Eleanor	Yasgur	Teaneck	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Markowitz	Pound Ridge	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robbie	Wright	Pahrump	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caryn	Karo	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nanette	Pavona	Hillsborough	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

PL	Lim	Lutherville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Rodriguez	Venice	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonio	Alvarez	Marshall	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leoncio	Estevez-Reyes	Whippany	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Chelland	Norton Shores	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Ecton	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Lemmon	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jocelyn	Juan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

leslie	jaffe	ranchos de taos	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chuck	Graver	Southampton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Nelson	Raritan	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Moore	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

E.	Price	Corpus Christi	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ethan	Cornell	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Colver	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dominique	Edmondson	Upper Marlboro	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Reiss	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helene	Scola	Newport	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Selene	Vigil	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	van den Honert	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Jacobson	La Crescenta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Streeter	Shoreview	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Baughman	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Higgins	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Smith	ITHACA	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Dissinger	Newtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Davis	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Huebner	Durham	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Davis	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David and Lydia	Roane	Johnson City	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Kauffman	Waterford	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abelardo	Mieres	Missouri City	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	O'Brien	Hoboken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Smith	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Silvey	Seminole	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Zajac	Roseville	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Prudence F	Roberts	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alissa	Sollitto	Endicott	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Smith	Presque Isle	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Robinson	Cohocton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Dye	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Reed	Chattanooga	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Rose	Prairie Village	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael R	Kennedy	Albany	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Williamson	Towson	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Chew	Eagleville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caryn	Relkin	Sandia Park	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rett	Anger	Bedford Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Chappell	Williamsburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Stinchecum	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vesela	Simic	Vernon Hills	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynne	Lokken	Prior Lake	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Cosejo	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Plihcik	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Quinn	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Shepherd	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Towne	Grand Forks	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carlin	Meyer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabrielle	Kayser	Hicksville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Kingston	Brunswick	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Colucci	Glen Head	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra D.	Pappano	Mattawamkeag	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Martin	Danbury	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Coughlin	Fort Pierce	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elena	McCants	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hadi	Hafizi	Willow Springs	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carmen	Redding	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nixi Otemba	Bongers	Roby	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

RAYMOND	SPROGIS	COLUMBUS	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Beatty	Belding	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Estelle	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Parish	Magnolia	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emilie	Trautmann	New Paltz	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Meyer	Burke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Watts	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is truly urgent.

Lynn	Viale	Gilroy	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Gray	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Regan	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melisa	Saraceni	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Ramsey	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roy	Conard	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
steven	wolf	burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Good	Lancaster	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Stern	Solana Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger is detrimental to democracy! It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Wallens	St Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Moss	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rich	Jones	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Marriott	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurette	Cucuzza	Kensington	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Conrad	Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lovice	Holland	Naples, Fl	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Mair	Macomb	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Becker	Harpers Ferry	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Taylor	Delray Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Morin	Kennebunk	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Miller	New Port Richey	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randhir	Singh	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Pabst	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Osterhaus	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanne	Elrod	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Millard	Trott	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Cohen	Kalamazo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Jorgensen	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Mills	Bloomfield Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Bogen	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Pawlitschek	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Weinfurter	Temecula	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Garber	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	Vrinios	Morton Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Allen	Cedar Grove	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Levy	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Pasquinelli	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Armando	Maggi	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Bishop	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Joost	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geraldine	Cribbs	Whitehall	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Cole-Dai	Brookings	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	McNamee	Davidson	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

charles	rayner	Storrs	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Janusko	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dm	Davey	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Valentine	Loveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

margaret	fachini	Chadds Ford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Robert	Post	Absecon	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A diverse media landscape is vital for a democracy to work properly. A single conglomerate with a reach approaching 75% of US households hold far too little diversity than a democracy can survive in. Please stop being a lap dog for corporate interests.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Aviva	Satz-Kojis	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Clark	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Wood	Coraopolis	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Kinser	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eudora	Peterson	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Turner	University Park	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonid	Korogodski	Southampton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Battaglia	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Houston	Saint Louis	Missouri	I’m not super keen to live in any more of a dystopian nightmare than we already do. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Shaida	Nakhla	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Derrig	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elise	Seraus	Shelburne	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Montanero	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Adam	Reese	Wynnewood	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Hamburg	Midland	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Blair	Glendale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Niday	Wellston	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cassie	Koomjian	Seattle	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Messinger	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Shilling	Aurora	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We can not permit a station promoting it's own self interest above

P	Corrigan	Placerville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Primrose	Upper Marlboro	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clayton	Cowles	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Hugo	Olney	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Francis	Secaucus	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Hoel	Croswell	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Coffey	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valerie	King	englewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Limburg	Nelsonville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Lambert	New Braunfels	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	de Seve	Gilmanton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Green	Kaysville	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Hein	Osseo	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marvin	Sezak	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margherita	Andreotti	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Taylor	Flanery	West Lafayette	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwen	Lanoux	Erath	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claudia	Zelevansky	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Wing	Newnan	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Herrmann	Ellicott City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Speer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristi	McNamara	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Grossman	Hartsdale	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Reinecke	Alburtis	Pennsylvania

Please do not allow the Sinclair-Tribune merger as it would create a

Abby	Sugrue	Falls Church	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Hyra	Brielle	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hector	Cintron	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Ulrich	Bronxville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vesela	Simic	Vernon Hills	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Walsh	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Mcbean	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Frith	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Lisk	Amherst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Spurr	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Thomas	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Coatoam	Painesville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

d	carr	hanover	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
herb	reichenbach	Port Washington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Rountree	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaci	Christenson	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Maffie	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Longyear	Yorktown Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regina	Gandour-Edwards	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Tuzo	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Groetzinger	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Monica	Coyne	Newmarket	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Luongo	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrice	Brown	Louisburg	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Tompkins	Vero Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rika	van Dam	Marina del Rey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Casey	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
RED	McKENNA	Astoria	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Del	Parra	Libertyville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stewart	Isaacs	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Dunham	Center Barnstead	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Milford	Lavin	Indian Land	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Alger	Berkshire	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Greenwood	Carrollton	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Knopinski	Lincoln	Nebraska	Don't do this. It's dangerous and will impact Americans ability to hear accurate and informative news. An informed electorate is the bedrock of any Democracy and I'm not sure we can survive as a democracy without it.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Doyle	Primm	Nashville	Tennessee
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chester	Luby	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mercy	Drake	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Reed	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mary	henry	whitestone	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Collins	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Zweimueller	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Warren	Bacon	Binghamton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Ausen	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JEFF	POOLE	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Amundson	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adina	Beaumont	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosemary T	Clough	Hollis	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Miller	Millersville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Burner	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

HUNTER	HORNBY	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roma	Panganiban	Morristown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Howard	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janet	Wright	Ypsilanti	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As a person of faith, I am very concerned about a possible Sinclair-Tribune merger. I believe that every one of God's children should be able to make their own considered decisions about their lives and their country, based on information from more than one perspective. A merger such as this would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Melody	Shapiro	Hood River	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lai-San	Seto	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Denton	Maple City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Urogdy Eiler	Chagrin Falls	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Cogan	Saline	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Barker	Grottoes	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Tate	Belleville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Iris	Demello	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Davison	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Smith	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Kershner	Selinsgrove	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Crum	la mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Glenberg	Chicago	Illinois
Paul	Eaken	Reading	Pennsylvania	Please do not allow the Sinclair/Tribune merger. No organization sh A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Herndon	Springfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Otherwise, we're moving toward George Orwell's vision of "newsspeak," where we are given misinformation in the guise of news, and are presented with no alternatives.
Rachel	Johnson	Santa Fe	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Locke	Dearborn Heights	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charmaine	Ross	Pinehurst	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Michell	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerritt	Rogalski	Ft Lauderdale	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Levatich	Brooktondale	New York	Partisan media, left or right, should not be allowed to dominate any media market. The Fourth Estate should be as objective as possible or our representative government will not serve the people of our nation well. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Caryn	Maclean	Westport	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleanor	Weisman	Meadville	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Ginther	Gary	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Tripp	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jackie	Sandler	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I do not want to see one company feeding propaganda to my living room....stop this action now! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonnette	Graham	Shaker Heights	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosie	Pfarr-Baker	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Katzen	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Molly	Rushefsky	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Polina	Bukshpun	Burlingame	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
A	Corey	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrill	Carter	Lakewood	Colorado	Free speech is or most important right. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
paige	humphreys	smyrna	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Ziegler	Kutztown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Alff	East Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Pickett	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Herbert	Florence	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Huver	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue Ellen	Lupien	Maumelle	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Turner	Harrison	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abigail	Forester	Urbana	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Stone	Metamora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Wooley	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Brockway	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roland	Lawrence	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Latta	Aztec	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Joseph	Sokol	Durham	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Honemann	Cary	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Oropallo	Peterborough	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Cell	Seabrook	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myla	Butz	Champlin	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Benni	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Ravel	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Fowler	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
norman	lind	East Boothbay	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Mutterperl	New Hope	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carl	Ross	Queensbury	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Peirce	Clive	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle a diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I'm also unsure how this gets around laws that prevent monopolies.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Bodoff	Ventnor	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Sutton	Midlothian	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Coble	Mint Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Greci	Fairbanks	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsey	Huddleston	Saint Charles	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judi	Poulson	Fairmont	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Scancarella	Clifton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Ostrow	Superior	Arizona	Allowing this merger is another step in making this once great country a moder day Nazi Germany.
				This is will be a horrifying propaganda machine. DO NOT ALLOW THIS TO HAPPEN!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jonathan	Greene	Barnardsville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Lipps	Shawnee Mission	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do not sacrifice our First Amendment Rights!!!
Doris	Sher	Maplewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Waak	Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Norton	Pleasanton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Niles	North Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Salmonsen	Murphy	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gai	Galitzine	Kingston	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Percy	Irving	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Senesman	Mount Airy	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Lehman	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Ziegler	Conshohocken	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita	Rhynes	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Albertson	Averill Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lois	Remick	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gordon	Levin	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Libby	Villavicencio	Westerville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Belanger	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Moss	Wallingford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Damita	Fuller	Schaumburg	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jill	Langford	Silver Spring	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. There must be NO Sinclair merger. A free and independent press is one of the cornerstones of our democracy. Sinclair is dangerous and needs to be stopped. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Clinton	Cox	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Hooper	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mildred	Pond	New Preston	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Zefran	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting DICTATORSHIP of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sinclair Broadcasting may be a puppet company of Putin’s Russia.

Rebecca	Rabinowitz	Mount Laurel	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Thomson	Southfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Williams	Tujunga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Follweiler	Madison	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Ramirez	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Woodworth	Athens	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Spolum	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nichole	Tyska	Portland	Oregon

Just please don’t. Sinclair has a bias and forces news anchors to reac

Melissa	Bigg	Hot Springs	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thom	Baker	Huachuca City	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Althoff	S Jacksonvle	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alysia	Tacinelli	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terri	Scott	Charleston	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Kulp	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lora	Gay	Sagamore Hills	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Henry	New Fairfield	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Murta	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Acuff	Bristol	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Schoenfeld	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Kline	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Klein	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer M	Lewis	West Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Cote	Exeter	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lance	Rommerdahl	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Pricci	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackson	Tetmeyer	Zionsville	Indiana

Stop this merger. It is bad for democracy.

Media monopolies controlled by tiny groups of elites create propaganda, not news. We have already seen the Orwellian "must-run" segments that anchors have been forced to read on Sinclair stations. Local news stations should be editorially independent.

Tanya	Russ	West Reading	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
raul	lima	montebello	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Woodworth	Athens	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Hero	Brooklin	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Elliott	Eightyfour	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
patricia	ellis	lafayette	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Bowers	Lomita	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lory	Lazarus	Bloomfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Madaffer	North Lawrence	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Lessman Katz	Lutherville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noelle	Sciarini	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Markus	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Barger	Sullivan	Missouri
Barbara	Wright	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

In this country, we have an imperative ideal that bans monopolies

The Sinclair-Tribune merger is a threat to free speech and puts too r

Carol	Metz	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corey	Stone	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Simon	Branton-Housley	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Rashid	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Hondo	Burley	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Chavez Cook	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Whitney	Harborside	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Eng	The Woodlands	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	McPeak	Langhorne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Swenson	Brooklyn Park	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Forde	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Nettleton	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Devon	Little	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianne	Ewing	Bolinas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Young	Fletcher	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Adrian	Lathrup Village, MI	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriel	Ramirez Palacios	Farmington Hills	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penni	Saperstone	Wimauma	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gale	Hannigan	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Brendle	New Boston	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jameson	Owens	Lawton	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Rutherford	Aliquippa	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Seibert	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Sicklesteel	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fernando	Lenis	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Kopec	Germantown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Landry	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Travis	Fort Wayne	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Kennedy	Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karyn	Deibel	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	McDonough	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Smith	Swannanoa	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Hou	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Hopper	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Doucette	Providence	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Donson	Davidson	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlos	Rodriguez	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Maxwell	Vandalia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Hoffman	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Vandecar	Davenport	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lyndy	Buglio	Frankfort	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Yager	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Irwin	Mckinney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Brechbiel	Crystal Lake	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Ball	Euclid	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Liversedge	South Hero	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Ferretti	Fair Haven	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Hull	Newtown	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Erickson	Kingston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ericka	Carter	Van Nuys	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Hautamaki	Harrison Township	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janice	Stycos	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Goldberg	WILLOW GROVE	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Sefscik	Dunnellon	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mathew	Garrett	Gloucester City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Howard	Jackson	Oldsmar	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A company that sprays propaganda should not be approved.

