smith	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tess	Fraad-Wolff	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Hanebutt	Red Bud	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matias	Concha	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Petro	Killingworth	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bernie	Zelazny	Alpine	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

judith	staples	Wakefield	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Lomaka	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ditta	Hoeber	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Levine	Astoria	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

susan	gunther	Ashburn	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harry	Bannister	Frankfort	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johanna	Bogater	Munising	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Stephen	Stoker	San Antonio	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do not let this happen. If you still believe in democracy you cannot let this happen. So many hundreds of thousands of Americans recognize the danger. And you must, too. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

george	furman	Waterford	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Zaback	Hightstown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maren	Kostrzewski	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becky	Strain	Boerne	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Whewell	Charlestown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Greenblatt	Plainview	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Healy	Athens	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Duey	East Haddam	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

B	Good	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marla	Horwitz	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Kramer	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Kilburn	North Berwick	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Al	Roeder	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Scurria	Vicksburg	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Bartelheim	Denton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Riddell	Detroit	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Bland	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Taub	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Steinholz	montrose	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terri	Romberg	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Bell	Beltsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Gajan	youngsville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Bogle	Williamsport	Pennsylvania	Our country thrives on a multitude of diverse opinions and ideas. Putting a large number of media outlets under the control of an ideologically orientated group will create a monoculture of thought. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Bernadette	P	Montclair	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Steinhart	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carole	Wayne	LA QUINTA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Knapp	Marietta	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Toomey	Lyons	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kuhn	Westfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karyn	Langen	Bakersfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Glasgow	Asheville, NC	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Diamond	New Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Mikkola	Bethany	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Spaven	Albuquerque	New Mexico

Please do not allow the Sinclair-Tribune merger to go through. This

Barbara	Campbell	Vidor	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Woytisek	Saint Helena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Broderick	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arielle	Farkas	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Tunon	Gaithersburg	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimberly	Williams	Lake Hiawatha	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Hirsch	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Spradlin	Jacksonville	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kayla	Klahsen	Ankeny	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Thompson	Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Bennett	Waverly	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally	Weiss	Waynesville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Olson	Sausalito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Artuso	Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Scholten	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Matrunich	Devon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Rodriguez	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Shulman	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Vericker	Spring Valley	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrés Leopoldo	Pacheco Sanfuentes	keller	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Presley	Sedan	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianne	Mitosinka	Piedmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darlene	Champaine	SANTA MARIA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marla	Jackson	Swannanoa	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Allardyce	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Seely	Riverview	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Byron	Dale	Rockford	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Laws	Chesapeake	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sarah	mccloskey	Lock haven	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Alford	Blythe	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brenda	Barbour	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karsten	Braaten	Sauk Rapids	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

emily	kaplan	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Hoffenberg	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Forsyth	Redwood	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candace	Rifkin	Fairport	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Robinson	Clinton	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Roach	UPPER CHICHESTER	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Julian	Avon	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan J	Dieken	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robn	Diekow	Glenville	New York	All news programs should be locally produced while able to include AP segments or similar on a voluntary basis. Absolutely no information from outside the locality should be forced by any power (be it a media owner or a government agency) to be disseminated. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Eleanor	Frey	Cortlandt Manor	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryan	Wishik	Cliffside Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Carpentieri	Mahopac	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristina	Rose	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eiji	Miki	Salem	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Busse	Valparaiso	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Bourlotos	Morris Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Rak	Schererville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sherilyn	Huffman	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Prahl	Normal	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	B	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Doherty	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don and Leslie	Bush	Cherryfield	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Schuman	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hayward	Bronxville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Truxillo	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Weaver	Highland	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

julie	sherrard	Maquoketa	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Farkas	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Wootan	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margie	Rutledge	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Bures	Winona	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Carroll	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Lesaca	East Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
G	Mcgill	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Lawrence	Green Cove Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Talmage	Freehold	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josephine	Kuntz	Kingsland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Harper	Hyattsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karsten	Braaten	Sauk Rapids	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emmy	Le Bigre	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patti	Ponka	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Tipper	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Kaish	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Fitzpatrick	Katy	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented and unwarranted size and power, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Their history indicates that they would inject political bias into their broadcasts, stifling free speech and the objectivity of the press that's essential for a democracy.

Sinclair's political bias would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. This merger is completely unacceptable, and it is the FCC's duty to block it.

Judith	Heggestad	Warrington	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Miller	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This merger would be in direct conflict with the 1st Amendment guarantees that protect the role of the press as an important part of our governmental system.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Asim	Aziz	Ashburn	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Mattson	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Ross	Richmond Hill	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
James David	Childers	Lawrence	Kansas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The American people spent unimaginable amounts of money to break up the Bell monopoly in the 1980's. Why are we allowing new megalithic corporations to form? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Susan	Straub	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjorie	Powell	Maumee	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Clements	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathaniel	Hansen	Long Island City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Piatkowski	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Manning	Pleasant Hill	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Stewart	Shawnee	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Pritchard	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Cormia	Cliffside Park	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Guericke C	Royal	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Anderson	Pharr	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghan	Harrass	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Testa	Saline	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Loftin	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Stephensen	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miriam	Bissu	Orient	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debby	Kern	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clarissa	Kotzian	Grand Blanc	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Bryson	Sunrise	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Hoose	Dexter	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Savage	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Polk	Jacksonville	Florida	I believe that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this is already undermining viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Troyanovich	Florence	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Rogers	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Day	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Wilson	Seymour	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Dismas	Westbury	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva	Marks	Schenectady	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Thrasher	Pahoa	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Slan	Rehoboth Bch	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Kinberg	Alpharetta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Murphy	Honolulu	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Shah	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Ittner	Downers Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Rosenthal	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Scott	Castres	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Ufford	Hanover	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lora	Farber	ontario	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Linsey	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erik	Peterson	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Johnson	Takoma Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lorenzo	Tunesi	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Sheehan	Brielle	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	McFarland	Wilton Manors	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Orci	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Barnes	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Oberkrom	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cortney	Skinner	Waynesboro	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Foster	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Perelli	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Clark	Newberry	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Miller	Rockingham	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Parilla	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Cring	Kingston	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brittany	Johnson	Mounds	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Scull	Chardon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Miller	Delray Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Leider	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Whalen	Bonita Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Paris	Manchester	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Dubey	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Meszaros	Oreland	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Reifsnider	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Cragin	Palmer	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Butt	Pittsboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Rabin	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Suppo	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Dellera	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Duffy	Hazel Park	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beatrice	Kahn	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shan	Willson	NYC	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sadie	Minkoff	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Pauling	Roanoke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Klamon	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Shedd	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DAVID	Allen	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gilda	Felt	Kentwood	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Bentley	Conroe	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Edwards	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Ng	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Olivia	Cooke	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pearl	Roca	Miller Place	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Adam	Sopko	South Bend	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Nielsen	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Humphrey	Little Rock	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Lavy	Harrisonburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Lopes	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Pearson	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Miser	Saint johns	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lumina	Greenway	Wakefield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JoAnne	Metzler	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Collison	Tujunga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Nachlas Cohen	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Esposito	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Ozowski	Plano	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Buell	Norwich	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Bloch	Forest Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Cirillo	Hartsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Balasubramanian	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Smith	Waddington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The protection of free speech is essential in this time where there are already few journalists who ferret out and expose fake news (and counter the Fake News rhetoric from the White House). Unleashed journalism is crucial at this point in our democracy.
helen	lazar	hunting valley.	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Traci	Adams	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sherrill	Gary	Fayetteville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	McFarland	Fort Lauderdale	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Snow	Shreveport	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Lasry	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erik	Stanger	Centennial	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Russell	Long Valley	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Brown	Ravenna	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ray	Pippitt	Coconut Creek	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Denion	Bloomfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Taylor	Tyler	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Easter	Princeton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Tawney	Noblesville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tiffany	Rice	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Barber	Jackson	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johanna	Humbert	Galien	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Kalush	Lake Orion	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Cone	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Stoner	Morgan Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MS. Christine	Sell	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Dean	Austin	Texas	This merger would be anti-American.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
lynda	meador	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ruffin	Columbia, SC	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Itai	Maytal	New Milford	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sinclair Broadcast Group and Tribune should never be allowed to merge. If this deal goes through, a single company would own more than 200 local-TV stations reaching more than 70 percent of the country. That's far beyond the legal limits on media ownership and far too much power in the hands of a single company. Sinclair has evaded FCC rules, received FCC fines for airing propaganda, and drawn wide criticism for airing politically slanted content on its stations. The FCC should block this merger and restore policies that encourage a diversity of local media owners and a wide range of viewpoints.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and

Edward	Hamlin	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Robrahn	Palm Coast	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erika	Andersen	West Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phlyssa	Koshland	Ashburn	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Wisniewski	Anaheim	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
fran	hoffman	Lewisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Litherland	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Greenberg	Lewisville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Minicucci	Lake Ann	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mandy	Pino	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Olsen	Haddam Neck	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Jackson	Niles	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ifeanyi	Igwulu	Rosedale	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Hensman	Delray Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Amundson	Detroit Lakes	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita	Yavich	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Grant	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angie	Yates	Layton	Utah

Thank you for your time. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Sawyer	Canon City	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Jyring	Bismarck	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Webb	Lompoc	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Myers	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Laurencell	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Herbert	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A B	Neiman	Newtown	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chloe	Griffis	Annapolis	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Throop	Caledonia	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Hunt	Normal	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Perry	Dorrell	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Lemoine	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Phillips	Troy	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	Schlosser	McKean	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Levine	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mary	murphy	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kira	Smith	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roderick	Robertson	High Point	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barb	Glasson	Milford	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Wells	Vickery	Annapolis	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Cheng	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fielding	Wilson	Clayton	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

	911	Johnson	Hendersonville	North Carolina
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leah		Abbott	New London	Connecticut
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Howell	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gwen	DiPietro	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Freibott	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	McDougal	Barhamsville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Roy	Milford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kate	Longmaid	Shelburne	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Van Duinen	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sam	Hargis	TOPEKA	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Herrera	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	I	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Riga	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Singer	Skokie	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	McCloskey	Stratford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Meltzer	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