Eileen	Hunter	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

April	Andrews	Jersey City	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Langford	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathe	Feist	Cincy	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charna	Walnum	San Ramon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Bernard	Rowlett	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Sarnoff	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Adam	Fisher	Port Jefferson Statio	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Overton	Rowlett	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Schairer	Sedona	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Douglas	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Debaugh	Sparrows Point	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Smith	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan R	Smith	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Bjorlie	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nan	Corliss	Bloomington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Ecton	Front Royal	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Miller	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Carpenter	Lake Orion	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leigh	Walker	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ALEXANDER	MCLEAN	TEMPERANCE	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ben	Hess	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alissa	Schriner	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Falk	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Shear	Troy	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	L	Allejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Herr-Rains	Vienna	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sammia	Panciocco	Salem	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Thorsen	Corning	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Kinsel	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Hexamer	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Briggs	Lindsborg	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Wilson	Alpharetta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emilio	Renzi	Rome	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emilie	Marlier	Morgantown	West Virginia

Allowing the merger of Sinclair and Tribune would be a huge disservice to the country. The free press and free speech that we need, and which are defended by the First Amendment, depend on maintaining diverse and independent news sources.

In the interest of democracy, the FCC should block this merger. A giant broadcasting conglomerate with even more control over local stations' content would exacerbate an already dysfunctional system that puts too much power in the control of too few people. Please choose to support more diversity in reporting. Thank you.

Elyse	Stewart	River Edge	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Rodabaugh	Rensselaer	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fari	Nzinga	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Walchuk	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Meyer	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Ryan	Green Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita-Ann	Fitzgerald	Essex	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daryl	Weis	West Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sabina	Sloman	Pittsburgh	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Roberts-Moneir	Gulfport	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Smith	Winter Haven	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Rinesmith	St. Peters	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	August	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Van Buskirk	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martin	Pinter	Atlanta	Georgia

I am totally opposed to the Sinclair-Tribune merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Make no mistake; Sinclair is a propaganda machine with no interest in fairness. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint

Jamie	Gloor	Boiling Springs	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Wagner	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Dean	Spartanburg	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James M	Gilchrist	Lebanon	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristofer	Keyser	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I urge the FCC to stop this merger. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Weiss	Larkspur	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Van Ness	Holderness	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Russell	Stoneback	Plano	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Strempek	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Dody	Spring Lake	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Gotvald	Pleasant Hill	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanna	Liao	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not repeat the mistakes of the past.

Lloyd	Shane	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Reo	Harrison	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Dawson	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	S	WILMINGTON	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L.	Caldwell	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anders	Korn	Horseheads	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Kuelper	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Monroe	Rockport	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	DiSante	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Haefele	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamara	Sackman	East Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allison	fairchild	richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lyle	Jensen	Stoddard	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Jeffrey	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Friedmann	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Serlen	Freeport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Holmers	Howard Lake	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Martin	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Hassig	Mount Prospect	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Shaw	Hillsborough	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janilyn	Harding	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Smallwood-Beltran	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evan	Kutta	Morgantown	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecilia	Scow	Roscommon	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Lee	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Loper	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachael	Sample	New Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	McCarley	Bonaire	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Cummins	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Audrey	Dillard	Kansas City	Kansas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We have already seen how Sinclair scripted news works from the video that Deadspin put together that exposed the way Sinclair repeatedly injects politically-charged segments into local news, which otherwise typically avoid ideological punditry. It shows local broadcasters reading a script imposed on them by a giant, nationwide conglomerate to convey a political message about – ironically – the importance of apolitical coverage and local control.

Katie	Boyle	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wes	Donithan	Ashburn	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Guier	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Boglitz	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Oberdorfer	Falls Church	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Work	Stillwater	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Bordett	Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Avett	Wichita	Kansas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sinclair is an agenda, not a determinator of facts. People can not make good decisions without good data. Their counting on it. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Charisse	Reid	South Elgin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Bishop	bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S. E.	Williams	Stafford	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
TREVOR	COMBS	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Hogg	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Van Harn	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Enita	Berkheiser	Saint Petersburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Collings	Berea	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Brantley	Freeville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim And Theresa	Burch	Damariscotta	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Briney	Oakmont	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Davis	Wakarusa	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Mccarter	Ravenna	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Scherokman	Vienna	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Walters	Hibbing	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Bay	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Hale	Lovell	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Miller	Hagerstown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Boellstorff	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evan	Ravitz	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol D	Busseau	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Babin	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Hinman	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Copeland	Youngstown	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Tobe	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Rico	Monterey Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Farabaugh	Catonsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
kimberly	schwanke	Chittenango	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sullivan	Bradley	Sidney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Cowden	Blacksburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lonna	Murphy	Verona	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cecile	Kraus	Glenview	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Olderr	Hattiesburg	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Duke	Elgin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

betty	vickrey	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Veronica	Blevins	El Prado	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Creasey	Cedar Falls	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Gowen	Flint Hill	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tammi	Haynes	Belleville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Don	Beeson	Rye	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Watterson	The Villages	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Berlant	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Frame	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Brust	Richfield	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Ross	Union Dale	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Abby	Cohen	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV PROPOGANDA conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Rozin	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	McNeal	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Bergfeld	Holts Summit	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edmund	Kasubinski	Monroe Township	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Fenster	Bradley Beach	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarna	Lapine	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Weinstein	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carlotta	Ripley	Niles	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	McCallum	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger and Anne	Chappelka	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darby	Tarr	Carthage	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Allen	Senoia	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Melman	Bala Cynwyd	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Postel	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gibson	Venice	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Cunniff	Clifton Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Ochoa	Huntington Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Friedman	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Kubiak	New Hope	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bob	Savino	KANSAS CITY	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Lee	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Cunha	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackie	Payne	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diana	Estrada	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	McGuire	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Edelman	Playa Del Rey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Almond	Eastland	Edmond	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Sechrist	Rochester	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Eisenstein	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald II	Sandstrom	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Aziz	Irvington	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Lau	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terrance	Grogan	Ocean City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Casey	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Neskauskas	Santa Fe	New Mexico	Please stop this merger!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Patricia	Hoffstrom	Wyoming	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jana	Hirschtick	Forest Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Carolyn	Deyo	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Throughout our nation's history, Americans have worked to allow paths to prosperity for all while at the same time balancing this with checks on the richest and most powerful, understanding that they could gradually erode our democracy. We have depended on honest government and its agencies to make these reasonable controls, since the rich and powerful are just that. Now the FCC is tested: is it really only an arm of the rich and powerful? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Megan	Chan	Palmetto	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Shafer RN	Bloomfield	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Herrman	Marble Canyon	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Bering	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Eberts	Fanwood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Becca	Marcus	Williamsburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Bezler	Fairfield	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Firestone	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Siravo	Hatboro	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joyce	Clark	Tinton Falls	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Foster	South Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Ward	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Zardecki	JERSEY CITY	New Jersey	This is insanity.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Cheri	Elson	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Heller-Mesznik	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Bihler	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Harms	Morehead City	North Carolina

Don't allow this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Paro	Daytona Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias. This undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Tishler	Manhasset	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rich	Lucas	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate too large and powerful. Sinclair's broadcasts portray bias and undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must block this merger.

Deborah	Zdobinski	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackqueline	Baer	Dix Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Hill	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mel	Krupa	Flower Mound	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raven	Dorantes	JACKSON HEIGHTS	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
nancy	mintz	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeleine	Tompkins	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Bultot	Jamaica	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lillian	Dennis	Beaufort	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wesley	Wolf	Barrington	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Hargrave	Custer	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Stroud	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Sarnoff	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Lipsky	Scotch Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Zier	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Steiner	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taylor	Marino	Coraopolis	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kirk	Olsen	Rancho Mirage	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruby	Richmond	Brentwood	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Wheet	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jenny	Mottola	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dee	Noblett	Mechanicville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

K	Lewis	albion	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Emfinger	Baltimore	Maryland	YOU KNOW IT IS WRONG, so DO NOT DO IT!!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joey	Mukherjee	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Alles	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ana	Lopez	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benna	Sherman	Severna Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Al	Luque	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Spicer	North Tustin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Kobin	Wilton	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nik	Thompson	Wilton	New Hampshire

This merger would be a massive violation of free press and the free

Peter	Zimmer	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Murray	Santa Clara	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Kowalski	Eaton Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	King	Perkasie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Sperber	Dobbs Ferry	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	McMurry	Charlottesville	Virginia

Please do not allow the merger between Sinclair and Tribune Media

C	Leak	Bx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
K	M	ABQ	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Hensley	Minneapolis	Minnesota	"SAVE CAPITALISM!" CAPITALISM THRIVES ON COMPETITION, NOT MONOPOLY! AND DEMOCRACY DEPENDS ON COMPETITON OF IDEAS!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
Gabrielle	Harlan	Long Beach	California
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianne	Dietrich	Pleasantville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Kristoff	Oldenburg	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Smith	Northfield	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of news in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Howe	Brunswick	Maine

I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger for the following reasons. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Kleine	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Flores	Hampton Bays	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Baughman	Westminster	Maryland	This is an unacceptable monopoly on the distribution of information and opinion in our nation. Sinclair's coverage is blatantly partisan, and its tactic of requiring all stations to deliver the same one-sided messages in its mandatory segments clearly infringes on the rights of a free press. Rural and small-town areas in particular, among the most likely to have their media outlets taken over by this merger that clearly exists only to serve the narrow interests of the current administration, deserve better access to diverse viewpoints and impartial journalism.
Kara	Huey	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Tulys	Hopelawn	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
bonnie	benjamin	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Borzotta	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	The trend of media companies growing in size and influence is dangerous.
Donald	Crook	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Putnam	Hanover	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Millard	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Harrison	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Doug	Nesbitt	Rolla	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Maass	Sleepy Hollow	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

barbara	gee	Poway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Degman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Thorman	Shaker Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Waltzer	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Smith	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessie	Kingston	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allistor	Duche	Parker	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Uozumi	Howell	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theresa	Gonzalez	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Roberts	Spearfish	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sonia	Ness	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Kafka	Commack	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Brodsky	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

B	Maddalena	Teaneck	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Grant	Wilson	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	McCracken	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dwight	Alpern	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Steinberg	West Creek	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Figtree	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

gary	frank	Oneonta	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Hillringhouse	Verona	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ayrol	Young	Parkton	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Jones	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Larson	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Broadbent	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Asterino	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Pratt	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Migneault	West Kingston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stan	Sheppard	Port Chester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Manoogian	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Kurland	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Ripper	FORT BELVOIR	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Murdock	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Alex	Terlingua	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mike	toppe	Hopkins	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Miller	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Palmeri	Coral Gables	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stan	Young	Elizabethton	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Deck	Elk River	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo	Hood	Clayton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jade	Rubick	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C.	Thompson	Cottage Grove	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
maggie	cohen	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Nelson	Newark	Delaware

I am deeply concerned about the ongoing aggregation of formerly independent media outlets into a small number of national companies. In particular, a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power and I believe would contradict the FCC's own policies. The American public requires a diversity of views in the press in order to make the critical decisions in front of us. Centralization of disproportionate ownership of the media by either left or right in inconsistent with our democracy.

I urge the FCC to stand with the great tradition of informed debate in our country and block this merger.

Michael	McFail	Laurel	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Piowaty	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristine	Washburn	Colton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Bitan	Falmouth	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joselle	Seitz	Felton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Malosh	Livonia	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jennifer	Davy	San Antonio	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not allow the merger between Sinclair and Tribune. The media is already too consolidated leading to a serious lack of diversity and under-represented voices. We must put an end to this 'corporatocracy'. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				It has been analyzed numerous times that Sinclair's broadcasts consistently biased. Merging such viewpoints would undermine the diversity of perspectives desired in healthy democracies and their free press—a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 barbara	cicalese	Ardmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Whitehead	Germantown Hills	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniela	Roth	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Hamann	Red Wing	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vanessa	Stephens-Lee	Seaford	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Bradley	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

vik	h	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Howerton	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adriana	Palmer	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Bachman	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Woodrow	Sullivan	Edwardsville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Whitney	Kleinhenz	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Ray	Rhinecliff	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Reed	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Weiss	Trenton	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Mcnulty	Studio city	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Missie	Thurston	Essex Junction	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Wallace	Livingston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Kreps	Germantown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Taylor	Alta Loma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janette	Bianco	Pleasant Mount	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Blitefield	Warren	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Lutz	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bob	Trotman	Casar	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Wilson	Newbury	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	McIvor	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Brown	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chrystal	Price	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Sweet	Saratoga Springs	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Carson	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Gindhart	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicholas	Chinovnikov	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Lauzon	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Schapiro	Vestal	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Ostrander	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Dabrowski	Culpeper	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Hoover	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelli	Wilks	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jordan	Norris	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Messing	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecile	Spellman	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Pettit	Cotter	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Swartz	Appomattox	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Arneson	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Ashley	New Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jackie	Scully-Clark	PLAINFIELD	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Meccarello	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ermioni	greinke	springfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Reponen	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kenneth	Kornheiser	Plainwell	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Uleman	Pearl River	New York	I am concerned about the growing role of monopolies in our society, particularly in communications. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Seiple	Canton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carloa	Teran	Kennedale	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Montana	Finksburg	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Bailey	Redding	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Dailey	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Robey	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marsha	Malone	Chino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Selby	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Munir	Tarafdar	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abbie	Lathrop-Savad	Middlesex	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Beran	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Williams	Katy	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Asbury	Morgantown	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Forleo	Warwick	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

julie	joyce	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R	Hardin	Brookings	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Luis	Cortez	Clarendon	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				Don't you dare do this or I will personally beat the shit out of you!

John	Vanover	Traphill	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	ODear	Bellaire	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Skinner	Asheville	North Carolina	I support free speech. This merger would work against free speech as you can see below: A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by
Joel	Kay	Beachwood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Madsen	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allyce	Capps	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Wallace	Addison	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Swayne	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Loverde	Keene	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Ternoir	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kim	Silva	Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Joy	Thornton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Bechard	Fairport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
janet	walley	Decatur	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Rodriguez	Owings Mills	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taguhi	Arakelian	Montebello	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Case	Flushing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margery	Resnick	Lighthouse Point	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sion	Bell	High Point	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Libby	Elliott	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Wilkinson	East Greenwich	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
katharine	winters	Doylestown,	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Balcar	Carmel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Aramaki	Rancho Palos Verdes	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Neuman de Vegvar	Delaware	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynne	Davis	Carbondale	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Hughey	Chamblee	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Buchanan	Winters	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Kenney	Downingtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonny	Stansel	North Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	McKenna	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Powers	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Igor	Tandetnik	Forest Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Shaw	Simi Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Lehr	Omaha	Nebraska	This merger should not be allowed. Free speech and press must be protected. I was shocked that the Sinclair broadcasters imposed a nationwide political script on my local broadcast. Allowing their influence to expand seems contrary to what is the FCC’s role. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Amber	Day	Providence	Rhode Island	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Murphy	Carter	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Mensing	beckemeyer	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Gullett	tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shirley	Espeland	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Lauterbach	Germantown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Kennely-Margolies	Ronkonkoma	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edith (Dee)	Homans	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Iver	Johnson	McHenry	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clifford	Detz	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Boisvert	Grass Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessie	Wofsy	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	McCandless	Fullerton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Salyers	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neil	Semer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Lopez	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Holliday	East Elmhurst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Carlson	Rosemount	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessie	Bond	Libertyville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Risa	Schiff	Ridgewood	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	J. Geddy	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hillary	Kruh	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
cynthia	witt	Bettendorf	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	McGeehan	Tinton Falls	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Justin	Debrosse	East Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

D	Daly	Venice	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
B	Schrader	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Botticelli	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Noveau	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Maddern	Kingsland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Kelso	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	S	Tamarac	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Avery	Lafayette	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Feist	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would contradict the FCC's own policies by creating a broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kurtis	Mitchell	Aurora	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Erreich	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rita	Garvey	Clearwater	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Silva	Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Krismann	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Warfield	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Peter	Bisschop	Tucson	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am worried worried about the loss of diverse voices across the broadcast landscape. This merger will decrease the civility across the country. This merger would virtually guarantee limits on the views that local news stations could express. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

J	Wilkey	Incline Village	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jana	Goncharoff	Suwanee	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Blakeman	Vineland	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Wieland	DEetroit Lakes	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nada	Chandler	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deirdre	Brownell	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Kaggen	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Bravo	Bel Air	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Hadly	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jahna	Balk	Union City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	MacNish	Pleasant Valley	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Park	Yucaipa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Barry	Hardy	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Dickau	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Hinds	Naples	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Wheeler	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Hafner	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Stefan	Jones	Hillsboro	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am deeply concerned about the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Jewell	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Lee	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Martinelli	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Scovill	Mount Shasta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Ross	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Mcnulty	Hudson	New Hampshire

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Simpson	Tuscaloosa	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Woodall	Chevy Chase	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Ferrara	Beachwood	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Bloom	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Yipp	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Harmon	San Marcos	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Cameli	Portland	Oregon

I would like to voice my concern over the long term danger of allowing Sinclair and Tribune to merge. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. I understand the FCC rules are meant to avoid such situations. Such a merger could stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Please carefully consider the long term risk of having a single company control such a large portion of national media.

Gwen	Bair-Loehr	Topeka	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Gilbert	Providence	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cal	Zone	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Murzic	Melbourne	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Takata	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Kernan	Branson	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Don	Morgan	Magalia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marla	Valdez	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Manuel	Lafayette	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luann	Watson	Fort Wayne	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Gordon	Leesburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Koch	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Slater	New Paltz	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Tucker	Warren	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Eccleston	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deirdre	Brownell	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sandra	Rubin	Sebastopol	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We need free speech to Preserve democracy and our country.A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

victoria	Conway	Lilburn	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Casey	Coram	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theodore	Trevor	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Borrus	Manville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Nuss	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Goetz	Wallingford	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherina	Pressman	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katie	Gatto	Toms River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Bachner	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Hugelier	Orion Twp.	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Silverman	Palm Desert	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jon	Berkeley	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Ensworth	Medina	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Heim	Des Plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Heinikel	Eden	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan and Tom	Harry	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Fahringer	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Kern	Cary	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Fitzgerald	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marc	Silverboard	Marietta	Georgia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please oppose this. It creates a dangerous situation where one group will have control over a significant proportion of America's media.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Thomas	Morris	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vanita	Williams	Urbana	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Loren	Clevenger	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Bullock	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Terrizzi	Wilmington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Schlenger	Carson City	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Wassel	North Wales	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Prabhu	Khalsa	Santa Cruz	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcel	Kraus	Virginia Beach	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Simon	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Petrone	Lafayette Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles Paul	Becker	Litchfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathrin	Dodds	Mission	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Melton	Arlington	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Moser	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Wielk	Hartsdale	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Howard	Meriden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Segal	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Scoboria	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Woodrow	Sullivan	Edwardsville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Disanto	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barry	Weinsten	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Francis	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Larkin	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Boutin	Freeport	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kay	Grossman	Shawnee Mission	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Stoken	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Shelton	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Ilyadis	Merrimack	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Madeleine	Burnside	Lake Worth	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. These who control information control the country. We are already having huge problems with distortions of the truth and outright lies in a way that seems unstoppable. But it can get worse!
				Allowing the Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Michele	Norman	Winchester	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Dunfee	Morgantown	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Soletsky	Bellaire	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Dowling	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirsten	Watson	Beech Grove	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Saima	Niamatullah	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seema	Kumar	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	BandyBarteau	Edgewood	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Williams	Wayzata	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Nicely	Bella Vista	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Cole	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Reginald	Gass	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alla	Matusov	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Brousse	Smithville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Wolman	new albany	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dina	Cholack	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annalese	Lynch	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Atkinson	Newark	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Haring	Sullivan	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ted	Shaughnessy	Haymarket	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Paul	Kansas City	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Shay	Williamsburg	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Stuhmer	Germantown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Woodrow	Sullivan	Edwardsville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elana	Horwitz	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clyde	Parker, Jr.	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenny	Valdez	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Abel	Alpharetta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverley	Patrick	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Gross	Moorpark	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Walden	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Pudvan	Belding	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Hewett	Kewadin	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Mills	Wells	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S.	Mohan	Napa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Pesetsky	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Ferguson	Folsom	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kessie	Palmore	Watertown	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Beskin	Sugar Land	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Therese	Pennell	Kinston	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Mosier	Scotts	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adalberto	Araiza	Douglas	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Marks	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Blunk	Algonquin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Swenck	San Marcos	California	I teach journalism, and I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Barton	Carbondale	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Appel	West Windsor	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Laff	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Viskochil	Jackson Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Zupko	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Leichner	San Leandro	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miriam	Danar	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Goldsmith	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Shiver	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Henry	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Resner	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Miller	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Guinn	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Barron	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jm	Lavassaur	Ardmore	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please prohibit the Sinclair-Tribune merger! This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate in this country the power and size of which that it would contradict the FCC's own policies and standards. A mega broadcasting company of this size would stifle our free speech and the unfettered expression of a diversity of views in the press which is a critical element for a healthy democracy. Clearly, Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger to protect the healthy expression of free speech

amy	pick	New Paltz	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Laughren	Highland	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Richardson	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alyssa	Cole	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Peck	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ross	Maddox	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jana	Harter	Canyon Lake	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theresa	Swink	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Bergeron	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ISABELLE	PASTIN	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Greenberg-Perkus	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Meyer	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Rocca-Butler	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Mazza	Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andre	Kervran	Deerfield Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Green	Mooresboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Broadbent	Heber City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denis	Brousse	Smithville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonell	Davies	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Delana	Lands	Georgetown	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larissa	Cranmer	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Clark	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shana	Fischer	Cumberland	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Glickman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Sharp	Grass Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Phillips	marqutte	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Goldman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	R. Watson	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justice	Longshore	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jeannette	Brown	Yardley	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clinton	Rusich	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Chandler-Reed	Montrose	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Bradford	Fort Pierce	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Duncan	Eddy	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martin	O'Donnell	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Nissen	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cicely	Rathmell	Dunedin	Florida	Free speech and informed, unbiased news reporting has never been more important in our country than it is today. That's why I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger. When one group controls a large portion of the media, they have the opportunity to influence and sway the majority public opinion. It is therefore paramount that those controlling the largest interest in our news media outlets be unbiased and allow their staff to report as they see fit, guided by the principles of good journalism. To allow a merger with a news organization that directs its journalists to report a particular viewpoint goes against everything that the principle of free speech seeks to uphold.
Esther	Kim	Grosse Pointe Farms	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melinda	Wright	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Armstrong	Bodega	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Vinson	Lakeland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Stamp	Crescent City	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Blandy	Fisher	Durham	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Peloquin	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Siena	Tugendrajch	Columbia	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Nystrom	Columbia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thea	Lawson	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lawrence	East	Jacksonville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Reardon	North Kingstown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ella	baldwin	Aquebogue	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beka	Goedde	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Chastain	Silver Spring,	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Taubin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Henrietta	Biayemi	Olney	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Larson	Richfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lawrence	East	Jacksonville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Riley	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fred	Flanagan	Barrington	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

T	Logan	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Smith	Albert Lea	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Noonen	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Bush	Bainbridge Island	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nadine	Thomas	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dixie	Yarbrough	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Womeldorf	Wyoming	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Dungan	Lodi	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Mason	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Baker	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	McCuen	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Madon	Flemington	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	O'Grady	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Taddie	Alcoa	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Hill	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Richards	Poughkeepsie	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

susan	sachs	wakefield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Edwards	Cornelius	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Blair	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wiltrud	Mott-Smith	Loudon	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Johnson	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
marie	gilbert	audubon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Klemme Eliceiri	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cameron	Chiste	geneva	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Young	Elkhart	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Schubert	Cottonwood	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wallace C	Olson Jr	Wadsworth	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nichole	Chartier	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Senior	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Berg	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Posha	Zubair	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Audra	Thompson	Strongsville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Inouye	laramie	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terence	Bleakley	Northport	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Protect free speech to protect democracy.

Howard	Dunaier	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Wolkerstorfer	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karel	Koenig	New Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Kece	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Peck	Hurley	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Bouchoux	Bloomfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Enrique	Guerrero	Glendora	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darlene	Marchetti	Clifton Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ismet	Kipchak	Nesconset	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecelia	Burnett	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Lipson-Walker	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	McCuen	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Rankin	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Cresseveur	New Albany	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Matlack	Statesville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Fulgencio	Grand Blanc	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Mazzola	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Burnap	Wolfeboro	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelley	Mallick	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Dove	Revere	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsey	McNellis	Casselberry	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Blust	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christian	DiGiacomo	Coram	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Goette	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Van	Hollie	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martina	Potratz	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faye	Dion	Portsmouth	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
I. Michael	Kadish	Philmont	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth Ann	Perry	Downers Grove	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Ford	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Taylor	Lisle	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Faloon	Patterson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandi	DuBowski	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Travis	Durand	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair merger would be a threat to Free Speech, AND a threat to Free Enterprise. Two things upon which the foundation of our country is built. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Boothroyd	La Porte	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Bain	Morristown	New Jersey

A diverse media is essential to keeping informed – the Supreme Cou

Gerald	Stein	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Gilbert	Spring Hill	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Otis	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Dollman	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Bickel	Lebanon	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leola	Schreurs	St Louis Park	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Leverenz	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melodee	Mayer-Fleischer	Lambertville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	L	East Hampton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mabel Ann	Chao	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alixa	Doom	Richfield	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denis	Morel	Pie Town	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Forbes	Albuquerque	New Mexico	Sinclair is voice of the extreme. I oppose this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rich	Alvidrez	Los Angeles	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

perry	chapdelaine	ASHLAND CITY	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Katz	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Finkelstein	Ellicott City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Carter	Coconut Creek	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stav	Raniere	Santa Ana	California	Please safeguard public access to objective reporting! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	McKee	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Sanderson	Hastings	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Rosen	Yonkers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Gitto	Bayside	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Dorph	Belvedere Tiburon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Burrows	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Sanders	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Walker	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anton	Veirup	Boulder City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	McCree	Venice	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irving	Freedman	Charlote	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	DuPre	Carrboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ben	armmendariz	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