H. Scott	Laird	Wayne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Pearce	Jackson Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Weiner	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Han	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reed	Black	Andes	New York	Media consolidation of this type is anti-competitive and unacceptable. We've had enough consolidation already and the consequences for the public have been dire. Another merger of this type is not in America's interest.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Michelin	Cahill	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernardo	Del Giglio	Key West	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Andrew	Dixon	North Canton	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is one of several things that does not benefit the public at all. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Seltzer	Rancho Mirage	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
BARBARA	HARRIS	Des Plaines	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Bianconi	Lisbon Falls	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Hegg	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Deichmann	Mystic	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Gerber	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	White	Fremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Macina	Sandusky	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drew	Sykes	Knickerbocker	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arturo	Rodriguez	Weeki Wachee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meleah	Cue	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Chollar	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

suzanne	schenkel	Southern Pines	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Tedesco	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Thomas	Las Cruces	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Wagner	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Rinzel	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Becker	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Mongeau	Spring Lake Park	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Abbott	New Paltz	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Bricker	Parsonsburg	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Long	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Gau	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Virzi	Churchville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darla	Wilshire	Altoona	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Cammarata	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebekah	Zeiba	Derry	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Bird	S. Royalton	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Ferrante	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicolette	Pavlovics	Norfolk	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Ehrstine	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Are you with the Evil Empire or us, the voters?
John	Voehringer	Jamestown	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Jon	Ryk	Ely	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Gozali	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Parsley	Newark	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruby	Muhammad	Corona	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Goering	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jimmy	Casas	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Glahn	Urbana	Illinois	I am not a robot. I am very concerned about Sinclair and sincere in the comments herein. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Ingraham	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tess	Thackara	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Ryan	Bluffton	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

joanna	bentley	The woodlands	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Zutty	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Looney	Columbia	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Fairbanks	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike		TRUE	Auburn	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Brown		Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Ryder	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Stallard	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

paula	stewart	brandon	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Mammel	Albert Lea	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kay	frano	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Franklin	Tuchols	Bridgeport	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Kauffman	Hainesport	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Cochran	Bramwell	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathy	truders	Camden Point	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Salkowe	Saint George	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Jacobs	Citra	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Witkus	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Segelstein	Manalapan	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Schnapp	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Egon	Frech	Lexington Park	Maryland
dinorah	pezzotti	New Rochelle	New York

Please block this merger and prevent Sinclair from buying more stat

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jeri	wise	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Werner Paul	Zorn	Royal Oak	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Avery	Owego	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Carter	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeline	Balk	Quitman	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. THE US IS WORKING IT'S WAY TO ONE NEWS MEDIA LIKE TASS (THE RUSSIAN NEWS AGENCY)!!!!!!!!!!
Alan	Citron	Manchester Center	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Werner	Waitsfield	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Cobbs	Jackson	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackelyn	Frost	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Countryman	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Gustafson	Davison	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Rettberg	Vestal	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Ghio	Columbia	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Pierce	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stewart	Gleischman	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally Jane	Wilson	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Fish	f	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	McCormick	Searsmont	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Mandel	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Haley	Akron	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Grodsky	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Teevan	Red Bank	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Landry	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Corell	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Bluestone	Bronx, NY 10463	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jody	Hesler	Charlottesville	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A free & independent press is a bedrock of democracy!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Jacofsky	Cedarhurst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Leer	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	S	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Reuben	Matthews	Apopka	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen C	Cataford	Rye	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Conrad	Ambridge	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Ellis	West Palm Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	P	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chuck	Oatman	Drumore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lacy	Thompson Jr	LITHONIA	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan and Erik	Linck	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alana	Gazetski	Drexel Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Mahaney	Midlothian	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally Jane	Wilson	Providence	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

william	white	Carrington	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tammy	Lai	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Pittman	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania	In an already heavily centralized landscape, a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jack	Bernard	Peachtree City	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shyla	Jones	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Selma	Melkich	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Barnes	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Nicolo	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lowell	Yukna	Lutherville-Timoniur	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Kracht	Slaterville Springs	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicola	Nicolai	Chester Springs	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Archie	McDaniel	Virginia Bch	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gholson	Eastport	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Horne	Boynton Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenni	Kovich	Leon	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Oscar	Benitz	Springfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

hillary	goldstein	Sugar Land	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rene	Damen	Casco	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Weil-Martin	Prescott Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marty	Mason	Highland Heights	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Swara	Paranjape	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Rattman	Stroudsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Kirschenmann	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Andrews	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Ross	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Mead	Bethel	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Husman	Burke	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	White	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Robb	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nyssa	Bellido	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Blundall	Fort Wayne	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Sutton	Northbrook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Sawada	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Beck	Greenwood	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Lawrence	Jamestown	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jordan	Schreier	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Gilbert	Lyons	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Watkins	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Kachur	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Kuechle	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Black	Moose	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Moriarty	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Kingsley	Milford	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Yandrich	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Lindner	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Lohr	Hamden	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tisa	Anders	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Thank you for considering this vital request.
Janine	Lieberman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Webber	Palm City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally Jane	Wilson	Providence	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Blackman	Darien	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Douglas	Roeder	WILLIAMSBURG	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Webb	Greenbelt	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Helfer	Springfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lise	Saffran	Columbia	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Samuelson	White River Junction	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Blaber	Southport	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Myron	Brown	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Petrat	Brighton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Werner	Galena	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Dorfman	Potomac	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mukhtar	Satar	Haines City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Kuhn	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Peters	Waterloo	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Bottom	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Aaronson	Armonk	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Gilbert	Lyons	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dror	Schneider	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esta	Epstein	West palm beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rebecca	brosan	New Hope	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilin	Riedler	Forest Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Morningstar	Renick	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Willard	Manhasset	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Doyle	Doylestown	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Stuhlmacher	Wheaton	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sylvia	Ghioto	Jacksonville	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. You have GOT to stop allowing these monopolies and start enforcing anti-trist laws to the nth degree! Are there no souls left in Washington!? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Boccia	Bay Shore	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Lipson	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Jerkins	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Baudry	St Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger!!!

Josephine	Bridges	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Loretta	Jacobs	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Kennedy	Milford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Fields	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merle	Dockendorff	Fairfield	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Watrous	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Balaban	Hastings On Hudson	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
melanie	Rauch	Kendall Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Borgeson	Crosslake	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miriam Komaromy	Julie Rosen	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Shumsker	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Edwards	Whitney Point	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antaya	Sims	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jayma	Koval	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Mazzotti	Cantrall	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Vencill	Round Rock	Texas

What is just is just. What must be done must be done. What is just ı

Dmitra	Tardy	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy-Ann	Wadley	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Schrauer	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Rincon	Kennesaw	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Romagnoli	Nyc	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
julie	shames-rogan	boynton beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Artin	Sparkill	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Sarosik	Douglas	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Crafts	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Vision	Ardmore	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerry	Price	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angel	Wisenburg	Hartville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Max	Serota	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krista	Mills	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Leff	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
peter	engebretson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristie	Ferriell	Melbourne Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JB	Goss	Sharon Springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Hahn	New York City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Vande	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

B.N.	Bomze	NY	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Bender	Kissimmee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kari	Smith	Dummerston	Vermont	Our democracy is being threatened on numerous fronts at this time, and at the top of the list are the ways freedom of speech is being threatened and a diverse and trustworthy media is under attack. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marsha	De Broske	Casselberry	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Dopp	South Haven	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristen	Williams	Winter Garden	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Osterritter	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Duncan	Cardillo	Royal Oak	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Wider	Pleasant Ridge	Michigan	I write to urge you not to allow A Sinclair-Tribune merger because that would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This merger would threaten free speech and the diversity of views in the press and without those democracy is undermined in a serious way. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Merryl	Newler	Monroe	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Gruttemeyer	Contoocook	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Trudy	Racine	Ozawkie	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Stolte	Glendora	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in America. It would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Scripted news has NO PLACE in a free press! This must not be allowed to move forward!
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lloyd	Lund	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Lawrence	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Guasti	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Swanson	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Sammis	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zachary	May	Woodside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pornkamol	Huang	Chicago	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eve	Herman	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Mullineaux	Washington	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	McPherson	Raymond	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wigfield	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Neville	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Beauman	Clarkston	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	S	Abiquiu	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Miles	Cleveland	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristen	Hestir	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Phillips	Lawton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J Tomas	Henriques	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Collins	Rockport	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bridget	Morgan	Maryville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Strahl	Allentown	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Kolifrath	Londonderry	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kay	Chandler	La Jolla	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. They have repeatedly forced newly acquired stations to air misleading, untrue, and blatantly partisan stories with the intent of blanketing the airwaves with “fake news.” The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JOE	PERAINO	Golden	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
sandra	hoffman	Arlington Heights	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Howell	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Barbara	Lewis	Athens	Georgia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Now more than ever we need a diverse press. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenn	Horvath	Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary Louise	Beardsley	Eden Prairie	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerri	Giardino	Conifer	Colorado	I ask you to not allow A Sinclair-Tribune merger as it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies of supporting democracy. Such a merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy and good education.
Debra	Stoleroff	Plainfield	Vermont	Consistently Sinclair's broadcasts portray unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Simmons	Takoma Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cody	Jones	Marion	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Newmark	Schenectady	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. helen	simmons	Frankford	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Myers	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Isabel	Tirath	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Veit-Carter	MINNEAPOLIS	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Simpson	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Messing	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carmen	Scaglione	Saint Clair Shores	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	Clark	Greenville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	DeRosha	Elk Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Matthiesen	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Elizabeth	Burdick-Romero	Newark	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kayla	Groseclose	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dave	Lindblom	Mount Pleasant	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

judy	brill	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Dyer	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Thompson	South Daytona	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Haley	Phoenix	Arizona