D	Longshaw	Greenbelt	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	Rodriguez	Conyers	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lexie	Proietti	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Dacks	Morgantown	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Frederick	Pagosa Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Greg	Gaucher	Jacksonville	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The media is currently too concentrated in to few hands already and this merger would only make the news more concentrated, less diverse, and more easily manipulated. For

Anvi	Srivastava	Alpharetta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Rosenthal	Middletown	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Miller	Concord	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Harris	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Urbain	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mara	McManus	Acworth	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Swisegood	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	McElroy	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Stark	Frisco	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elena	Barrantes	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antone	Enger	Irving	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Hoover	Commerce Twp	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Medina	9937 NW. 1st Court	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Collins	Mount Desert	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Adams	Binghamton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	Schechtel	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Rubio	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Long	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Dembski	Round Lake Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fabian	Gonzalez	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sandra	taylor	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melinda	Fisher	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Fields	Taylors	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Beeler	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Halley	Feiffer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorothy	Vernon	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audra	Thompson	Strongsville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Crystal	Alexander	Shelley	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Bond	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail	Pean	Great Falls	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Czapanskiy	Sabillasville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Trisha	Lewis	Peachtree Corners	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Strieter	Caseville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evalyn	Kellum	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Becker	Palm Harbor	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodney	Saenz	Manor	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Resnik	Brookhaven	Georgia

I opposed a Sinclair-Tribune merger because it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elsa	Nygard	West Burke	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Calhoun	Bristol	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo-Ann E	WEST	miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brenda	Benavides	North Hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Niki	Stock	Leavenworth	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Clark	Brookston	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Chilton	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Vaught	Antioch	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Conners	Monterey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This is essentially installing state controlled propaganda in 70 percent of US homes. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Scott	Fort Myers Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celine	Stillman	Nyack	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Sicherman	Warwick	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Tomlinson	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Valente	Nutley	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maryann	Mendoza	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Baxter	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Maslin	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Diamond	Glendale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
barbara	murray	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susybel	Kallsen	Kettering	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Cantine	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Wilhelm	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julian	Reeves	Woodbridge	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	LaParo	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amparo	Alpanes	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Beeler	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Hutchins	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Warren	Wright	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Bailey	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Glebs	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Smith	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Clemmons	Castro Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	D'Ambrosia	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Wengert	Ormond Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Takacs	Oberlin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Bender	New Paltz	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Vaught	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Eufinger	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Sherson	Jackson	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

victoria	rolett	new rochelle	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Estrada	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Childers	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Tinker	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Speranza	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Osborn	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Overton	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ian	Eastland	Edmond	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Bressler	Sioux City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bridgette	Landou	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	McLean	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonard	Adams	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Princivalle	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Taghizadeh	North Chesterfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary L	Palmer	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Nance	Rutherfordton	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toby	Ward	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glenn	Jacobson	Lewisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sammi	Katz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Glebs	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Eder	Peoria	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hall	Aaron	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Minoski	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lesley	Ewing	LANSDALE	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Rusch	Hopkins	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ingles	Napa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corey	Rogers	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Knox	Oreland	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judi	Silver	Waterville	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please block this merger
russell	stanley	Webster	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Wigand	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Anthony	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Levy	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emma	Oxford	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mallory	Buril	Glendora	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Cox	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Harlowe	East Burke	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Lee	MacKichan	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Cwick	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Decker	Montgomery	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karlayna	Steward	West fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanna	Voigt	McHenry	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Jarnstedt	Greenwich	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Williams	Searsport	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Burgess	BROOKLYN	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pilar	Amaral	Palm Springs	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Griffin	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jane	gabbert	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Tullis	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would suppress our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering and unapologetic political bias which undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must uphold precious American values and BLOCK this merger.
Eve	Jordan	Heathsville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Shafer	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wyman	Whipple	Dahinda	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Heinberg	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Max	Berger	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Wickman	East Islip	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Olden	Springfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Seay	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Payne	Plymouth	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L	JENNINGS	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kurt	Harvey	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Armstrong	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sophia	Jackson	Seal Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyung	Pak	Livingston	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Preyer	Montgomery	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Yannucci	Greenlawn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shellie	Checkoway	Laredo	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Stedman	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Kreiner	Carpentersville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Pitzer	West Chester	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail	Padalino	West Sand Lake	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Harris	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Freed	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ashley	taeckens	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stuart	Montgomery	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Platnick	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Kissinger	Camp Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Hooper	NY	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Florentina	Mehta	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margret	Straw	Front Royal	Virginia
Merelyn	Dolins	Maplewood	New Jersey	I am extremely concerned about the potential merger of Sinclair me A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	DeCaria	Old Hickory	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alyssa	Gonzalez	Hawthorne	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Wilke	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sybille	Lange	Fairfax	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Burgess	Nashua	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harvey	Jacobson	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Scanlon	Manlius	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faith	Martens	Verona	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Miller	Gaithersburg	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Schiller	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Buck	Pilkenton	Sumpter	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennie	Lupinacci	Westport	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanie	Martin	Montgomery	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Horvath	Laguna Niguel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	Curtis Goode	Ellicott City	Maryland

Please stop this merger!!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Newman	Fernandina	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Stamm	West Branch	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
VIRGINIA	WOOTON	marshall	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Roberts	Chatham	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Dobie	Muscatine	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorian	Carli-Jones	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
E	Lucas	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Ucovich	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Secleary	Cleary	Potomac	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Lee	Northbrook	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Justin	reichman	Middletown	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Huntress	Richardson	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Paola	B	Blacksburg	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The media is already in a precarious state and situation against the deluge of fake news, ideology and lies. We must do everything in our power to ensure freedom and diversity of speech and ideas that will resist indoctrination and sponsor public debate. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Heather	Everett	West Bath	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitch	Miller	Ocala	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Atkinson	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Jarmon	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Martin	Bloomington	Indiana	This is not right and is sickening.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Mary	Feather	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Kell	Melbourne	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Dunsey	Boiling Springs	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ramona	Larrea	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Melissa	Heeke	Indianapolis	Indiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must prevent this merger from happening in order to

Jane	Gallant	Newmarket	New Hampshire

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Steinberg	Newark	Delaware

I am extremely concerned about the chilling effect this proposed me

Yadell	Nova	Jersey City	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deb	Clark	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hedley	Clark	Baltimore	Maryland	I am writing as a native of Sinclair Broadcasting's hometown. Here in Baltimore, we have been exposed for decades to Sinclair's point-of-view and its stranglehold on free speech. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gail	Musante	Deposit	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	McDonald	Coralville	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Pyle	Crystal	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

garrett	cope	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Perkins	New London	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grant	Best	Binghamton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Schwartz	Ocala	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fay	Barrows	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Cooley	Muncie	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Schwartz	Venice	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Ellis	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Schwartz	Ca	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alice	Gorman	Camillus	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Tifford	Leicester	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tami	Butters	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	White	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Gecan	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Ortiz	Greeley co	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Farsi	Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Tellman	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Kernis	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roxana	Vergara	Orland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Lupovitz	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	Monopoly is dangerous to democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Quirk	Hilton Head Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deirdre	Lurie	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Silver	Atlantic Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenifer	Johnson	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Halley	New York City	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Goshorn	Statesboro	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Wieting	Burlington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Luisa	Browning	Carrollton	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Maurer	Peoria	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jorge	Ramirez	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J.	Reaves	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aria	Jahanshahi	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Hough	Claremore	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Moseley	Charlotte	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Allowing this to occur will stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Manfre	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

justine	blyler	Pine City	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Miller	Cheyenne	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ethel	Larsen	Petoskey	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Craig	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geo	Latimer	Jay	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Hovermale	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Weinberg	Stamford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Siggins	Piscataway	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Philip	Krinsky	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Bush	Calais	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cary	Friedman	San francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Silver	Atlantic Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary T.	Light	Macomb	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marlene	Abel	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Cruz	Daly City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Farer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Levine	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Amols	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Nardell	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Koone	Rutherfordton	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	van den Honert	Waterford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Webb	Carrboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	McCullough	Chapin	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Simpson	COLORADO SPRINGS	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Shivers	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Sullivan	Arlingotn Heights	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Sites	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Selvey	Scottsbluff	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Hockett	Paso Robles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Wylam	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Harrison	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Goodman	Granville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yolanda	Owens	Burke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Broome	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Baumann	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Akara	Draper	E Dummerston	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Boothroyd	La Porte	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Strijek	Palm springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thorsten	Drautzburg	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Klett	Red Bank	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	McCarthy	Bangor	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Evans	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Murphy	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Hannah	Fairfax	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Andersson	Topanga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Clucas	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Karash	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jillian	Harris	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Senk	Burlington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Thompson	Julian	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Murphy	Fort Garland	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Hatton	West Liberty	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Gunderson	Santee	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Hood	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Sices	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Henning	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Goodsitt	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eddie	Ng	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Nye	Mishawaka	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Bayard	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I just heard about this travesty, and it represents, if true, a blatant attempt to turn our country into a giant version of George Orwell's "1984"--where similar small moves in public policy and action built up over time to destroy freedom. Is this what the American people want, do you think? I don't. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
John	Mosher	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nana	Kankam	Chagrin Falls	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yousef	Zarbalian	McLean	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Tyndall	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Kubala	Lakeway	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Allen	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Bennett	Birmingham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natasha	Collado	Kissimmee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stuart	Barron	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Winchester	Central	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Samuels	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Masci	Stratford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cristen	Graham	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Mackay	Prospect	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cooper	Millard	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	D.	Palmyra	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Reynolds	Alexander	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Cintel	St. Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Balliett	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Sieber-Benson	Westlake	Oregon	It is undeniable that people are influenced by the voices of the media. our democracy depends on people being informed on all sides of the issues in order to make informed decisions. It is for this reason that it is imperative that media outlets be owned and operated by as many different people and companies as possible in order to provide a forum for a diverse range of viewpoints. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kay	Kringlie	valley City	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

P	Bumbaca	Sheridan	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Cole	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vaibhav	Garg	Reston	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Passyka	Bazile	Lawrenceville	Georgia	This merger, if it happens may one day be remembered as one of the dominoes that fell and help destroyed the US/democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Bizer	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in the U.S.(controlling some 200 stations broadcasting throughout most of the country) and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and impede the expression of a diversity of viewpoints in the press that are the cornerstone of a healthy democracy. Indeed, Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Marc	Hamilton	Kettering	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Robinson	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Ragland	Benicia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Ahearn	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Barr	Englewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

james	strong	RIVERDALE	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Sofranko	King of Prussia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Indra	Newberg	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
margaret	rimsky	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Brady	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bollinger	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Rifkin	Bloomfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
anna	deen	minnetonna	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Z	S	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	Wasserott	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Brimm	Durham	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Charles	Belfaslt	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Campbell	Riverbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Keyes	Johns Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Forman	Dunnellon	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alexis	Bornoff	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Make Your Public Comment: Stop Sinclair's Stranglehold on Media

Signature count: 28,659

Christopher	Bussmann	Brooklyn	New York
Kate	Lonergan	Tampa	Florida

Dear FCC,

Please follow the precedent of the Supreme Court's 1969 decision in Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC and block the merger between Sinclair Broadcasting Group and Tribune Media.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Gillotte	Johnson City	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Acacia	Lawson	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Lyons	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Becky	Bondur	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirsten	Lietz	Grayling	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Hutchings	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Prater	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Haas	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Roule	West Reading	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Al	W	Red Hook	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Teller	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Beal	Skaneateles	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ana	Fabrega	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Orion	Martin	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lacey	Hicks	Fremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Farber	Pennington	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Thompson	Hampstead	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's OWN policies [a single company can't reach more than 39% of households with a TV]. The FCC MUST stand on the right side of history and BLOCK this merger.
Andrea	Fereshteh	Pennington	New Jersey	The First Amendment is supposed to give us the right to free speech and a free press. A news station being forced by the mega-corporation that owns it to parrot the same messages violates these freedoms. There's NOTHING free about a scripted press – and there's NOTHING free about a public with no other option for local news. It's well PAST time that you stood up for the people of the USA and NOT the corporate interests in the US. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Devon	Morales	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elsa	Rodriguez	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Decia	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Genasci	Highlands Ranch #16	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Pomeroy	Canby	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Minton	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Henry	Newhouse	New Harbor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ahmad	Farzad	Princeton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	van den Honert	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Jasper	Round Rock	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Wilson	Tujunga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Marshall	AUBURN	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marlene	P	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Hawkins	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Salim	Sparks	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erika	Blum	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amber	VanderMolen-Harraman	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Brannigan	San Francisco	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Zahnle	Macomb	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Drootin	Teaneck	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Trohkimoinen	Casper	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Stull	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SueAnne	McCreery	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Meservey	Glenside	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Crawford	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Lynn	Rahway	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Kamm	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Adams	Ballwin	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taleytha	Crawford-Escala	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Waltasti	Maricopa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Cushman	Dearborn	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tara	Kastelic	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucia	Rael	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laverle	Ellis	Tyler	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Rizzo	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Jasper	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Kolesar	Webster Springs	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Carter	Holland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Richter	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mordecai-Mark	Mac Low	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Demitrieus	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonard	Grundt	Nesconset	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Trapani	Hardeeville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Sepe	Warwick	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Dulin	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Shye	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Burrow	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Carlton	CHICAGO	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Lombard	Whitsett	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Fowler	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Wright	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Giles	Brownsville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Dantzler	Greenville	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tedric	Potzka	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Lyman	Springfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Rothwell	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

renee	obstfeld	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Lafone	Elkin	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Wargula	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Pierce	Garner	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Schaefer	Bethel	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanine	Hoffman	Edina	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Bianco	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jennifer	Rackley	Plattsmouth	Nebraska	I live in LA which is served by Tribune station KTLA/5. KTLA is a vital resource for independent local news and it tries not to take sides in local (or national) political fights. Sinclair would destroy the independence and greatly diminish KTLA in the LA market. It would also force KTLA to take a stance against the diversity that is so much a part of the fabric of large metropolitan cities like LA and NY. It simply can't be allowed to happen. If the Federal
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clay	Kirk	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Hart	Flint	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Dorsher	st cloud	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jana	Prewitt	Burke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Hoff	Edina	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Munns	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Blau	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lilia	Madden	Portsmouth	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Baker	Magnolia	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Gnau	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Pardee	Little Silver	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Hall	Cownellsville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phil	Neuffer	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Pellegrino	Lafayette	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Keller	LIndenhurst	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yolanda	Harris	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miel	Nelson	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	T	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luanne	Goldman	Morris	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aviva	Kahn	Boone	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Morrison	Delaware	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynne	Muir	Pinehurst	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gunn	New Rochelle	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Camille	Morrow	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Davis	Hampton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Moore	Trophy Club	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Carlson	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	McGowan	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Becker	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Effinger	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Loebel	Monmouth Beach	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KATY	MUSOLINO	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nettie	Walker-O'Reggio	Fort Mill	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Luanne	Goldman	Morris	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Levine	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
clover	Colonel	Burlington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamara	Allen	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joni	Ostrich	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robyn	Bem	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Mirabelli	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Turner-Sheerin	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Mirabito	Forty Fort	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Clemons	Glen Ridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shelbi	Russell	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Vellella	Wesley Chapel	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Rubinett	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Pellett	Burton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Britt	Abrahamson	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Lane	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayne	Stewart	Lindenhurst	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Chapman	Coatesville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Martha	White	Rockport	Maine	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Freedom of the press, freedom of speech is ONLY guaranteed by a diversity of media. Every time you allow another merger, you strike a blow to our most basic freedoms. DO NOT ALLOW THIS TO HAPPEN. Sinclair is already sheer propaganda.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Mark	Schillinger	Atlanta	Georgia	The FCC needs to put American citizens first for the first time in a while.
Cam	A	Berkley	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	McPherson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Stacy	Mallardi-Stajcar	North Olmsted	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This merger would create nothing more than state run propaganda. We have ENOUGH of that now with Fox News. Do NOT approve this. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenelle	Boucher	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laraine	Reedy	Mount Bethel	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrienne	Tiley-Lerner	Apopka	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Adams	Folsom	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

annette	barbasch	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stanley	Chadziutko	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liana	Moran	Glendale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Evans	Cleveland Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Fiedler	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Van Langen	Emmaus	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Stranger	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
L	Schaeffer	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maxelle	Neufville	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history - as well as the law and its own policies - and block this merger.
Kathleen	Brewer	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Sudlow	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori B	Girshick	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clair	Touby	Saranac Lake	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	McLendon-Kaye	Sun City Center	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	LePhuoc	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Haber	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Milkowski	Chicago	Illinois	One of the hallmarks of a democratic society is the free exchange of ideas, but such an exchange can not take place if the citizenry cannot hear alternate points of view so they may make an informed decision on public policy issues. Allowing the Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, would stifle access to other viewpoints, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rebecca	Turner	Martin	Tennessee	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Smith	Hope	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Katherine	Capps	Nashville	Tennessee	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				The Sinclair merger, given its history of controlling (and this limiting) what is said on the news, would be a threat to both the freedom of the press and freedom of speech. By allowing them to grow, many people's only source of news would in fact be limited and biased.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Smith	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rod	Roscoe	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger is anti-Capitalist. It moves toward a near-monopoly that subverts free markets and economic competition. This powerful and unethical merger goes against the founding principles of the FCC (not to mention the threat to democracy).

SBG interference in news media has a clear political bias, and we need real and fair news more than ever! The right action is crystal clear--do not approve or allow this merger.

John	Guenst	Franklin	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Martini	Merritt Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

allan	johnson	Milton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Swierczek	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristina	Finch	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Penny	Weissman	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Dawson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Babbitt	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lavina	Tomer	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Koby	Samuel	Reisterstown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

French	Wall	Windham	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D. Eric	Noble	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Thorp	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Birmingham	Moab	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Mattison	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tieryn	Olson	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Geppert	Belleville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Cunnington	San Anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Heininger	Hinesburg	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tyler	Johnson	Fort worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Jensen	Wayne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Marks	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Middleton	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deb	C	Estes Park	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Hager	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rocquelle	Woods	Huntsville	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liz	R	York	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolina	Roman	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curtis	Smith	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	More	Flourtown	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Porter	San anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karim	Kahwaji	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Napoleone	Gulf Breeze	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Kamoi	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	Ramos	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alice	Davenport	Glenwood Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Stewart	Manchester	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Castro	Ansonia	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Little	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Hedrick	Palm Coast	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Obie	Hunt	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norma	Kline	Meadville	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aydin	Kaya	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Florence	Haut	Cherry Hill	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Weiss	Yonkers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Luke	Kelly	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J.T.	Smith	Sellersville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rae	Zehel	Madison	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Rowlas	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Nelson	Esko	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Guhman	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Anderson	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Konigsmark	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Whitlock	Central	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wilson	Huntsville	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Sinclair is known to have demanded its various outlets to read statements or report on events in whatever manner supports the extremist right wing of politics on threat of termination, which action eradicates both free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janice	Elliott	Ashland	Oregon	I urge you to block this merger in the interests of diversity, and of maintaining our democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mohannad	Almalki	Windermere	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Dorwart	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	D	Downingtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	A	Mountain Lakes	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Hastings	Newport	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Roberts	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Porter	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rani	Gold	Teaneck	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Brosnan	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Dennis	Fisher	Broomall	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This would be another step towards 1984 type control of the media and the public. Where are the elected officials who swore to uphold our democracy? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Kadane	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	DeWitt	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanine	Maddox	Brooklyn	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivan	Frazier	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	W	Coatesville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samuel	Montgomery	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Carey	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marye	Phillips	Export	Pennsylvania

A diverse media is essential to keeping our entire society informed.

Cynthia	Chapa	Edinburg	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	Stravis	Hoffman Estates	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Johnstone	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albert	DiNatale	Howell	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Bohn	Anoka	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Fuller	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Karchem	Chatsworth	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Le Starge	Overland Park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Hawkes	Tecumseh	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Isabel	Malowany	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marya	Parral	Ocean City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Colin	Easom	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Martin	Belle Mead	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shelley	Burton	Raeford	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruanna	Waldrum	Truth Or Consequen	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. A diversity of views in the press is essential for the health of democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Knight	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Musson	Milford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	House	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Rosenthal	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Sostak	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Brownburg	PORT HURON	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Gallo	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wilson	Horick	Nashville	Tennessee
Dan	Dudak	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Garry	Kahn	Maryville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Murphey	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Beddow	Petaluma	California	Sinclair Broadcasting Group has proposed a merger with Tribune Media that would create a broadcasting conglomerate with unprecedented power, controlling 200 TV stations throughout the country. A diverse media is essential to keeping informed – the Supreme Court said so in its 1969 decision in Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. By limiting the views that local anchors can express, Sinclair can pose serious threats to the future of our democracy.
Hilary	Rayhill	Boise	Idaho	The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vineda	Myers	Takoma Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raymon	Grossman	Lincolnwood	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jeanne	maushammer	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Oakley	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	May	Marion	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tamra	Maher	NY	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Wells	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Koets	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taryn	Vogt	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vanessa	Hartman	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darlene	Novak	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Chapman	Severn	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mackenzie	Wayne	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Blachowski	Streamwood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katharine	Nicholson	Iowa City	Iowa	Save our free press. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Voors	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jimmy	Creech	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Sonnenberg	King William	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candice	Morris	Oviedo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katarine	Quintana	San Leandro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Strassburger	Richmond Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Eugene	Gorrin	Union	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Griffyn	O'Donnell	North Highlands	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	McPeek	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Jannausch	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krissie	Marty	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tasya	Kelen	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theo	Meuris	Magnolia	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Iles	Beaumont	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Montgomery	Lakeside Marblehea	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Oberg	Pico Rivera	California
Joan	Sonberg	Thousand Oaks	California

Stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Bruscell	Wellington	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	maushammer	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madan	Goyal	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Fox	Santa fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Fiedler	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Davis	REDWAY	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Sepesy	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Hulewicz	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Conner	Lombard	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Storthz	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Krenzke	Virginia Beach	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amir	Raissian	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Meredith	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Wolf	Wayne	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olivia	Lindberg	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristen	Hughes	Fort Collins	Colorado

I am a scholar of media studies. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Jonas	Scottsdale	Arizona
Jennifer	Reinke	El Segundo	California	The FCC must act "in the public's interest," which requires the Sincla A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Sutton	Hatboro	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Hall	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawnee	Overcast	Champaign	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Steindl-Rast	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Annecone	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Kaufman	Dunwoody	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Holbert	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Dean	Mc Cordsville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Comstock	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jared	Hughes	Welcome	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Bean	Brooklyn Center	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phillip	Novess	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tanvir	Shahid	Ringoes	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
nancy	owens	Oxford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Sandler	Arlington	Texas
Skye	Alexander	Berkeley	California

As a TV news reporter I know first-hand how important objective, fa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Judge	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Heitner	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Cassiday	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Murphy	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendi	Cohen	Ossining	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joy	Cranker	Saranac Lake	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Blachman	Norfolk	Virginia	The sheer size of the corporation resulting from a Sinclair-Tribune merger has the potential to limit the diversity of views in the press and stifle free speech that is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair media has shown that it is willing to broadcast political biased reporting. The FCC must protect Americans' access to a plurality of viewpoints and stand on the right side of history by blocking this merger.
Hayley	Swearingen	Lathrop	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Simmons	Fairfield	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lori	smith	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	La Marr	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Syssoyeva	Saint George	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Gregory	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dee	Donohue Reidy	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Corrente	Wakefield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Derek	Gulbranson	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Burrows	Lady Lake	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Coplan	La Jolla	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Merriman	Ringoes	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Catala	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Heath	Woodbridge	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Farro	Lakewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Gaillour	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
connie	robinson	hanover	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Slone	Waverly	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Esseks	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Baim	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jeremy	Coleman	Hallsville	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a "local" TV broadcasting monopoly of unprecedented size and power in this country, tricking many who watch the local news not realizing it's a script from a mega-monopoly. This merger also contradicts the FCC's own policies. It will stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy and public discourse. Sinclair's forced local broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this will undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Devona	Glidewell	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debrah	Wong	West Linn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Roman	New Freedom	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kay	Nelson	Richfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hilda	Shaffer	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ilda	Howard	Venice	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryan	Syverson	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Heath	Woodbridge	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Desenberg	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laraine	Lebron	Utica	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ardeth	Brodie	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Marg Bracken	Bala Cynwyd	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Anderson	Yucca Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Ridgley	Cement City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Pekowsky	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fay	Bracken	Naples	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mikki	Chalker	Binghamton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hanna	Mobile	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Hunt	Collegeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Irene	W	Brisbane	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Ungar	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Person	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharman	Kobayashi	Yuba City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Art	Sather	Springfield	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wanda	Daugherty	Mesquite	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teri	Searcy	REDWOOD CITY	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Neisler	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Baier	Dearborn	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosalie	Samaniego	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Autumn	Marler	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas and Randi	Alba	Ambler	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Whitmore	Hilo	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Yodice	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victoria	Anderson	St Clr Shores	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Ulery	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Cooper	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	McDonald	Brentwood	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Voci	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Schmelzenbach	The Village	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Waldron	Corvallis	Oregon	THIS IS INSANITY. SINCLAIR IS NOT GOOD FOR THE AMERICAN A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rebecca	west	Hamel	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ziyaneh	Ghaderpour	Sterling Heights	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeniffer	Wilkinson	Roebling	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Hulburt	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Rose	Fletcher	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Gimbrone	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Carey	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyle	Johnson	Falls Church	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clint	Guidry	Olney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirsten	Erkfritz	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Randall	Plainview	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Hopkins	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beatrice	Michel	Gearhart	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caleb	Alvarado	FORT COLLINS	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Martin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Baker	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Jacobs	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Osborne	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Camille	Henderson Davis	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Jones	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alejandra	Villagra	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karl	Steinberg	Newport Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Strate	Neptune Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Plunket	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elena	Azzoni	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Lowy	Denville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Thornton	Queens Village	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelby	Szuba	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edie	Simpson	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Antonia	Ruiz-Koffman	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Markus	Linnenbrink	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Bell	Tullahoma	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Salvatore	Cipriano, Jr.	Cambridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary Alice	Harvey	Duluth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kellie	Shelton	Highland	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Hendriks	Seal Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Hoffman	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KimMarie	Hagerty	Hoboken	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Shepley	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michele	Dupey	Bayonne	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Rothschild	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Bridgewater	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacquelyn	Florsheim	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Mitulski	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Weinstein	Mount Kisco	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Earl	Russell	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Naier	Wantagh	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Knott	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Amrhein	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terrie	Stone	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Basedow	Davie	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mark	Bajorek	Lockport	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wynne	Haralovich	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Hallcom	Trenton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myra	Vandy	Lake Waccamaw	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edna	Ritzenberg	Woodmere	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Eisenhower	Vero Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Ringquist	Redwood Falls	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Patrick	Newnan	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Dean	North Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicolina	Pistacchio	Bend	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Hawkins	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Shelton	Schererville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Crimmins	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Foster	Springfield	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyoko	Takayama	Livermore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Hassig	Mount Prospect	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Kessler	Crestview	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	McCormick	Louisa	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	St.Pierre	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marla	West	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gabor	Szikla	North Granby	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Allen	Williamston	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Crawford	Camden	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Richey	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Regina	Woiler	NEW YORK	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Hirsch	Front Royal	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margy	Nurik	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Kay	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Barney	Wheaton	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Holthaus	Wilmington, VT 053(	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Good	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Boyd	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Reilly	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	Morgan	COLCHESTER	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Dearing	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Tymeson	Louisville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Swaminathan	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Giblin	Binghamton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katelyn	Durkin	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Hirschman	Woodcliff Lake	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Whitney Yang	Yang	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Buchanan	Trenton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Colden	Whittier	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Ruggeri	Naugatuck	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alexandra	Petschek	New Rochelle	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