Please stop the merger of Sinclair and Tribune. This would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Miller	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Ogle	Logan	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Sprott	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Ragheb	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Appleton	Dayton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruby	Wilson	Mahwah	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Musburger	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Swanson	New Smyrna Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Brady	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brigid M	O'Connor	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Brophy	Hemlock	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Wilcox	Geneva	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Anderson	Asbury	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlene	Maker	Little Compton	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlin	Freeman	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ginger	Comstock	Arcade	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Mullen	Pratts	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brady	Booton	Key Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stuart	Sheldon	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonia	Callas	Crystal lake	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Van Roekel	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ed	Watrobka	Highland	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Johnson	Winterville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrie	Saniat	Greenacres	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yolanda	Mitts	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Holly	Porter	Dunellen	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Berenstain	Kaneohe	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Shamrock	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Herzberg	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernest	Kent	Boyds	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hipolito	Arriaga	Hollywood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracey	Gale	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Travis-Moore	Bel Tiburon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Merle	Wexler	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Folit	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edwin	Wong	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Wadleigh	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Jones	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Shaw	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Wrenn	Travelers Rest	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adele	Hutchinson	Camarillo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Stagnitta	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Parkinson	Chelsea	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Parvez	Hazarika	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caitlin	Evans	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Ipsen	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ciara	Eddings	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Shallenberger	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Kendall	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Rosenberg	Westbury	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Roberts	Alpine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
connie	beck	El Cajon	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We are close to becoming a dictatorship and we are already an oligarchy. This merger is a BAD idea! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Frank	Antalek	Flushing	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemarie	Ruhl	Crestwood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Wickboldt	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Saccuccimorano	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Ross	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chloe	Cordasco	West Caldwell	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

m	Tierney	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rodney	Novak	Bernardsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ann	rose	atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tristan	Valliant	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Mintz	Mahopac Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peg	Tassey	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Cloonan	Galveston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Medley	Freehold	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth and Agnes	Kostbar	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Walters	Fountain Hills	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Cutler	Orrtanna	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lise	Hull	Bandon	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	McComas	HARTVILLE	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lawrence	Bennett	Warrenton	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Bomar	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Silver	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Hosford	Tunbridge	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Dann	Barnstable	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	MacCoubrey	Montreal	Puerto Rico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Christescu	Lakewood	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	White	Mobile	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Harrison	Gardena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Pluck	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sanford	Silver	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Arner	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Chester	Norton Shores	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mackenzie	Owens	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Lash	Piedmont	South Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It is essential to a free press that you block the merger of the Sinclair Broadcasting Group with Tribune Media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Salmeron	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
E.	Kucera	Western Springs	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Hirschman	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Vanderbeck	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Spicher	Lago Vista	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	De Oto	Henderson	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen T	Soria	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Felsen	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tiare	Smith	Woodstock	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard and Trudy	Sharpe	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tjaard	Breeuwer	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonja	Johnson	Addison	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Rhoades	Dover	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carolyn	Manney	West park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	James	East Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alfred	Guillemette	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Shebaro	Selma	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Kopel	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Torres	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Vanderbeck	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kane	Albarron	Yonkers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Doryce	Seltzer	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Helfant	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Keck	West Olive	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sheila	mizrahi	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Verran	Oak Ridge	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Morein	West Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	De Oto	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Babiarz	Schaumburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lucie	spurgeon	Reedsport	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Wiehle	Remer	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Trame	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Jacobs	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacalyn	Van Nice	Bluffton	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Cathey-Hoffman	Lemoyne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laraine	Sileo	New city	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Ring	Piedmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Drake	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Lakeberg	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Miller	Hendersonvlle	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Dejong	Annandale	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Malcolm	Cooper	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Butler	Coon Rapids	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Armstrong	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Black	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Arritt	HARMONY	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilarion	Melnikov	Harrisonburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norman	Diclemente	Coraopolis	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Milisits	Sierra Madre	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peg	Tassey	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Casie	Kirk	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Levin	Oak Park	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Lansing	Catonsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Moss	Stern	Narberth	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Kerwin	Blue Hill	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Thompson	Red Bank	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ruff	Cornelius	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Fox	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Brasington	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Allen	Quantico	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	King	Saint Louis	Missouri	Sinclair-Tribune merging would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rochelle	Van Meter	West Simsbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Hatcher	East Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martin	Viola	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Muth	Belmont	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Rukin	Camden	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Carey	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
laura	gottlieb	Berjeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

patricia	wolf	Coraopolis	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Venturi	Oriental	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Arvizu	Henrico	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Beck	Kensington	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Lieberman	Yorktown Heights	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Decker	Utica	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our First Amendment free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could seriously undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC MUST stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Pagones	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karlin	Lillington	Bray	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	McQuaid	East Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Colette	Chisholm	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Gaspar	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michele	Handzel	West Henrietta	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Bejerano	Chico	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Lauer	Nokomis	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Scherdin	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Francis	Gress	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Davis	Woodside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Merlino	Englewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Stentzel	Key West	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Schnakenberg	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nita	Johnson	Sioux Falls	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Moore	Upper Darby	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Hoffman	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lawrence	Brown	West Lafayette	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Siconolfi	Wesley Chapel	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	D	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Dickinson	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Nierenberg	Somerset	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Sauer	Timonium	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C	Golya	DuPont	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rob	C	Whittier	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Erf	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Pruett	Fleming Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Doxtader	Mount sinai	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marshall	Skare	Brooklyn Park	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Wolberg	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeannie	Hallinan	Washingtonville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Cuff	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harry	Bliss	Cornish	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Medina	Brownsville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Thacker	Elyria	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sonja	Lockman	Orono	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Colvett	Mount Juliet	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Barnes	Newport News	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Storti	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Padwa	Warren	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lonnie	Juli	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Guimond	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Myerson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Justin	Cohen	Scarsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Cohen	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Henry	Fairfax	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Ogurick	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Fisk	Latham	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Lang	Woodbury	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Mason	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Murray	Mansfield	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Feng	Zhu	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffry	Kaplow	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
linda	obrien	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Woolhouse	Exeter	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Younus	Samadzada	Albany	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Murray	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Riswadkar	Williamsburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Crochet	NEW ORLEANS	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Kamenides	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Auster	Martinsville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Eigner	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Starr	Auburn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	McHugh	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Cooper	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	LaPlace	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	OseiTutu	Pembroke Pines	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wieslawa	Laskowska	Garwood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	DeGroot	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
DAVID	KIRK	HUNTLEY	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Larsen	Dekalb	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Cornwell	Montpelier	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Lehach	Jackson Heights	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Levinsky	Palm Harbor	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Fitts	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Bozek	Baltimore	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Collins	Johns Creek	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Laur	Chatsworth	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

anna	cowen	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vanessa	Harris	Waukegan	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaime	Lightfoot	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Dypwick	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sheryl	nowak	Maryland Heights	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Matthews	Woodstown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Shriver	Solana Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Deliman	Valparaiso	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Matthews	Lakewood	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Dipert	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Gilson	Killeen	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denice	St John	Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Rove	Leawood	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoff	Stradling	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald W.	Henderson, Ph.D.	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frankie	Patman Maguire	Osprey	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Valaw	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Szabo	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J Scott	Akers	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Lore	Chevy Chase	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Douglas	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Cline	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neal	VanPoperin	Aiken	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kc	Wong	Hewitt	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelsey	Keyes	Saline	Michigan	President George W. Bush said, "We need an independent media to hold people like me to account". He was and is right.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by
Jenifer	Wagley	Katy	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Godsoe	Bangor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Abbott	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rinda	West	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorothy	Coombs	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Isserlis	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Silverman	Ewing	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Kristler	Holton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Barker	Southern Shores	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Castaneda	Brentwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
michael	crouch	wentzville	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathleen	perna	Dover	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C Jay	Levine	Seward	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nekeshia	Smart	Oak Ridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Williams	Cape May Court Hou	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This equals Russia's "State TV"!

Van	Dean	Stamford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Barden	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	North	Shortsville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Ruby	Salem	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bossert	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Hassell	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathe	Palka	Flemington	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Colvin	Elgin	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gillette	Wadsworth	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Porter	Schenectady	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Kokott	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy Jo	Kuzma	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Fortenberry	Woodville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Irene	McCutcheon	Gambrills	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Clare	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Erceg	Natrona Heights	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Stern	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
roberta	wallitt	ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

erin	Kamler	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Caine	Osprey	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

peter	wormser	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charity	Moschopoulos	Annandale	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Wiegraffe	Saint Charles	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Therese	Povolo	Beulah	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cedric	Bainton	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Alper	Nutley	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley and Susan	Hills	Coral Gables	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harriet	Daugherty	Ashtabula	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Gillum	1201	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Jackson	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Rogers	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Alderete	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Amshel	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Herbert C.	Ziegler	Yucaipa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Miller	Branford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Lindner	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Owens	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald E.	Jaekle Jr.	Wilson	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Walters	Brunswick	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Zelvin	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naila	Al Hasan	Hyattsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Dunfee	Erie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cody	Hulme	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albert	Garcia-Romeu	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Chromicz	New York	New York	Please don't let the merger proceed!!! Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lourdes	Quinones	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Wolf	Evansville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Semones	Yorktown	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Feldman	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Hinds	Kennett Sq	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Hough	Oak Ridge	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Wilson	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Smith	Sparks	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Manini	Trinidad	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV propaganda monster in the U.S. in contradiction to FCC policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy American democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edie	Clompus	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marvin	Schrock	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Messler	West Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Filoteo	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Fisher	Downingtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Arbour	Elkins Park	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Gillis	Albertville	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Tisdale	Southport	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Nester	Wapakoneta	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Kunnmann	Chesterfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Rensberger	South Bend	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ingrid	Wallen	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Farnsworth	Hallowell	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
michael	mc carthy	Poughkeepsie	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

m	Drake	Houghton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean Ann	Marwick	Daytona Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rosemary	fugazzotto	Winfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Perkins	Acworth	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Egg	Smithville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacalyn	Gano	Orange Beach	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Conner	Alachua, FL	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Perras	Myrtle Beach	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helga	Goldberg	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Swaim	Belford	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kayl	lagunas	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Gavenda	Volente	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilene	Budin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Panish	Barrington	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeannie	Finlay-Kochanowski	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Evans	Moneta	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Reed	Severn	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Patty	Eilenberg	Fairfield	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please stop and read this message and think about what really makes our country so precious: freedom of speech and a free press! Once that’s muzzled, a major artery is severed. What good would this merger do? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Adeline	Griffin	Barnegat	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymonda	Schwartz	Crestview	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Shipman	Fort Worth	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arnie	Hummasti	Astoria	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianna	Fallon	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Flora	Toronto	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen and Scott	Woldman	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Braverman	Massapequa Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Miller	NEW YORK	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Drake	Houghton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Brown	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Horton	Godfrey	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Munck	North Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Horn	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regan	Leahy	Rockford	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Maurer	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pastor MV	Crea	IIthaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Willie	Campbell	Germantown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Biondo	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Zoe	Brizzolara	Bloomfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Harrod	Litchfield	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Saputo	Dearborn Heights	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennie	Lopez	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shafiq	Shariff	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mara	Dingman	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Warner	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rochelle	Staab	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	Clark	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raffaele	Gesulfo	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sheila	castro	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Waldinger	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita	Sadler	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Maher	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Sullivan	Weslaco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Sheley		Jerseyville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Moriarty	McPhail	Clearwater	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Thaden	Traverse City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Ellefson	Gettysburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katrin	McManis	Kingwood	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Eileen	Bernhardi	Astoria	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Stop this corporate propaganda machine! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Ruben	Washington	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Johnson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lodiza	Lepore	Bennington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katrin	Schnabl	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Gribler	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Oertel	Ellicott City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Matz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	Brock	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