barbara	heitz	LOS ANGELES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Antle	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Perry	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Valades	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Groh	Gulf Breeze	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melanie	Deppen	Duncannon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Klein	Panton	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Lewis	Mesa	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Morgan	Easley	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Casey	Emmaus	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Straight	Portola Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Francis	Hicks	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Morse	Iowa City	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Smith	Sturgis	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caley	Lynch	Portsmouth	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jamie	Hribal	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irwin	Abrams	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terra	Brooke	Durango	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zeta	Seiple	Sisters	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Lapointe	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Worth	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Usui Datwyler	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karren	King Crouch	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Deely	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Garner	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Singer	richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Tellez	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rev Linda	Andrews	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R	Wells	West Hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Tyler	Saginaw	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen K	Kelly	Columbia	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Cutler	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Dillard	Alpharetta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amelia	Birch	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Curran	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Rowland	Creston	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Pang	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would result in a TV broadcasting conglomerate that is too large, too powerful, and clearly biased. It would undermine independence and diversity of viewpoint among local news stations and thus our ability as Americans to learn and debate issues freely and critically -- which is absolutely essential for healthy representative democracy.
Steven	Farber	Reynoldsburg	Ohio	Per Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC (1969), viewpoint diversity is a clear American value. Allowing Sinclair's consistently biased broadcasts to dominate the market is wrong and antithetical to the FCC's mission and policies. It is the FCC's duty to block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	McGreevy	North Bergen	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Rodriguez	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Pasnick	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Grant	Ebeling	Bloomington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Dean	Trumbull	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Verleye	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norman	McComas	Nellis, WV	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberto	Alvarado	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Colbert	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sabrina	Haskell	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

As an American who values freedom of speech and thought, I oppos

ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Farmington	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Kolec	Los Osos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Borcherding	West Chester	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Jerrems	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Solowiej	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mark	mylar	park city	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Berg	Park Ridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Shaffer	Hays	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

marianne	metz	The Villages	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Fallon	Fairfield	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jude	Wolberg	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judi	Travis	Delray Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy Jo	Smith	Gainesville	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Corr	Willoughby	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ericka	Mcgrew	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Howard	Jones	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Dunne	Rapid City	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claudia	Angulo-Pope	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kumar	Jayasuriya	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Hougham	Trafalgar	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Analea	Angot	Lewiston	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Barbarino	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Schwartz	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Brackett	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zelig	Kurland	New Paltz	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Gritzer	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Marchman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Herbert	Skovronek	Morris Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It is against the public's interests. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Werner	Heim	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	DeLuca	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maia	Daniel	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Coulter	Greenbrae	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Dressler	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelli	Kennedy	Visalia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Djuana	Franklin	Florissant	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Philips	Trenton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Early	Murfreesboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Hagedorn	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Miller	Kingston	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kerry	Morey	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Kraft	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheryl	Gillespie	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Carrera	Layton	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Ivers	Downers Grove	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Hawkins	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	White	Grants Pass	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gezelman	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Davis	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ciaran	O'Reilly	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Tucker	Oregon City	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Swartzendruber	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Reed	Indpls	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Orenstein	Westminster	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Warschoff	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chet	Hoblitz	White Hall	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Kleintank	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Sage	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	McEachin	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Mattingly	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joann	Leta-Nurmi	Old Saybrook	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Anderson	Princeton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emelda	Antuna	Katy	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah A	Crumley	Dripping Springs	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bethany	Taylor	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Bryant	Cashiers	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Buckley	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ott	Michael	Milton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Davidson	Port Washington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Lewis	Harrison Township	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
S	D	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriella	Weiss	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Gonzalez	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Guinevere	de Amblia	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Chandler	Stratham	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Cuesta	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Richardson	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Dolence	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Melfi	East Providence	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Mitchell	Ballston Lake	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Hoot	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marta	Dawes	Bellevue	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victoria	Bitters	Wauconda	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Cochrane	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Gorrell	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleanor	Musick	Cardiff-By-The-Sea	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Mizner	Waterville	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elyse	Siegal	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Rudick	South Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Gruninger	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Considine	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KARL	DROBNIC	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Kane	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Rubin	Troy	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nori	La Rue	PORTLAND	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Lawrence	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elana	Zimmerman	Olney	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Meszler	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Ellis	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Kerr	Union	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Dunnewind	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Kronenberger	Bettendorf	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelley	Curran	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jared	Z	West Fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Taylor	Muse	CEDAR PARK	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Meyers	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Montagna	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. Such an entity would inevitably stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press, factors that are essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts to date portray consistent, unwavering political bias. Such bias does not belong on free broadcast television in the United States. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Comando	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Toni	Scofield	Jackson Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabrielle	Robbins	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	White	Campbell	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Gillespie	Litchfield	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Johnson	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tyler	Douglas	Cohoes	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dallas	Windham	Irving	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Will	Thompson	Lewiston	Idaho	Keep our local stations local and free from meddling. This Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sylvana	Yelda	Bend	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Renshaw	Mankato	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We must not sacrifice freedom of the press. Diversity is essential.
Sheila	Craig	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toby	McErlean	Altamont	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Deborah	Sherrod	Harrison	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This threatens the very foundations of our free democracy. By narrowing the choices that people have to watch and hear unbiased news it tramples on our right to free speech. Sinclair has enough stations and outlets for their own free speech; they should not be allowed to stifle even more.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Jason	Rose	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allen	Swift	Martinez	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Shuffield	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vincent	Lyman	Catonsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tammy	Cooper	Allenhurst	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	West	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Delayne	Auerbach	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Pic	Metairie	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Contreras	Lakewood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harold	Porosoff	Scarsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Milner	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Morgan	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irene	Bender	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lona	Flocke	Wimberley	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Bowen	ROCKY RIVER	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia W	Stewart	Kirkwood	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C. Paulina	I?igo	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Orr	Lewiston	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alisa	Harris-Norico	Flushing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beatrice	Nava	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Coble	Liverpool	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Robinson	Clover	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Salhi	Sierra Madre	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Stewart	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Rose	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosa	Farrer-O'Bryant, MD	Carmichael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cary	Chapman	LAYTON	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Tyhurst	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Carlson	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vikki	Budgetts	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Purcell	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Wax	Merced	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyson	Jensen	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Shuman	Ardmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seana	McKenna	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Charles	Theisen	Naples	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Having spent 23 years in the U.S. Navy, dedicated to preserving our wonderful country and our freedoms I firmly believe that a monopolistic control of the media is the greatest danger we face to the existence of our freedom. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Nasreen	Kakli	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Ozias	Waterford	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellis	Vidler	Taylors	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alex	Ball	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Cronas	The Villages	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Smith	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Gay	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Esteban	Ledesma	Hull	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	O'Connell	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lisa	Brennan	Monroe	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Sipiora	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daianna	Karaian	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Tighe	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Patrie	Annapolis	Maryland

Protect the first amendment of the constitution, Stop this merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Jerry	Chasen	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
elizabeth	mcmahon	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Rodman	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	LaPan	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Gewanter	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Patterson	Cordova	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Ziemer	FPO	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ricardo	Vazquez	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	D'Arcy	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Lieberman	Devon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackie	Shapiro	Hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Norwalk	Tonawanda	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerrie	Dean	Sedona	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Suzi	Nash	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As a citizen of these great united states, I'm extremely concerned that a fair and balanced press, which is absolutely necessary in a democracy, is being attacked and threatened. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate that would put us all at risk and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Sinclair has demonstrated that it cannot report the news without a biased political slant which, should this merger go through would be a threat to viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. I implore you to do what is best for a free and democratic America and block this merger.

Ambri	Garcia	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Buckley	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Boyland	Palos Verdes Peninsı	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Lazebnik	Jackson	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Wohlgemuth	Fraser	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cameron	Connolly	West Bountiful	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Greenspan	New York City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Collins	North Canton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Palmer	Clark	Rio Rancho	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Anderson	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marvin	Cohen	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Freedman	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Dassow	Lombard	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sumi	Shohara	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Sutter	Vernon Hills	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Thurston-Lighty	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Furlan	Bolingbrook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Woods	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katy	Russell	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghana	Menon	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Courant	Belfast	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Diane	Rehner	Ft. Collins	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As grade school students in the 60's, we were taught that the

henry	besanceney III	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
maneeja	fedayea	charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Perin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alexandra	Santa Cruz	Stillwater	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Anderson	Barnardsville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Wolf	Blue Bell	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

john	codd	morristown	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lisa	Brennan	Monroe	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Kaplan	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Francis	Lauland	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phil	Friesen	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Edgerton	The Colony	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyra	Haughney	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Hagey	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Javier	Aceves	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Casey	Glenn	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Brito	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosella	Stock	Severna Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Christensen	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis and Jackie	River, III, Md	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hans-Erik	Wennberg, Ph.D.	Elizabethtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Delegal	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

henry	besanceney III	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Wilt	Wrightsville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Hourdequin	Hanover	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jimmy	Rojas	Lake Worth	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Knight	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lea	Wansbrough	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Spencer	Hudacko	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Neeb	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Temkin	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Taffet	Dana Point	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Strong	Mt Pleasant	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	ashcraft	sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Eastland	Edmond	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Crutsinger	Cupertino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Charnes	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Todd	Heiler	ARCATA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Lewis	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
N	S	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Engels	Kalamaxoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
CAROLINE	YEZER	Cambridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Swartz	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Soderman	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margarett	Gorodess	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Smerdel	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francine	Prager	Lutz	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Armstrong	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ted	Boggues	Southfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This isn't how free speech works in a Democracy.
Janet	Feder	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Paul	Pinson	Wilmington	Delaware	"Don't let Sinclair-Tribune merger create a TV broadcasting virtual monopoly that would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It is hard enough to get good information now. Sinclair suppresses one side. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Sarah	Filer	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mari	Kaftan	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martin	Freed	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kym	Norris	Marshall	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Strange	Chapel Hill	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eli	Watts	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Kim	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Burke	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	McCarron	Sparks	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Royer	Elkhart	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Jiranek	Earlysville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivelisse	Cabrera	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Glory	Arroyos	Austin	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We would end up,with an”state-run” station just like in North Korea or Russia. We will become a dictatorship!