N	T	Schenectady	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Siegel	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	Kucharczyk	Oak Forest	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nils	Anderson	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alberto	Partida	Weston	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Lamoreaux	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Mierisch	Lincolnwood	Illinois	NO Sinclair-Tribune merger!
				This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Barry	Gold	Hartsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Meservey	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Lowder	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Landin	Livingston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	McKitrick	Akron	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leila	Covrigaru	Ann Arbor	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanne	Gibson	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Winkler	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madalyn	Benoit	Kinderhook	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	Reisenbichler	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuael	Topiary	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivan	Victor	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Plotkin	Wixom	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Crupi	Cumming	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Kucharz	Round Lake Beach	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stefanie	Mackriss	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Menkes	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aidan	Quigley	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Kass	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Kelly	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Divenere	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Hubbard	Humboldt	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Kaplan	Ocean Grove	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

judy	Zuckert	Sandy	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhea	Cohen	Silver Spring	Maryland

Please stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger! My family and I rely on a f

Steven	Walanka	Wheeling	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Pecaut	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynda	Myers	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Adam	Abbate	Wallingford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roy	Claflin	Champaign	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanette	King	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Killpack	Lincoln City	Oregon	A Sin-lair-Tribune merger WILL create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It WILL stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sin-lair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this undermines non-fascist viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on US Citizen's side of history and block this merger.
Linda	McDermon	Rural Hall	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angeline	Albright	Atlanta	Georgia	Our free speech both personally & in the media is critical to our democracy. Only one voice is an insult to our democracy.
Neil	Swaab	Astoria	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Rudo-Hutt	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Vause	Newport News	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	S.	Hastings On Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hedy	Helfand	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kiara	Johnson	Albany	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Lori	Boes	Hudson	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gil	Juno Beach	Florida

Do NOT approve this merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Holdstein	Forest Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Staub	Greeley	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	McKee	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Benge	Charleston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Shipkowski	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

April	Brahinsky	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caye	Drapcho	Central	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darwin	Corrin	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ellen	Pyle	Little Rock	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amber	Favorite	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Dawson	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Fischer	Forest Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	McCarthy	Lake Zurich	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lakshyan	Schanzer	Cranston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thad	Hasbrouck	Cromwell	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Abramson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
kieran	ronayne	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Zakreski	Woodstock	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Kuby	Lyndhurst	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Harrington	Stacy	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Feinberg	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nicholas	pierson	North Liberty	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Beumer	Elsmere	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Stanley	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edmund	Correia	Los Altos Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hector	Bertin	Whiteville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jere	Fritsche	Iron River	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Priscilla M	Becroft	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Holly	Reed	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Hennessy	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gina	Kaiser	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Waldmann	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Terrence	Reiter	Syracuse	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Where is the FCC when our democracy is threatened? Have you no

Nancy	Nace	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Grosh	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Cokinos	Edinboro	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Rickard	Lewisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Keating	Lexington	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Rhode	Cary	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Bounds	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Ruby	Salem	New Hampshire

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Silkworth	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marvin	Scherl	Germanton	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Locke	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emane	Halloway	Hyde Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jess	B	Kodak	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taffy	Williams	Tuckahoe	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Bochner	College Station	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ana Maria	Delisi	Macomb	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Claffey	Glenview	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elise A.	Tollner	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Harrison	Avon	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Leonard	Reston	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power. Most of us rely upon our local news for unbiased reporting, but Sinclair is forcing local stations to present biased, political statements as "news." This is not in the public interest.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Bornia	West Palm Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Ryerson	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Foster	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gregory	Waksmulski	Pawtucket	Rhode Island	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The proposed merger of Sinclair Broadcasting with Tribune Media should be denied by the Commission on grounds that the parties are seeking monopoly over traditional broadcast media space and the advertising revenues that sector enjoys. Such a monadic conglomerate will dissuade new entry to these markets, reducing competition and thus the consumers' choices. This is entirely predictable, and the Commission has a duty to prevent this state of affairs.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate contradictory to the FCC's own policies valuing free speech. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Jeffrey	Nathanson	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Asay	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Collins	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Belk	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Linge	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. For the Nation's future.
Ben	Ogren	Crystal Lake	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Bosley	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Deltognoarmanasco	Queen creek	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Robinson	Salisbury	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Causey	Nampa	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Adams	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Bertsch	Sayville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Sharp	Cream Ridge	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Hoffman	West Danby	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Sherman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Jevic	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LJ	Goswick-Wentz	Birmingham	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Frederick	Eureka Spgs	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Kritz	Greenfield Center	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Nolan	Colorado Spgs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Tall	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Leila	D'Aquin	New Orleans	Louisiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I oppose the expansion of the number of broadcast stations controlled by Sinclair and I urge the FCC to block the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Sablosky	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Kiefer	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J Bryan	Fritz	Upper Darby	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Troy	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vernetta	Mullins	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ethan	Glover Bailey	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Evans	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Leidinger	Delaware	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Hamburg	Glenside	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pearl	Holloway	Warwick	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Phillips	Auburn	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maura	Kearns	Pittsboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Khozem	Nomanbhoy	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Swift	Birmingham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Hutchinson	Adrian	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Shea	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Gazzola	Dayville	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Brown	Middleburg Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Schulmiller	Port Washington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allen	Solomon	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Keniski	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Fiorot	Easton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelley	Atherton	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Albertine	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Perlman	Derwood	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Brown	Porter	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Rhoda	Hiram	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradford	Holloway	Warwick	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Miceli	Wadsworth	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glenn	Miller	Prescott	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krista	Clarke-Brownstein	Cary	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Macilvain	Hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Watch	Grand Island	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edmund	Weisberg	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Haun	Frisco	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
June	Hurst	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Betti	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Postel	St Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SHELLEY	STEFANIC	Round Lake Beach	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christy	Johnson	Wake Forest	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Boss	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Savino	East Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Glover	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Schrader	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Fitzgerald	Boulder City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Taylor	Kingsley	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Rua-Aguilar	Atlantic City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Gist	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hoegel	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keri	Raphael	Salyer	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Wolcott	Charleston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stacey	Howard	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Thibeault	East Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louis	Vega	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hallie	friedman	Merion Station	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo-Anne	Unruh	Hartford	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Hausman	York	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorrine	Marshall	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Barnes	Pearl City	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The 4th Estate is protected by the 1st Amendment so that it can
Hannah	Blad	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaii	Fredregill	Chico	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
pat	matranga	Hermitage	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernadette	Wheeler	Greenacres	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Drumright	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Notville	Newport News	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This would be a travesty.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Keys	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Cole	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hallie	friedman	Merion Station	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Adkins	New Carlisle	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Herzer	Flemington	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	England	Damascus	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victoria	Szatkowski	Westbrook	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	McInerney	Naples	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Siegel	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Lutz	Madison Heights	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tracy	Severson	Columbus	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				The Sinclair-Tribune merger is a threat to free speech, our first amendment. Please stop this - see sentiments below.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Alma	Rutgers	Greenwich	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lily	Revere	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Ballard	Saint Augustine	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Groenevelt	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Esposito	West Islip	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ira	Lourie	Farmington	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jim	hodgson	Manlius	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandy	Breuninger	Orange Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Heath	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Wapner	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

N	Burrows	Anchorage	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michele	Hollow	South Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Chinn	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Johnson	Libertyville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Geffen	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Scholl	Lancaster	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stew	Friedman	MERION STA	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Douglas	Clark	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Stasiulewicz	Blacklick	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
James	Pruitt	Silver Spring	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Donovan	Andover	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allan	Barnes	Georgetown	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Johnson	BATH	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Gunther	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Reece	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Clough	Pound Ridge	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harry	Friedman	Merion Station	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Ehrlich	Hollywood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janna	Saslaw	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Toni-Ann	Mistretta	Sugar Land	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lisa	moynahan	Key Biscayne	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bette	Wilkes	Westport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Begnal	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Knipp	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Vargas	Ione	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Carey	Soquel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Rybski	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Bye	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mikels	Skele	Edwardsville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zachary	Philipps	Fishers	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Kapell	Hobe Sound	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenya	Unknown	Maineville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Metz	Erdenheim	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Lori	Strauss	Brooklyn	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				Media conglomerates are crippling independent and free thought. In addition Sinclair has a political bias that will undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must follow its own policies and block this merger.

Ellen	Bar-Zemer	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Esposito	Rock Stream	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Logan	Cannon	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Moise	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Carey	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cristina	Condrescu	South Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Top	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Crouch	Grass Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	King	Jefferson	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rochelle	goldenberg	ft myers	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald Joseph	Saberniak Jr	Valparaiso	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Christine	Button	Cortlandt Manor	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I strongly oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger. Further consolidation of media companies and markets is a threat to our democracy! We need the FCC to block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Ellen	Fauerbach	Denver	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Sullivan	Milton	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Desiree	LeClerc	Orinda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Shapiro	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Ahlberg	Mesa	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Williams	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathrine	Keller	Leesburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Gervas	Schaumburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Shafer	Hamburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cindy	Hudson	Bethel Park	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Schneider	Nashua	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aubrey	Donnelly	Warren	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Goldstein	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Lloyd	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Coleman	Cedar Rapids	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Huber	Springfield	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.FCC the Wingnuts!

Tracey	Barton	Saunderstown	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Boutwell	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Larson	Rolling Meadows	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Kawasaki	Swartz Creek	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dillard	Henderson	Morganton	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teri	Zobel	Bedford Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Berry	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Edmondson	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nora	Guthrie	Mount Kisco	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fran	Divine	New Paltz	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bette	Weneck	NY	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Sheffield	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Marks	NEW YORK	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gavin	Gray	Three Oaks	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rafia	Rebeck	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C. Ann	Sheehan	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

peggy	nelson	Coralville	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Singh	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorrie	Stillings	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Zielinski	West Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Juarez	Fallston	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Molly	H	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phil	Ellison	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Overby	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Trainor	Georgetown	Texas	If the merger of Sinclair-Tribune happens,there would be less local news. Sinclair already controls what local broadcasters uses, some initiated from the corporate office. I have no doubt they would continue ot eliminate local coverage. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Steve	Cichowski	Olathe	Kansas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

K	Seddon	Cold Spring	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Heytler	Marshall	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Dietz	Chester	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cathy	Nonas	New York City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Curtis	Traverse City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Daskam	McKinney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	McFarland	Brunswick	Maine
				In the interest of a well informed public, access to a diverse range of journalistic viewpoints, and freedom of speech, please deny the Sinclair-Tribune merger.
Matthew	Thompson	North Riverside	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Dombrowiak	Lakewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Luther	Oakmont	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Sylvester	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Newman	West Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Dennis	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ioan	Herlo	Hollywood	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It may sound "safe" to push things like this at this very moment but

Jay	Houlahan	Worthington	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Graeve	Ankeny	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toni	Blackwood	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Collier	Hammond	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Naylor	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stuart	Anderson	Otego	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rick	tanner	Midland	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	Buffa	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Murphy	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Littleton	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Thompson	Mesquite	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaii	Fredregill	Chico	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Leaf	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitch	M	Palm Springs	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Greenfield	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Warren	Huberman	New City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Habel	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ali	Solak	Fulton	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Norris	Lakewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Allen	Bolton Landing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Woodworth	Athens	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Gauci	Bedford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Davis	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Curdie	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Pina	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	McDonald	Leonard	Michigan

I vigorously oppose a Sinclair-Tribune merger as it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tess	Castell	Bloomingdale	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wendy	Shaver	Enola	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bree	Dribbon	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleanor	Lacklen	Vienna	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Capuccio	North East	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tamara	Kennelly	Blacksburg	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Free speech is a fundamental right of our democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

GeriAnn	Johnson	Clarkesville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Russell	Coleman	East Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Brothers	Lincolnville	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Gabriel	Parker	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J Bridget	Gleason	Greenbrae	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Baffa	Berwyn	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Clark	Cape Canaveral	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsay	Hope Kern	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Sanzenbacher	Orland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
timothy	Kent	east brunswick	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Rasher	Haslett	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Henning	Storrs Mansfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Epstein	Bronxville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Mullen	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

vs	Barton	Flint	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Quigley	Fair Haven	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Howard	Marion	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karyn	Heym	West Chester	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

heather	Jackson	Long Lake	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Naidnur	Bellevue	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Kittleson	Winter Park	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Ershler	Loganton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gardner	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Dear FCC:
Brett	Greisen	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Adrienne B	Burdette	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernestine	Byrd	newport news	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brenda	Lennick	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mary	goody	Lafayette	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Kirkpatrick	Davenport	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frances	Lorie	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johannie	O'Donnell	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Ellis	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	Moser	Hampton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	McGuire	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Popick	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Coakley	Grantham	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Matthews	Phillips	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Parris	Lebanon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deidre	Charlot	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Langevin	Boulder City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candis	Sunderland	Poughkeepsie	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Mawhorter	Royal Oak	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Constance	Engle	Hendersonville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Valentine	Woodridge	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Travis	Tate	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Bacon	Florissant	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendra	Raley	North Bergen	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Damon	Klassen	Moundridge	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Roth	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra J.	Riggs	Clyde	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Levinson	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronnie	Heller	Plantation	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Lewis	Delanco	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Hokanson	Savannah	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Rogers	Bethel	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's. own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The polarizing if our society will be compounded by limitations on media voices! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Bilfinger	East Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Warkentine	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Haynes, Ph.D.	Eagle	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Fisher	Harrisonburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Lurvey	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Forman	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ben	Shaw	Troy	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisa	Ball	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Bacon	Florissant	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

BrendaLee	Lennick	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lyman	Monrovia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Redmond	Chappaqua	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Kraynak	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Johnson	Brownsville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ira	Goldman	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Pfeferman	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gubbin	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Campbell	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Passidomo	Water Mill	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Filipiak	Guysville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Jorgensen	East Peoria	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Avi	Mirski	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Williams	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Cenci	Greenwich	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Kurchyn	Pittsford	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Flock	Coeur D Alene	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard P.	Konold	Manhattan	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Lindberg	Finland	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Fifer	Lewes	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Christ	Fenton	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G. Evelyn	Lampart	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michaeline	Hade	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Salerno	Wading River	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	McGuire	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Petkovic	Tempe	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Saab	Lofton	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Maisel	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ira	Blum	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Kenneally	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriette	Spiegel	Martin	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loree	Williams	Gaylordsville	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Lee	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shoshannah	Beck	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

james	davis	kirtland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	Evers	West Lafayette	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	DeBoer	Henrico	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Burns	Studio city	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valencia	Turner-Williams	Southgate	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
M	Stutzman	Mount Prospect	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. A conglomerate like this would contradict the FCC's own policies: it would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Durand	Bar Harbor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tad	Colbeck	Avon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Motta	Clayton	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Power	Fair Haven	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Smith-Olsson	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liberty	Ford	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Bullen	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Hacker	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	DeBoer	Henrico	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	McGuire	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Franjevic	Arlington Heights	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phoenix	Feathers of Many	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Moore	Senoia	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Reid	Canadian	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Jerde	Prescott	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenta	Davis	Brentwood	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Luerman	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nurit	Tilles	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Martoglio	Bloomington	Indiana	With all due respect, do not approve the Sinclair-Tribune merger. Bigger is not better when it comes to media conglomerates. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kristina	Bradley	Matawan	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Arnold	Franklin	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
K.	Kumaroo	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	O'Neill	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Phillips	West Chester	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Cole	Morton Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vicki & Rod	Kastlie	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Barnett	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Harper	Shelby Township	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Wright	Vero Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Repko	Mentor	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Mazzie	Pembroke Pines	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

julie	Rice	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Peterson-Hart	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Roat	Newark	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mario	Diaz de Leon	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Shields	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Curtis	Garland	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. STOP THIS MERGER!!!
Bonnie	Kielwasser	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Miller	Syracuse	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erik	Kuitert	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Wallace	Waynesville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Sibley	Christine	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Lawson	North Wales	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Trevor	Trietsch	Jacksonville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Tomlinson	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Herzberg	NY	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Rogers	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Travis	Sharpe	Blythewood	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Nathanson	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Heath	Winter Harbor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meg	Jones Wall	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	De Trinis	Lyndhurst	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Leisenring	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorrie	Slutsker	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Fuller	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Hackett	Bellerose	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Rowland	Browns Mills	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Althen	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Worley	Oak Ridge	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gina	Anzivino	Seal Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Wehle	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Pickens	Gurnee	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Jackson	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Weathersby	Rolesville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Farnum	Pontiac	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Katherine	Knicker	Elmhurst	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This proposed merger cannot be allowed to go through. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

victor	king	Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellis	Kendricks	Pine Mountain	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Hopkins	Winter Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Parrish	Chester	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Lockwood	Ofallon	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Flocco-McMaster	Austin	Texas	My whole life we have objected to government control of the A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Bolton	Ooltewah	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lawrence	Carter	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Hojnacki	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Penner	Olathe	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shari	Grace	Marshalltown	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Piper	Plantation	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KC	Benson	Estes Park	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Surber	Arroyo Grande	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Harris	Bayonne	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Knepper	Sycamore	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Arnold	Strafford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mollie	Schierman	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Tyrka	Barrington	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gordon	Harwell-Spaulding	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liana	Fixell	New Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jackie	kerr	Flint	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Franklin	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victor	Martinez	Guaynabo	Puerto Rico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	McCartney	Marion	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Dyke	Punta Gorda	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Wayne	LA QUINTA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Wyckoff	Portage	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celia	Nathan	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristine	Karsteadt	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Van Vranken	Pueblo	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Pruitt	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackie	Mahan	Chimayo	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David John	Golia	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dwight	Kirkpatrick	Rock Hill	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Escobar	Cypress	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ruprecht	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tina	Cook	Kirksville	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Jurkiewicz	New Britain	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Ricklefs	Cedar Rapids	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

gregory	anderson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Fogel	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo	Buxbaum	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessie	Wilson	Rahway	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeline	Bishop	Olympia	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Tucker	Coral Gables	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hines	Petersburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Brenninkmeyer	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Padma	Wick	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Spencer	San Bernardino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Putnam	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Womack	Wayne	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sky	Hackett	Fort Lauderdale	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Tuma	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Herman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Wilkin	Wrenshall	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Foote	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	Faller	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taryn	Dollings	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cyncie	Winter	Evergreen	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Matthews	Washington	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	McLaurin	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Clapper	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Weathersby	Rolesville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

H.	Asumen	Kapolei	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Betty	Lawrence	Asheville	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please remember that we no longer have the Fairness Doctrine, Sinclair has shown it blatantly uses its media ownership to push its politics. My town has only one television station, now owned by Sinclair, so to just watch the local news we have to be subjected to the Sinclair agenda. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Sara	Blase	Fairfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Lubar	Lincoln	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Banks	Ukiah	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maria	Baker	Santa clarira	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Fillman	Leesburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marc	Lewis	Arroyo Grande	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Bruce	Monroe Twp	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jaclyn	Harder	Flowery Branch	Georgia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We don't need a propaganda station dedicated to "news reporting" paid for by political oligarchs to further their agenda, terrorize people and create chaos.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. As you are aware, Sinclair makes their broadcasters read MANDATORY scripts regardless of their veracity, whereby threatening our right to a free press.

Rob	Goldman	North Myrtle Beach	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Petruzzi	North Ridgeville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Frattaroli	Stamford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nickolas	Bellamy	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debby	Baker	Jupiter	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kara	Tennis	Phila	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celina	Coming	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Kallsen	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanne	Groenendaal	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shannon	Benner-Boxer	SAN FRANCISCO	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leona	Konkel	Northfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marybeth	Rose	Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Gordon	McHenry	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Hastings	Liberty Twp	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Weathersby	Rolesville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverly	Lehr	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fatima	Baker	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Faith	Stone	Boulder	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am very concerned with free press being forced to broadcast Sinclair versions of the news. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hank	Eng	Santa Maria	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Tracy-Savoie	Hawthorne	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sima	Higgins	Haddonfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Bald	Warwick	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Project Manager	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Kaset	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel Paul	Morales	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neil	Borrell	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronique	Markewitz	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keely	Buckley	Upper Arlington	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Muszynski	Flagler Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Theobald	Park Ridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Cabrales	Golden	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It's never been more critical to safeguard our media. President Trump has made clear, time and time again, that he's against freedom of the press – unless it's press in his favor.
Christopher	Libbey	Alpharetta	Georgia	It's never been more critical to safeguard our media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Mills	Pflugerville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Grinstead	Toluca Lake	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Quigley	Elmhurst	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Corner	Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Conn	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kathy	Bradley	Lugoff	South Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				The First Amendment is supposed to give us the right to free speech and a free press. A news station being forced by the mega-corporation that owns it to parrot the same messages violates these freedoms. There’s nothing free about a scripted press – and there’s nothing free about a public with no other option for local news.