Ehren	Nogueira	Marshall	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Liz	Lee	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Blum	West Chester	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Robles	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Yasukochi	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Kozak	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Damon	Concord	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Dresner	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toi	Ogunyoku	Winnetka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Bends	HOUSTON	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Bassett	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Garza	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jyl	Boline	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Filer	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edwin	Miller	Torrance	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
MIchael	Rosa	Windsor	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It would institute controls consistent with its ideological bent instead performing its mandate of informing its audience dictated on the basis of current events. We have seen the disaster created by ideology injected into news coverage that has essentially propagandized the vast majority of the news. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Jeff	Harris	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Giorgi	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kate	forrest	indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Wiley	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Demetriades	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Ivy	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Greenberg	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rhonda D.	Wright MD	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	McFarland	Keswick	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ava	Damri	Euless	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Mastorgi	Jackson Heights	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Lanoux	Port Aransas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Mark	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Cable	Tinley Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Tobiassen	Falls Church	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Darby	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kim	davis	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Dutton	Thousand Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Harris	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amber	Gonzales	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Rosen	Potomac	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	Bridgette	Buford	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Keir	Carmel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Klass	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Boston	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DG	Dahms	Spicewood	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Lorentzen	Caldwell	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Browder	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lonna	Malmsheimer	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Dick	Huntington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Foard	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Orit	Blatt	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mel	Ginsberg	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	van Gorder	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Hunter	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pearl	Wu	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Kaiser	Carrboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Francisco	Oak Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Emmett	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
G Dale	Mathey	Kansas City	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robyn	Schecter	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valarie	Brumfield	Orange	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Pladson	NORTH PEKIN	Illinois	Would someone in this administration please at least pretend to care about our DEMOCRACY????? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jo Ann	Umbel	Newark	Delaware	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Stone	San Diego	California	We are moving in entirely the wrong direction in allowing mega mergers of broadcasting media, concentrating too much power in a single voice. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawn	Albright	Quarryville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Stone	Livingston	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alicia	Salvadeo	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dani	Pfaff	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynda	Armona	Blairsville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Beavon	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Gupta	Old Greenwich	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Keating	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Scott	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Acciavatti	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Prokott	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ira	Kriston	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lawrence	Seltzer	Fresh Meadows	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Vail	Elk Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michele	Glenn	Jacksonville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

thomas	bray	Durango	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Bianchi	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Evans	Middletown	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joel	Meyerson	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Pfister	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Peterson	Troy	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Dunie	Plainfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Williams	Woodbine	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Spencer	Ballard	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Smulling	Cranston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lonna	Malmsheimer	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elliot	Garbus	Paradise Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Korth	Newberry	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Underhill	Richmond	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Kenyon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dolores	Schaefer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roderic	Krapf	Kalamazoo	Michigan	This merger is another attempt to create huge profits for a few at the expense of real journalism. Since Murdoch destroyed the old doctrine of the FCC for broadcasting fairness, Americans have been subjected to non-stop propaganda. Just review the statement all news announcers at every Sinclair TV station had to read on the same day. There are very few sources of news that maintain any sense of journalistic standards and integrity. This will seriously reduce even more these dwindling sources. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Garry	Pshonik	West Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ramona	Meredith	Hohenwald	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Adkins	Monkton	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Gullard	Catonsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alfred	Phillips	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	David	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jamie	Lawson	Fayetteville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Maloney	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maria	Vigil	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glen	Elchenblatt	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Mariani	Bristol	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Dropiewski	Slingerlands	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Silverfine	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Goshorn	South Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Licia	Williams	Plymouth	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Melton	New Brunswick	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Romanski	Florham Park	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Holbrook	New Tripoli	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
katia	Kosova	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celina	Meyers	Gahanna	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Ludden	Maplewood	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Webb	Madison Heights	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Prete	HADDONFIELD	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Moser	Baldwin	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Buschena	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabrielle	Peak	Smithville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chelsea	Harrison	Severna Park	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Delia	Battin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Telza	Brown	Lansdowne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Nyenhuis	Grosse Pointe Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Villante	Ocean Isle Beach	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Durbin	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elke	Baitis	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Davis	Ocoee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Don	Chaplin	Burlington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Ewart	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Severo	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Greenberg	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	McCreery	Mission	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Steinberg	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melinda	Solis	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brianna	Trinidad	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Silvio	Fittipaldi	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Conrad	Moore	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Bollen	Yucca Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	French	Monroe	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Hewitt	Glen Ellyn	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Green	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eduardo	Hernandez	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Yanowitz	Hamden	Connecticut

No media monopoly! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wiley	Dickerson	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Reedy	Laurinburg	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
carol	bodiford	casar	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Town	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Bollen	Yucca Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josh	Glass	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marlene	M	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marla	Fishman	Madison	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Conrad	Chevy Chase	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Moen	Coppell	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Richard	Viillastrigo	Port Matilda	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I urge the FCC to reject the Sinclair-Tribune merger. Sinclair has already demonstrated its willingness to promote its own political bias by requiring scripted political segments to be part of local news. Granting this largest merger in TV broadcasting history would allow Sinclair to upend the tradition of apolitical coverage and local control of our hundreds of local tv outlets throughout the country.

Lisa	Bachelder	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	RodrÃ-guez	san jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Saunders	Fountain Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and BLOCK THIS MERGER.
Christina	Diggs	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Johnson	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Fiol	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Limonadi	La Crescenta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Swedlund	Waldron	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elsie	Haley	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Boudreau	Anaheim	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerome	Dominus	Harrison	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Beeghly	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andy	Lupenko	Lemon Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carmi	Orenstein	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Bernstein	Moorestown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Jensen	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Sheffield	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Saunders	Lake Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Randall	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
anne	Terrail	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Heiman	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bonnie	ballantyne	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Phillips	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Schubert	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Floreen	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Rape	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mavis	Hamilton	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lyda	Stillwell	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Collins	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Mykolenko	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Briana	Purcell	Dearborn Heights	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Pricci	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Talley	Louisville	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary F	Mensel	Bon Aqua	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Moyer	Fredericksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edwin	McClain	Redding	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cary	Rothstein	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Whalen	Springfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yale	Schwartz	Wayne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Dones	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	B.	Hedgesville	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mona	Armstrong	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daryl	Stanton	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evelyn	Warfield	Mechanicsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Matar	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alix	Keast	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Butler	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Dolinar	Staten Island	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Pirrone	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Neale	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gianni	Ferreri	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Pfeiffer-Traum	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Kovitch	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Brezovan	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phillip	Gonzales	Grand Prairie	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cathy	Davis	Senatobia	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Lustgarten	Petoskey	Michigan

I urge you to deny the proposed Singclair-Tribune merger. Such a merger would create a TV broadcasting group of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Bigelow	Saint Jeannet	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Sherman	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Corradino	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

She'ree	Choy	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Tenderholt	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Gallagher	Chattanooga	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Cammel	Peoria	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Kussman	Maplewood	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janine	Comrack	Ojai	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Donnahoe	Lufkin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Kim	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Schmidt	Wauconda	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Seegers	Waxhaw	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Laird	Pittsford	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Sinclair has already reduced the diversity of reporting among their current TV stations and the proposed merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press across much of America. Diversity of reporting is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diana	Crispi	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gisela	Gelbing	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cherie	Hanks	Midvale	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Kruse	Geneva	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Gordon	Lakewood Ranch	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Ordway	Old Orchd Bch	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Stanton	Owego	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johnny	Mayall	Chapel Hill	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	King	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luuk	Ament	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessie	Quintero	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Seff	McKinney	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Lowstuter	West Grove	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Sherman	Yonkers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
melinda	chen	saratoga	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hasmukh	Shah	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Christine	Hartman	VENTURA	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Hello, I just learned about the Sinclair-Tribune merger and I am opposed to it. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Francine	Healy	Sparks	Nevada	I have VERY much against this continuing consolidation of media companies!
Liam	Hooper	Winston-Salem	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Neill	Smith River, CA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Johnson	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Rice	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Lewis	Cambridge Springs	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alix	Bowman	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would be damaging to our democracy. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Stepro	New Albany	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Fielden	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
burris	millstone	aventura	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Kelley	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Busching	Lombard	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark G.	Letke	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Murray	Superior	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Bowman	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pennie	Gammage	Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	C	Severna Park	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Sherman	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Flynn	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clayton	Cox	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Cook	Carroll	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Isabella	Bowker	Cranston	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R. Wayne	Ellis	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Tomlinson	Catskill	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Schrieber	Paonia	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Czapkowicz	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ray	Matteau	Westport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessie	Q	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Mickey	Ewing	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Robert	Fritsch	Dexter	Maine	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Couple this with the bizarre political climate we find ourselves in and we conclude IT IS A VERY PRECARIOUS DAY AND AGE!!

Aileen	F.	Huntington Beach	California	Protect our First Amendment Rights. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size & power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Susan	Lee	Tampa	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Our founders put freedom of speech and freedom of the press in the very first amednment, because they knew these were critical foundations to a free democratic republic. The current administration is doing everything it can to shatter those foundations by calling them “fake” and “bad people” and even, more horrific, “the enemy of the people,” when, in fact, the free press is absolutely vital in PREVENTING AN ENEMY OF THE PEOPLE, like a dictator or authoritarian, from spreading HIS dogma. Well, Sinclair is doing just that and already way too far around the country! It forced its local stations to air segments that were total LIES based on partisan politics. This is EXACTLY what our founders wanted to PREVENT with an ACTUAL free press that has much

Glenn	Gawinowicz	Oreland	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Campbell	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Buss	Camden	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fredric	Cohen	Washington Crossing	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christy	Susman	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jana	Jarosh	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Dearmont	Bertram	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Marinaccio	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Chadwick	Medford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
G	Y	Wyckoff	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wesley	Tyler	Painesville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clinton	Schaeffer	Parker	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Young	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bradford	Bush	Midland	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Jacques	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paige	May	Dallas	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Tausz	ITHACA	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Thompson	Layton	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maritte	Rahav	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Klene	Athens	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Wolfe	OAKLAND	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Smith	Vernon Hills	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Cardenas	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angel	Portillo	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrian	Haynes	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Sharp	ELKINS PARK	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nicole	corradino	miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Ovink	Blacksburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Perkins	Cranford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hans	Dettmar	Annandale	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Golding	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Macy	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayne	Holtman	Phila	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tamra	McIlvain	Golden	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Brennan	Alton	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
amy	Romberg	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Spears	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Fingerman	Monteagle	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Gold	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Fink	El Cerrito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valory	Mitchell	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raylene	crawford	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Thomas	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally	Woodard	Lewisburg	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Vadnai	Katonah	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Duval	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Jones	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Yborra	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenna	Geiger	Paoli	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Mitchell	Scottsdale	Arizona

This is a dangerous precedent.

Irwin	Hoenig	Laurel	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Ginsburg	WINSTON SALEM	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Prymula	Zion	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samuel	Pott	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Green	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eve	Gaige	Palmyra	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Engel	Mesquite	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terri	Rapoport	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Payne	Round Hill	Virginia	Urge the FCC to deny the Sinclair-Tribune merger as it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, contradicting the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosemarie	Nielsen	Fairfax Station	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	McNabb	Rockville	Maryland
Charles	Bramlet	Ashland	Oregon

Would you like an extra side of Communism with your journalism? I

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Kentch	Dallas	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Henley	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Bohl	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J. Victoria	Gibson	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Koch	Athens	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Boyers	Hamtramck	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlen	Tompkins	Vero Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jana	Jarosh	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

debra	olson	Loma Linda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Wachob	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Phillips	Cedar Park	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Cohn	Hastings on hudson	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Quackenbush	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joyce	Wegs	Mishawaka	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Green	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Gevedon	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Brandon	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Clark	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Farley	Fairlawn	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nathan	Long	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Independent media and free press is always important to democracy and is crucial now in the wake of the claims of "fake news" given by all parties. Therefore I strongly urge you as those who must act in the interest of the American people And democracy to prevent the Sinclair-Tribune merger.
				It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

David	Mudry	Nottingham	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Trausch	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Sheldon	Forest Grove	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ingrid	Cornax	San Diego	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger. News stations should be free to report the news without being forced to express the corporate message. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Limor	Finkel	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Nielsen	Blair	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Mory	Clarks Summit	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Willey	Conroe	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mavis	Hamilton	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Smith	Media	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger! Diversity of thought and viewpoints is what makes any society great.

Pam	Anderson	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Gilliem	Oro Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Ralfs	Davenport	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phillip	Bossant	Denton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Baris	Guler	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Noble	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bill	mahlum	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Diane	Dowling	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				Block the Sinclair-Tribune merger! FCC, don't contradict your own policies! A TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hooper	Raymore	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Kranig	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Meier	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Downing	Roeland Park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Grieves	peoria	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amelia	Maio	Newton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Bumpus	Sevierville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Herndon	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Schmitt	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emmaly	Wiederholt	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Hurst	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Payne	Maineville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hughen	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Akkad	east Hampton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nelda	Snyder	Mechanicsville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tia	Beckman	Wakefield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Bogin	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Greta	Gahl	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerrianne	Rousseau	Manhattan Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	McGuire	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cabo	Granato	Franklinville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Brady	River Forest	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sireen	Reddy	Brooklyn	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nastasja	Terry	Chula Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	McNair	lawton	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Lecuyer	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tavi	Hawn	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Ball	Niles	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Gordon	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric J	Arroyo	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Berns	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clara	Guerrero	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lloyd	Davison	Springfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Knapp	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Banta	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverly	Jones	West Palm Bch	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Engelstad	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Jones	Mineola	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Casello	Tallahassee	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eiffel John	Manzano	Lafayette	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Polly	Jackson	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carlos	Zarur	Lafayette	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Beneski	Wheat ridge	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Brown	St paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Fenton	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bridget	Longcrier	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Rulnick	Middletown	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Marsh	Durham	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lara	Crawford	Belmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Trimble	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	McArdle	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Cerutti	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

steven	zimmerman	Pine Grove	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	McGarrigal	Woodside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josh	Rovner	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Marquez	Carlstadt	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Currah	Casper	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	McNair	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bari Nan	Rothchild	Park City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monika	Acosta	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Williams	Hendersonville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Harry	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Stone	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
joan	ambo	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tania	Williams	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Klein	Londonderry	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Marble	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Baggs	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Hubberman	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nate	Callens	Fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelvin	Anderson	Ashburn	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Liniman	Parma Hts.	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Chamberlain	West Chester	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Kantola	Niles	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	James	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clara	Guerrero	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Chandler	Los Alamos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Augenbraun	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Viola	Goodwin	Sparks	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tomasa	Haight	Marcellus	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Coppelia	Kahn	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Tremblay	Harrisonburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Gordon	Hermosa Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Byeta	Hoover-Mulvany	Pawtucket	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jullien	Logan	Norcross	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randolph	Pavlik	Frankfort	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhoda	Forte	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Wacker	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amiee	Stubbs	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ariane	Katz	Angwin	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Judge	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carmine	Tocci	Westford	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Piazza	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Ruiz	New York	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Paul	Acme	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debbie	Madrid	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Monteforte	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Fernandes	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Henry	Kujawa	Camden	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marla	Mendelson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Kaye	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cathy	Z	Arnold	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Hansen	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This proposed merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy.
Al	Cohen	Hummelstown	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do you know what a monopoly is? If you don't you can look up the word in a dictionary. The FCC charter says to make communications more available to all in the country, not to fewer and fewer. DO YOUR JOB.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Lorraine	Wulfe	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lance	Richardson	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Davis	Astoria	New York

Please do not allow Sinclair to merge with Tribune Media. This would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ciri	Haugh	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Kelly	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Dana	Georgetown	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ward	Pincus	Shokan	New York	For generations , we have understood that huge TV groups were bad for democracy. The Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hayley	Pilat	Westmont	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Goldman	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maradee	Davis	Greenbrae	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kendra	Holt	Wheaton	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Goldberg	Unadilla	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pepi	Streiff	Savannah	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Hansen	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This proposed merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

PJ	Morton	Appomattox	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country . This is extremely dangerous, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Wentworth	Monson	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Zillig	Grasonville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanna	Clark	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Coen	Elizabeth	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Zullow	Marlboro	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Sleizer	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Craig	Cape Coral	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Fleming	Kylertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Cauthorne	Hancock	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Frappier	Provdence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Esther	Farmer	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Toomre	Los Altos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marjorie	Broward	Jacksonville	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Beginning with our forefather: freedom of the press has been essential to our democracy. Please consider carefully the consequences of a Sinclair-Tribune merger which would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Marcia	Mueller	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Sowder	La Jolla	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Ross	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Cooledge	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Becker	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Patterson	Midland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Brown	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Shepherd	Butler	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Moyer	Millmont	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hugh	Moore	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernard	McCarthy	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stan	Hoobing	Boise	Idaho

I strongly believe that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Sabella	Waldwick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	Blasingame	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pedro	Rivera	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
M.L.	Morgenstern	Montrose,	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Chorny	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Blocker	Tama	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Mattison	Edgewater	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Jehn	Cochranton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

FRANCES	MCKEE	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Gaines	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Barrett	Carnegie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Hoerig	Wheat Ridge	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaitlin	Wheeler	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Burke	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ethan	Finley	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Rhodes	Thousand Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Hanley	LaGrange	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M Regina	Brunig	Nevada City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Lerose	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roel	Cantu	Mission	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tiffany	Mitchell	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rena	Riback	Rockville Centre	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Strasert	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	McFadden	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hia	Rubenstein	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Martin	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Kliewer	Auburn	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lindsay	Jones	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Cushwa	Williamsport	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Brown	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Hebert	Pittsboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Cooledge	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Bloodworth	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Haftel	Gainesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Morris	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Perez	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Guido	Chevy Chase	Maryland	I do not want Sinclair to be any stronger than it already is. Media outlets should not be forced to air specific stories from a specific perspective. They should be neutral fact reporters.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
manuel	de los rios	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lettieri	Norwalk	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Sarvis	Shaftsbury	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleanor	Sinclair	Carrollton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauri	Rice	Ocala	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo Ann	Holmes	Lakeland	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Ruehlow	Savannah	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Best	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Heaton	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Smith	Topanga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
michelle	kaufman	River Edge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Terry	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Mac Phail	Palestine	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Mulligan	Mooresville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Cutler	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Sines	Yosemite National P	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Davis	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	P	Playa del Rey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Wiener	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zoe	Samson	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Sharkin	Lakewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriele	Thompson	Rego Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Cutler	Muskegon	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Nevins	Milford	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Bianchi	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Kozlow	Delran	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size. It contradicts the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Bea	Volpe	Coeur D'Alene	Idaho	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cortney	Zaret	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva	Langan	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Mortimer	Milford	Connecticut	A free and unfettered press is essential to our republic. This consolidation would put dampers on the 1st amendment. We can't have that and survive as a free nation. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jeanette	Davis	Grand Junction	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Rolland	Quincy sous Senart	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Eccles	Panama	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Hibbs	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristina	Glaiberman	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Anderson	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carla	Berkley	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Johns-Goodman RN Cpt. U. Erin		Tennessee	I am a REGISTERED VOTER & a Veteran... We took an OATH to Protect America & Our Constitution from ALL Enemies, Foreign & Domestic. It's beginning to look like we Vets will HAVE to protect This Country from Trump & the GOP. We WILL REMEMBER @ the POLLS!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Susan	Torres	Albuquerque	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Graham	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Lu	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Firely	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Legault	Atkinson	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Wildman	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noah	Frase	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darnell Rudd	Mandelblatt	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Dresser	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Gurian	Roanoke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Fontanella	Bethany Beach	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoge	Moses	Morgantown	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Fredrickson	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Golden	Cypress	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charisse	Brown	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Maxwell	Denton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Bradley	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Zinkann	Montgomery	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Hallen-Adams	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Worm	Palm Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Christensen	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jose	Jimenez	Effort	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marte	Parham	Sugar Land	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bridget	Clarkin	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Walker	Benton	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Blachly	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Geoffrey	Carlson	Staten Island	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chau	Walters	McLean	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Zeiser	Hilton Head Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Polly	Sherard	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	Smith	Bakersfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Cox	Brevard	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Adala	lake Mary	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharyn	Simmons	Napa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Shelton	Sonora	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Gardner	Nampa	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bry	Leach	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Schutte	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Tumpson	Hoboken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andy	Wedel	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jeff	roseneberg	Vilas	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Kollar	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Thank you. Patricia Kollar, 421 N. Sedge Ln., Tucson AZ 85748-3719
Carol	Epstein	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Ragan-George	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Harris	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Anderson	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Graham	La Porte	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Gibson	San Clemente	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Duvall	Clatskanie	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Dorn	Glencoe	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucille	Howard	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Strasser	Takoma Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Marshall	Cleveland Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Caruso	Tijeras	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Kolodny	NEW YORK	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Gorn	Morris	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Holland	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Gottlieb	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jenny	Halliday	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christian	Camphire	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Hilton	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Porter	Buxton	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Buglio	Frankfort	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R	Rogers	Norman	Oklahoma	WHY are we giving Sinclair unprecedented control over our nation’s TV news? WHO thinks this is a good idea? The Sinclair-Tribune merger creates a television that only provides "news" that Sinclair has chosen for the American people.
Gail	Powell	Santa Fe	New Mexico	This doesn't just contradict the FCC's own policies. This spits on A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Copeland	Georgetown	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Burns	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Castell	Landing	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Powell	Phx	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Swirsky	Cedarhurst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Rosenthal	Rego Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Hankey	Eden Prairie	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power and would contradict FCC policies. It would reduce free speech and the diversity of views in the media that is essential for a strong democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray political bias which limits viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must block this merger.

Jerry	Phipps	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Smith	Falconer	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eleanor	Abrons	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Long	jamestown	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MaryLois	Hilton	Lebanon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lara	Fischman	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	McKeel	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	Chyn	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Griswold	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Keefe	Bonita Spgs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Hendrickson	Park Ridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sarah	ashe	Middlebury	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elinore	Krell	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. F	Taylor	Hilton Head Island	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies.

It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Julien	DellaPorta	Astoria	New York

Nicole	Mariani	Warwick	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Tini	Mountain Iron	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsay	Stokes	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Devons	Durango	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Meunier	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Frank	Mejia	Sacramento	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Good Day, A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies and is simply dangerous and not needed. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We, the American people, deserve clean unbiased news.

Stephen	Edwards	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Braunbach	Lockport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	David	Independence	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgeen	Carson	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Falling	Manchester	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	Gregg	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Huffman	Guilford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Stales	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Perrotta	Township Of Washin	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kathryn	Nugent	South Burlington	Vermont	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I agree with and support the position the ACLU is taking on this proposed merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gena	Rawdon	Huntsville	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cathy	James	Drexel Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Kaufmann	Pikesville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maryanne	Jerome	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Gaines	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodney	Funk	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vincent	Staupe	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glynnis	O'Connor	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Hubert	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Cummings	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Vershbow	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cara	Feldscher	Cockeysville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chantal	Berendsen	Port Washington	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adele	House	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Sweezey	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Levack	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Tucker	Boone	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emmy	Woessner	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Brooks	Danbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Al	Blazo	Canfield	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Riddel	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Pelchat	Wynnewood	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Casey	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Quenby	Morrow	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Khambholja	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carl	Prellwitz	Barrington	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Goksel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christian	Rosselli	Woodside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Morse	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Reynolds	Birmingham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janine	Ringier	Landing	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Pierce	Corning	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Jarvis	Jerome	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Dembkowski	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	McPherson	Charlottesville	Virginia
Robert	McConnell	Mankato	Minnesota	The FCC must stand on the correct side of history and block this me A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Kennedy-Ragule	Albany	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Martini	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hoblin	Woodstock	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Hess	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Watkins	Addison, TX	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
E	W	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brodie	Burris	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitsuo	Tomita	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Sachs-Hamilton	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Harland	Candler	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fran	Cohen	Chevy Chase	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Swift	Martinez	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Cox	Brevard	North Carolina	We must not allow any more steps toward a controlled press, toward a less free world, a less free democracy.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by
Chanelle	Benz	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Sherman-Jones	Limestone	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yousef	Zarbalian	Vienna	Virginia	Do your damn job FCC, we're watching you. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Hayes	West Hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Northcutt	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

The FCC must block this merger in order to protect Americans' right to a free and diverse media.

Robert	Watzke	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Kendall	Iselin	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Jones	Santa Ana	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Josh	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Wages	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Spera	Tyler	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Sequeira	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rico	Camacho	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenna	McElroy	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Pape	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Davis	Flint	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Schultz	Morehead City	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Harlan	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Rose	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. Mark	Hopkin	Livingston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gabriella	Arroyo	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	O'Neil	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clinton	Gilbert	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	McDill	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Martin	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Royal	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would literally contradict the FCC's own policies. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy, as Sinclair has proven that they intend to do. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Terry	Norbury	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonette	Lucente	xenia	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Kaysen	Topanga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerry	Keen	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
eric	weiss	Atascadero	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	McFarland	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Scoville	Hewitt	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gillian	Bennett	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Schnepp	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Kiver	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tritia	Moneypenny	Seaside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Mueller	Marion	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Nusser	Sherwood	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Kawaguchi	Scarsdale	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gilbert	Ornelas	Schertz	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Weldon	Monsport	Morris Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Fedor	Solana Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Mone	Elk Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Karnoff	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Milt	Klompus	Ft Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Herbert	Zigler	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremiah	Teague	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	McDaniel	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruno	Navarro	Tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Norden	DEFIANCE	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yousef	Zakaria	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Lewis	Juno Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Pipke	Rocky Hill	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alex	Zackrone	WHITE PLAINS	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

linda	candella	Milford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
William	Stewart	Morgantown	West Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair already owns nearly one third of the television stations in the US. No media company should have that much power to steer the political discussion in our country. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Bilardello	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Breidenbach	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Schintzius	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roy	Jellison	Aurora	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Lang	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Spencer	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. With this merger we will no longer have a free press...the

Renee	Solomon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Bass	Troutdale	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Tibbot	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Nygren	Okatie	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	McDonald	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonio	Gonzalez	North Bergen	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Strangia	Saratoga Springs	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Semlear	Longview	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cherilyn	Reid	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Platt	Palm Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Warner	Otis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Connell	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Berkson	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Smallwood	Waldorf	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Pfeffer	Long Beach	California	I completely agree with the following statements: A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
elizabeth	anderson	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Unger	Delray Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Lightbourne	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	Shannon	Youngsville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Rummel	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Weyrauch	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Bancroft	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Davis	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bethany	Christian	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Nolterieke	Laguna Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Kinsella	Torrance	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Schwyhart	Winfield	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Ohland	Lawrence Twp	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Ragolia	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brad	Pritchett	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Bartholomew	Audubon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Slabach	Churubusco	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Selby	Schwartz	San Francisco	California	As an American citizen and voter, I am extremely concerned about the possibility that the FCC would allow a Sinclair-Tribune merger. If this merger is allowed to go through, it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. This outcome would contradict the FCC's own policies, and I strongly urge you to consider that the FCC is responsible to the American people, NOT to corporate interests.
Judy	Andrews	Belen	New Mexico	The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A merger of this magnitude would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It is worth remembering as well that Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Gordon	South Amboy	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Robinson	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Maxwell	Vandalia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gillian	Morshedi	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

April	Carne	Flower Mound	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
J. William	Inslee	Coatesville	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We rely on the FCC to protect the radio spectrum from effective excessive domination by any financial, ideological or political interest.

Etta	Robin	Bakersfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Tsonis	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elias	Ortega	Highland	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marie	O'Meara	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Rhine	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Michlin	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Kim	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cara	Kilduff	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Hopf	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ilyse	Streim	Lafayette	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

FREDERICK	REMUS	Naples	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maura	Puscheck	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Nagy	Torrance	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ian	Nauroth	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Biresh	Thakkar	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Keane	New Hyde Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Bezdicek	Haiku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leyla	Mosavati	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	B	Beavercreek	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	C	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

francescA	Noli	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Kossack	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Sweany	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirby	McDaniel	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Heirtzler	Durham	New Hampshire	The proposed merger creates a broadcasting behemoth that easily contradicts the FCC's policy goals. We've already seen how Sinclair-owned starting are required to toe the party like and read editorials prepared for them by HQ, which clearly stifles local speech, and a further expansion would just make that problem worse. Diverse thought and speech is what this country was founded on, and both are required for a healthy democracy.
Thomas	Reich	Addison	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Woods	Grand Island	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