Sara	Eng	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Campbell	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Wood	Kennett Sq	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Walker	Bastrop	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Godwin	Monroeville	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Brown	Pomona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

TIMOTHY	GRENER	Las Vegas	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Babieh	Musa	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yves	Limpalair	Greer	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erica	Minglis	Woodstock	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Beardslee	Berkley	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
karen	simon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Luedtke	Momence	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Merz	Fergus Falls	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J.	Steinberg	Franklin	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Mitchell	Scandia	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Art	Gillespie	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joann	Puskarcik	Starlight	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Simmon	Colchester	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phillip	Wright	Nottingham	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Weathersby	Rolesville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frances	Marshall	Shepherdstown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eve	Mozur	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Herbert	Northfield	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Williams	Jacksonville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marianne	McDermott	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Stern	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Wagoner	Woodleaf	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erica	Minglis	Woodstock	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Kegley	Abingdon	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jahna	Schadt	Edwardsville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianne	Atkins	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Jahos	Alstead	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Willen	Catonsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margarita	Serrano-Sarmiento	Orefield	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
K	Jacobus	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Bugge	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

CathyAnn	Hernandez	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eka	Febrina	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J. C.	Smith	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

joseph	shahda	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
K	Rokovich	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Stein	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Casey	Bernasconi	San Mateo	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Ultimately what is happening to this country is a severe patriarch that will lead to destruction of not just put plabet, but our own people. This is a big step in that direction. We are feeding

Toby	Thomas	Venice	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Thomason	Boerne	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It is the mandate of FCC to protect our free speech and and to encourage the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Do not allow Sinclair Boradcasting Group to encroach upon or to stifle our free speech or the diversity of views in the press that are so essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

M.E.	Scullard	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. They already have a monopoly on information in some areas. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Katz	Sunrise	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Booher	Bar Harbor	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Gross	Darnestown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

julius	kuru	North Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Vespucci	Richardson	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Engman	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Kropf	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymond	Slater	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Livia	Genise	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wuchinich	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Johnathon	Chadwick	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Mallory	Deridder	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hedy	Williamson	Laguna Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Reaves	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Simek	Westlake	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Yurista	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Pollack	Addison	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gavigan	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Blanchard	Carbondale	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ryan	Dexter	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ilene	goldberg	Lawrenceville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Seidenfeld	New Rochelle	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teri	Foley-Nelson	Dublin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Erickson	Valley Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
miriam	eckenfels-garcia	West New York	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	DeKuiper	Holland	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Snavely	Harrisonburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toby	Craig	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Obermeier	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Nielsen	Low Moor	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John M	Riley	Denver	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. An independent freedom of the press is in endangered by this merger. Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Gyftopoulos	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Luppino	Northport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nora	Kilbane	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcella	Trant	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

brent	dibiaso	Berlin	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Bitterman	Coconut Grove	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

j	ward	Norman	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Williams	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	McCullough	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Allen	Peoria	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Capra	Barrington	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela A	Konopka	Mt Caramel	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Schwartz	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne Marie	Haak	Great Falls	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jai	Parekh	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Allwine	Greensburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Lufkin	Christiana	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Natalie	Gelman	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Lourekas	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Enrique	Guevara	Brownsville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Neely	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kip	Smith	Delmar	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Vollenberg	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Wilson	Tarboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Margolis	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alyssa	Elliott	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Suico	South Bend	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Eshelman	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Heinrich	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Holter	Magnolia	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Dorchin	Delray Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Sprehn	Piqua	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Sullivan	Eureka Springs	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Worthy	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Barker	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Lisciandro	Basking Ridge	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terri	David	Venice	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bernard and Carole	Ferster	New Rochelle	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Levine	Bellmore	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Steinberg	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Falender	Aspen	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Clement	Manchester	New Hampshire

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirk	Bonamici	Monroe Township	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathie E	Takush	Reading	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lou	Wheeland	Allentown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peer	Plaut	Colfax	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Glazer	Bluffton	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arthur	Lisciandro	Basking Ridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	De Smedt	Scotch Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Mason	Antioch	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Syme	New London	Connecticut	Shame on the FCC for considering this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Ackerman	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Houdek	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erica	Hildebrand	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Cate	La Crescenta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vonn	Washington	Monee	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elba	PagÃ¡n	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorian	Dodd	Oxford	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kurland	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Strasser	Westlake	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaari	Schneider	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Ashlin	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Gourgouris	Santa Monica	California	I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger because it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country which would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy as delineated in our constitution.
Maria	Studer	Levittown	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Pontau	livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
christine	kelley	Arnold	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Napoleon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Holly	Kukkonen	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Gold	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debora	Wood	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alberto	Saavedra	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noah	K	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Janavicius	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Morris	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Lisciandro	Basking Ridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Natalia	Hiller	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Casart	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allen	Brandt	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Dowshen	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	White	Monticello	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wes	Baish	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edna	Wigderson	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raj	Rodrigues	Davie	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Meg	Carter	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

FP	Hoffnung	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	I am writing in opposition to the Sinclair-Tribune merger. This move would create a dangerous TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. This contradicts the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tamara	Kirson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Patelunas	Myrtle Beach	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Christopher	Rapisarda	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Kuhns	Fort Myers, FL	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Dwyer	Paris	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Goodman	Haslett	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Greg	Holt	Spring Branch	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

allister	layne	Conyers	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Marino	Northport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jess	Tercha	Baltimore	Maryland

Dear Sir or Madam, A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Inkenbrandt	Tennyson	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Katz	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Reed	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francis	Muno	Wayne	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Miele Wen	Melrose	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Plunkett	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeannine	Drost	Spring City	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Longley	Sevierville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Calabrese	Supply	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Slattery	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita	Faulkner	Carrollton	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marta	Kelly	Greenville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Caitlin	Jackson	Franklin	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruria	Tal	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jamie	Cason	Springfield	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Balogh	Orange Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Fritzinger	Weston	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Kuhn	Roanoke	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Volpatti	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Burke	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	Lichtman	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Jacobs	Henrico	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Middlebrook	Tuolumne	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lara	Rabe	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	Gallagher	Carmel By The Sea	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Turley	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Sparks	Mansfield	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ginny	Pizzardi	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mistic	Filley	Atascosa	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Fox	Springfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Diana	Brodscholl	Waldwick	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Schneider	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Hardwick	Seminole	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Merklein	Garner	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Kappler	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Jackson	Carson City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Lindenberger	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Followell	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Olsen	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Cartabona	Pequannock	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Brown	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	Ingram	Stafford	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charie	Mastro	Lewiston	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Brock	Winston-Salem	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Berlingieri	Vero Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Bailey-Marquis	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Macioci	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Miskelly	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Love	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Barnes	Brick	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Felicity	Ladd	Putney	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrien	Logsdon	Fairfield	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vern	Keskinen	Neptune Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Kalil	Erwinna	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Yale	Hobe Sound	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Totty	Monroe	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Verruni	Mount Pleasant Mill	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Stamp	Crescent City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Linn-Nieves	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margo B	Moulin	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Rhoden-Plaza	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Steen	Ridgewood	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roxanne	Ramirez	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Fahey	Dunellen	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Johnston	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Crocetti	Cary	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilana	Krug	Idlewylde	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lonnie	Weiss	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Hersch	Cedarhurst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Drummond	Del Valle	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Nordin	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lewis	Luks	Key West	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Please do not let this merger go forward.

Richard	Schoenberger	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Jin	Nothmann	Owings Mills	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Schenkel	Gary	Plymouth	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Leonard	Rochester	New York	Our media outlets are more consolidated than ever. Diversity of opinion is vital to the health of our democracy. Oppose this merger, and help maintain the strength of our union.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
Tom and Arlene	Alm	St Paul	Minnesota
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Hoover	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Martin	Dade City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Wortsman	Merrick	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Brandon	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Mann	Amsterdam	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Woolley	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Greene	Dundee	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	West	Winder	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Johnson	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Kunitz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Holcomb	Mt Carmel	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roxanne	Chesnes	Hendersonville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gay	Russell-Dempsey	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Sachristan	Powahtan	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	McConnell	Manchester Townsh	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Chase	Roseville	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Robbins	Montague	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Carolus	Moores Hill	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Thompson	Schaumburg	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marc	Kagan	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Ricci	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mike	Upchurch	New Bern	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I've watched with dismay as my local Sinclair TV station forced its news people to stand before the camera and TWICE read the Sinclair propaganda to the public. From that point on I've boycotted Ch. 12 News here. I'm asking the FCC to stop this merger before it gets worse and we're forced to watch a FOX News wannabe with all their lies and conspiracy theories displayed as "facts." A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Jen	Foster	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Reedy	N. Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Woolley	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrian	Gergler	Plymouth	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Taggart	South Wales	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rhenna	St Clair	Farmington	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jorge	guerrero	Miami Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D.W.	Piper	Tujunga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luis	Lozano	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Summar	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Corbin	Rhinebeck	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheryl	Grier	Harpers Ferry	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Silva	Springfield	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
leo	kottke	Mpls	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Last name	Roseville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Liz	Picard	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Rowe	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grainne	Matthews	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Jaffa	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Grise'	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Torrence	Bloomfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rexford	Thompson	Key Biscayne	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	White	Gurnee	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elisabeth	Bryan	Walpole	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Goldwasser	East Greenwich	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	McCormick	Butler	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tatiana	BELMONT	Hollywood	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Nolan	Haughton	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Purkiss	Norfolk	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Grossman	Hartsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Sheridan	Dover	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Snyder	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gina	Norman	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Burke	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mary	putterman	hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Moore	Village Of Lakewood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jane	Harris	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cathy	Jones	Neskowin	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ursula	Noto	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jolene	Fennema	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Wilks	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Quick	Happy jack	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryan	Bennett	Kennesaw	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Hendrickson	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maurice	Kurtz	Saint Petersburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Chaback	Saugerties	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Parkinson	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Swann	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Stidham	Surprise	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Conn	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Hayford	Bloomfield Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Poulsen	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Bemis	Palmetto	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Zagury	Wall	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

judith	Phillips	Eagle Point	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Nolan	Haughton	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

georgia	derose	Mentor	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Badigian	Wakefield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lois	Distad	Casper	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pete	Allman	Tujunga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kara	Lindstrom	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Soto	Burke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Wilks	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Foley	Hiram	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Purkiss	Norfolk	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Lee	Fresno	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Yoz	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Johnson	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. . It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. Corporate management has a history of inserting its own views into its news programming. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Hall	Aledo	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Stein	Canon City	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Mitchell	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debbie	Murray	Honesdale	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Lewis	Augusta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Post	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda`	McKee	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Ervin	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Stickney	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create an unprededentedly huge and powerful TV broadcasting conglomerate and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Combs	Londonderry	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Camele	Loveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	O'Kiersey	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Jacobson	Hercules	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Lentz	white lake	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Fidance	New Castle	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Murphy	Hyattsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clay	Willmington	Berlin	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frances	Hoenigswald	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Dambach	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathanael	Overly	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Harron	Rockwall	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Cipolla	Haskell	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lasita	Shalev	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	McCluski	Teaneck	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Middlebrook	Tuolumne	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Gilmore	Carlsbad	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Ridpath	Montpelier	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Jacobs	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vanessa	Bedford	Westminster	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Poland	Rocky Hill	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This merger would create a Russian style "free" press, not free at all.

Brenda	Reed	Waverly	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JOANNA	King	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Bethel	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Ponder	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vince	Alexander	Wilsonville	Oregon

NO on MONOPOLIES.....

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Jean	Lauer	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Truran	Neptune	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Biegel	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Whitney	Nicholls	Decatur	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Jenkins	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janell	Alzate	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Walker	Des Plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony D	Iannuzzo	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Especially in these times, it would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Hershey	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darilyn	Dinsmoor	Forest Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Speckert	Saratoga springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Giselle	Roberts	Corpus Christi	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsey	Caudill	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamara	Prince	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	McKendree	Clinton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madhumita	Chatterjee	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Faith Ann	WEIDNER, MD	Simsbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We do not need another propaganda machine like Fox News.

Monica	Perez	Beacon	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	McCoy	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L	Kerner	Monterey park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverly	McCabe	Loveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Imhoff	Waterbury	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Lehman	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

Sinclair has shown itself ready to use economic blackmail on its member stations to force them to present strongly biased views. There are also liberal station owners/networks who do the same. However, this merger would create a conglomerate with power enough to threaten the free press's role in our democracy. Current FCC decisions have already done irrevocable harm to the internet as a check on business's interests and power. Don't make an even bigger and more harmful decision in this case.

BLOCK THIS MERGER.

Nikhil	Dharan	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Mesirow	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Wood	Olney	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Straight	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale Goldberg	PhD	Lansdale	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger H.	Harrell	Hermosa Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Greenspan	St Augustine	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Rivera-Lupu	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Welsko	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carl	Engelhart	Killingworth	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Fritzen	Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Phillips	New Canaan	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Clymer	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kevin	Harrell	Atlanta	Georgia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Hough	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Wallace	Addison	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Horning	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Garfield	Mahopac Falls	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Ray	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Stem	North Braddock	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myphon	Hunt	Yuba City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susie	Cox	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Monroe	Golden Valley	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corey	Williams	Petersburg	Virginia

The Sinclair merger represents a threat to free press and hurts our d

Stanley	Waryck	Glendale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bebb	Stone	Nyack	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna-Liisa	Breit	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
james	coley	Pawleys Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Jackson	Hamilton	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alfonso	Madrid	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dirk	Beetner	Edwardsville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Winzemer	Staatsburg	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Hart	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lewis	Robinson	Redding	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Elliott	Lake Havasu City	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
stephen	hill	Dysart	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Muccino	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kate	Jamal	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbra	Wilson	Hillside	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jennifer	rivers-flasko	Fairfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Lewis	Waverly	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Lakes	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

batya	hyman	Millsboro	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Catherine	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Highland	Mason	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Brunner	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Blank	Brentwood	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Konvicka	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mehmet	Guler	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Vangie	Stice-Israel	Sapulpa	Oklahoma	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do NOT approve the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate that would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The propaganda speech that Sinclair recently required all affiliates to read on air is just one example.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Branwen	Buckley	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eve	Shapiro	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Barbezat	Elgin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corinne	Hwang	Westmont	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Jones	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Springer	West Palm Bch	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Garling	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jorge	Torres	Easton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Carpenter	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J. Ambrose	Lucero	Sandia Park	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Warner	Rancho Cordova	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Shutt	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Vaughan	Yantis	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorothea	Owen	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Noll	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Elford	Canyon Country	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jo	Stenson	Albany	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marci	Seville	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cordell	Strug	McHenry	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Wallace	Buck	Alexandria	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Further, this is an ideologically extremist organization dedicated to conservative causes. This marginalizes the significant majority of liberals from equal programming access and promotes only one point of view, which serves only that portion of the public which subscribes to that particularr philosophy. This can clearly be seen in Murdoch-owned news organizations today such as Fox and the WSJ which draws heavy conservative viewership while frequently denegrating and even berating alternative viewpoints. This is already seen in Sinclair’s “must read” commentaries across its

Emily	Green	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wayne	Lewis	Lubbock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas De	Santos	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marc	Kagan	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seemin	Qayum	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Fair	Lebanon	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Crocker	Saratoga Springs	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Burns	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Federico	Monzon	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theda	Zaretsky	La	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Punnett	Medford	Massachusetts	I am writing with grave concern about the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. This would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Sinclair's practices have been shown to impose politically biased scripts on local news stations. The merger would put hundreds more local broadcasters under this control. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rudolph	Ellenbogen	White Plains	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trisha	Navarro	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernest	Hammer	Tuckahoe	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Christensen	Cranston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Trudy	Jamar	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	Jewell	New Rochelle	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Bogaert	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

donna	milton	Marietta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Young	Pocono Manor	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Guy	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Pearlman	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Wallace	Addison	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Voyles	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Beisner	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Palacio	St Augustine	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

YAsmin	Ara	Arlington	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Phillips	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nancy	Stevens	Sun City West	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Neveln	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Champagne	Houma	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drew	Reimer	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Isamar	Payano	Perth amboy	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Sherman	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Ludbrook	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dipangkar	Dutta	Starkville	Mississippi	Please consider acting against the Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create an unprecedented concentration of power and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It could stifle our free speech and the diversity of views that is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Yater	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Rodriguez	La Habra	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Tyler	Dexter	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Theriault	Commerce Twp	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

andrew	mccusker	Scarborough	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carson	Pursifull	Great Barrington	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Warren	Allely	Council Blfs	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Cheston	Mount Desert	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Bunn	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Lord	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Daly	New York City	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Lubliner	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Johannes	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Dunmire	Miamisburg	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Davies	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dr. Scott	Whitener	Somerset	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Robinson	Westerville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Fay	Temple	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M.	Royce	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimber	Nelson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Batterson	Cupertino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betsy	Taylor	Traverse City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mia	Schultz	Rye	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katy	Reddick	Durham	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alenka	Figa	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
janice	woychik	CHAPEL HILL	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Josefowicz	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Gianetti	N. Muskegon	Michigan	This merger must be stopped!!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Staley	Rochester	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
cam	Knight	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robt	Scouras	Lexington	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Ridener	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Weissmann	Pound Ridge	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Stoddart	Greenwood Village	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Hellmann	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Meribeth	Brocker-Querio	Mount Clemens	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Segal	Ellington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Grand	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Mott	Walkersville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Wade	Traverse City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Hager	Riverton	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Okamura	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Miller	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Roberts	Sunrise	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Mone	Bolton Landing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rebecca	auria	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SL	C	Brighton	Colorado	We have a POTUS who lies constantly and prefers dictators over democracy. It is critically important that the media be free to provide the truth, not just the crap he spouts. Do not allow this merger, it's an effort to take over the media for the spread of propaganda.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Arthur	Foster	Albany	New York
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Powell	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Myers	Davenport	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Bickford	Colebrook	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
stephanie	Wuthrich	Elkhart	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucinda	Sage-Midgorden	Hereford	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yvonne	Campos	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Reese	Elgin	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen	Herrmann	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Florence	Nislow	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Dalla	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwendolyn	Cornell	Bethalto	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Baket	Lake Ann	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lenny	Obolsky	Centennial	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Newton	Cranford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Gaspero	Beecher	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverlee	Couillard	The Woodlands	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Pelton	Coventry	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ayrie	Moore	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cameron	Lim	Incline Vlg	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Walter	Bishop	Elephant Butte	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Ward	Alexander	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Grossman	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Walker-Ridder	Hixson	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tiffany	Hodges	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francis	Itzoe	New Freedom	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	ODonnell	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trent	Schroyer	Warwick	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Yourczek	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy/Dan	Fischer	Burtonsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Nye	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Ernst	Burtonsville	Maryland

I oppose the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. Such a merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. It is critical that the FCC stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Smith	Media	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Hemming	Beverly Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Donald	Woodland Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Tompkins	Batavia	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Meegan	Evergreen Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Ashton	Pinehurst	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Vingris	Loveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Shiffner	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katharine	Christie	Etna	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Phillips	Hollis	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Dukovich	Frankenmuth	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. Please stand on the right side of history and block this merger, which is dangerous for our democracy.

Jim	Snee	Center Rutland	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Danowski	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Johnson	Minong	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Friedman	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bert	Gagnon	Dunnellon	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Gitterman	YPSILANTI	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Siek	Farmington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Travis	Ross	New Albany	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Bailey	Friant	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Paoli	Iowa	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Markman	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Weller	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Darlington	Poughkeepsie	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ira	kanter	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Washburn	Roseville	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Modugno	Bartlett	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Ducey	Woodacre	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jim	steger	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Lees	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Huggins	Niagara Falls	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johnny	Wilson	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Pegg	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valyrie	Laedlein	South Orange	New Jersey	I am writing to implore you to stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger, as it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. We rely on a diverse, open media to assure information flows freely to the citizens of this democracy. A merger of this proportion would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press by irreparably shaping the market dynamics that assure an array of views.
Howard	Passel	Jackson Hts	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We need more competition in TV broadcasting and, especially, broadcast news. Assurances by corporations, especially by Sinclair, that the need for unbiased, properly covered local news coverage will be respected. Sinclair's record of biased, ideological news broadcasts demonstrates that any assurances it gives to provide for the news needs of its communities after the merger simply cannot be taken seriously.
				Please reject the Sinclair-Tribune merger, which would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would put the FCC and the government on the side of repressing free speech and the airing of diverse views in the press that would severely damage

Maria	Zawacki	Johnsburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Todd	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Moser	Pikeville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
miriam	savad	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edgar	Williams	Ormond Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chesli	Nigra	Carbondale	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Allen	Eastpointe	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Couts	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Cassell	Woodcliff Lake	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Morelli	Chesterfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Garritson	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Pfleeger	Gulfport	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Mullen	Saint Charles	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hedda	Koslow	Miami Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Herman	Hardy	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Lazer	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gailya	Silhan	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Fogg	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jake	B	Inver Grove Heights	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Long	Loveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Storch	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Hoitomt	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eryn	Hoerig	Wheat Ridge	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tony	McCraney	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Rojo	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary Kay	Crowther	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Werth	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Rottenberg	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Bollock	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Tozer	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Ernest	Minneapolis	Minnesota	Please block the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Paige	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faith	Oremland	Bloomington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Blank	Comstock Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abdul Rahman	Yakan	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jana	Rono	Sanford	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Duane	Diefenbach	Bellefonte	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Enrique	Baloyra	Biscayne Park	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Joynes	Marlton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Halstead	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Heinz	Lawrence	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ericka	Schrag	Goshen	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Wood	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Shook	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Martin	Beltsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edyta	Zielinska	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Schneller	Cranford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melanie	Card	North Branch	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele L	Nichols	Zanesfield	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Vautrin	Hellertown	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Roberson	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ines	Neuhaus	Key Biscayne	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Autumn	Whewell	Charlestown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Hurst	Westfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jose	Alvarado	Colorado Springs	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamara	Straus	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Max	Obuszewski	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicholas	Robinson	OAK PARK	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Gateley	Sterling	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Newman	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Sasser-Sullivan	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dr. Bruce	Thomas	Akron	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mae	Sterrett	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Bryant	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Bufton	Brookeville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Small	FORTUNA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Vairo	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tan	Twhigg	Cape Elizabeth	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Wilson	Poway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Hager	Seminole	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stella	Bloom	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Colflesh	Leesport	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Moody-Arndt	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Lawrence	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celeste	Van Dorp	Mokena	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hilary	Bernstein	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	franklin	seymour	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Kottiel	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Tulliver	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cecilia	Gaston	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clara	Marin	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggy	Rushton-Witmyer	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maurice	Stewart	Missouri City	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregory	Johnson	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danna	Dykstra-Coy	Cayucos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Dobson	Bradfordwoods	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Sickles	des moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Doris	Rausch	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgette	Fennell	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fred	Bailey	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Riddle	Huntington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Traer	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Kennedy	Winston-Salem	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Banaszak	Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonne	Beavers	San Lorenzo	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lesa	Boettcher	Altamonte Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kazimer	Skubi	New Haven	Connecticut

Millions of Americans rely on local news and TV broadcasts to stay informed about current events. In today's heated political climate, it is as important as ever that people have access to fair, unbiased reporting from which to get their news.

Sinclair Broadcasting has already demonstrated a profound lack of objectivity, forcing local stations to run politically biased news pieces. This proposed merger with Tribune Media would only further exacerbate the problem, giving the new conglomerate unprecedented power over the US media.

Keith	D'Alessandro	Canton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Krasovec	Ranchos de Taos	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Brass	Roseville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hana	Baldwin	Ozark	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Fuld	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amelia	Glynn	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alicia	Truman	Littleton	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Gaffney	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Breny	New Milford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwen	D'Arcangelis	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Audrey	Robinson	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerry	Bullock-Ozkan	Carrboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marion	Posner	New York, NY	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Bailey	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivonne	Maza	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Felicia	Bruce	Fort Pierce	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raymond	Hellkamp	Guilderland	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

titia	saville	Black Mountain	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Kosterich	Wayne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Bryson	Lizella	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rob	Bril	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Edwards	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Chao	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dillingham	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Caitlin	Swanson	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Berardi	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jade	Gurss	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Cowger	Wheeling	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Ogden	Middleburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Serelda	Elliot	Faber	Virginia	Please don't allow this dangerous merger!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Cheri	Gaspero	Beecher	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Joyce	Richmond	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melinda	Skinner	Richmond	Virginia

Please do not allow a Sinclair-Tribune merger, which contradicts the FCC's own policies. We need diverse views-- accessible far and wide in the press. That is one of the vital necessities for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Woodrow	Tyler	Dexter	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Giesler	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Conklin	Bray	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Philip	de Carlo	Keansburg	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Messing	Traverse City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Travis	Lohrer	Oxford	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Grossman	Hartsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katharine	winderlin	Ipswich	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Mest	Phoenixville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Boas	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

william	mcnellis	Annandale	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
April	Schlenk	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

neal	peterson	loves park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Adams	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Delatte	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna D	Varcoe	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Grand	Cumming	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please.

John	Willis	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth	Blau	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Fitts	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Abeles	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cassandra	Hudson	Calumet City	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Swanson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Colin	Pine	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Gullickson	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betsy	Harrison	Wheat Ridge	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Herman	Simon	Chapel Hill	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Kazdan	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Sparks	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bianca	Lanza	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Gessley	Granbury	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Yandel	Sun City	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Nelson	Belfast	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Misty	Richmond	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Vick	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Shephard	Fort Worth	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Weill	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Rupp	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Cook	Chino Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shira	Burton	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Love	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janet	Henker	Rohnert Park	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A broad and diversely owned media structure is critical to fair, broad based news reporting & our democracy. It is a linchpin to keeping out-of-control government in check and protecting our freedoms under the constitution. Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Beverly	Timson	Chadds Ford	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Lou	Burke	Chesapeake	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Dungee	Carol Stream	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Barrow	Aspen	Colorado

Please prevent the proposed merger of Sinclair and Tribune Media. I believe such a merger would be detrimental for our democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Mae	New York	New York	I stand with the ACLU on this issue. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jared	Farmer	East Rochester	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	West	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Wightman	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Dubois	Albany	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Patton	Brook park	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome

Barbara	Rice	Lafayette Hill	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Lou	Burke	Chesapeake	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

wendy	gochenaur	bloomington	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Caitlyn	Geist	Royersford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Nelken	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Joseph	Ossining	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Antevil	Rhinebeck	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Marx	Egg Harbor Townshi	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Sheffield	Independence	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carole	Huddleston	Oakwood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janis	Beard	Ypsilanti	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
gale	Delatte	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Csernecky	Carolina Shores	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
tracy	bloom	Southport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Girdley	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Bower	Williamsport	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Jannetti	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Sosnowski	Shamong	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Sabin	East Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Batzer	Dewitt	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Shapiro	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lorna	Rose	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Stewart	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Molly	Donato	Huntingdon Valley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	O'Brien	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jJoseph	urrea	Fillmore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Neumann	Hillsboro	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Bray	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymond	Hellkamp	Guilderland	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Munkel-Olson	Inver Grove Heights	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Sneddon	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Anderson	Chesterton	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tracy	bloom	Southport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Adams	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Jumonville	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Gary	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Summers	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marsha	West	Monroe	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Pryjma	Kingston	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nirmal	Bhagabati	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Morecock	Niwot	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Rausch	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Svetlana	Ushakova	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geri	Sanders	Emmett	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Crosset	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Eileen	Howell	Tucson	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vanessa	Sternick	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Brown	Danville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Smith	Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tahira	Tasneem	Woodhaven	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Schwarz	Floral Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicholas	Kanellopoulos	Flushing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kayla	Flam	Park Ridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dimitrios	Springfield	Springfield	Pennsylvania

Don't allow the merger. Do your job and block media monopolies.

Denise	Swisher	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Levy	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Nelson	Belfast	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dora	Lezovich	Fowlerville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Chung	Fresh Meadows	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
autumn	dornfeld	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Matchett	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Villere	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Morris	High Point	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Peck	Brunswick	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Douglas	Cohoes	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pippa	Pearthree	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Suh	Hilliard	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Chermak	Moscow	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Malkoc	Lawrenceville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sidne	Baglini	Malvern	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Sheehy	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Markewitz	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Shaw	South Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Hawkes	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Burolla	Sedona	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	House	vienna	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Swisher	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Knight	Frisco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Lamb	Seal Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Steputat	Lewiston	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Fecteau	Farmington	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
S	Lerer	Hillsborough	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Lee	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Bramblett	Whitney	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tia	Pearson	Wahiawa	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Armando	Maggi	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Bender	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christina	Hodges	Chesterfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brad	Bennett	Ancramdale	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Tannebaum	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Bassett	Kanawha	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Lehman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Giannella	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Darrell	Peck	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Gherardi	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geri	Sanders	Emmett	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Ray	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hank	Hammett	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Smith	brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Stanley	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerri	Powers	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Fronck	White Plains	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Knippenberg	Hartland	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Hall	Glenwood Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renae	DeLucia	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Burns	Delray Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Gralley	Hanover	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mr Nicholas	Myers	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roman	Boulatov	Rocky River	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John Allen	Kumor, Ph.D.	Pueblo	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Thomborson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Lotito	garden city	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Connors	N Kingstown	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julian	Reeves	Woodbridge	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Stoker	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Hyland	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Rowan	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francis	Marcellino	Eldersburg	Maryland

If the Sinclair-Tribune merger goes through, Sinclair would gain unp

Dana	Cardullo	Teaneck	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glen	Bledsoe	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Grigsby	Davidsonville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Cocca	North Scituate	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Johnson	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mandy	Hoy	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I value local news, written and reported locally.

Monica	DeAngelis	Mahwah	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Sylvester	Richmond	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Krause	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	Ramsey	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	von Wrangell	Cutler Bay	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Chase	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Daarstad	Sandpoint	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Ziser	Milford	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Harnish	Wheat Ridge	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dewey	Updegraff	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Pay	Essex Junction	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gustafson	Moline	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryce	Cronkite-Ratcliff	Woodside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Thompson	Maple Plain	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gillian	Neff	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Stewart	Newport News	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Cullen	Janesville	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephan	Melnick	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mallory	smith	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rod	Mattison	Cottonwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Davis	Cos Cob	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanneke	Verschuur	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Williamson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarilyn	Hogan	White lake	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Northcutt	Conshohocken	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerome	Blackburn	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

amanda	n	centreville	Virginia	NO to a Sinclair-Tribune merger!! NO NO NO!
Erica	Barbee	Katy	Texas	It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Sizemore	HIGHLAND PARK	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Bippert	Simi Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Funk	MOBILE	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elia	Johnson	Euless	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Morrison	Rancho Mirage	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Tuominen	Granville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Ambrosino	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Baxter	Hyattsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bethany	Borak	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Traina	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Stewart	Newport News	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Temple	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Schlumpf	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynda	West	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Clark Upton	Newport	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darrah	Hopper	Chester	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Robertson	New Windsor	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Mills	South River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Burmester	Creve coeur	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Parker	Dooley	MELFA	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Kanka	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Heines	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Fetzko	Landover	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Gordon	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Jeschke	Bettendorf	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C	Moses	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Tuominen	Granville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Aller	Gaithersburg	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Carr	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lizabeth	Rachele	Clifton Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Weidner	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bertha	Simkin	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Genieve	Guevara-Grimes	Palestine	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Hayre	New Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Etling	Lees Summit	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Raiber	Hopkins	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edelmira	Bosques	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
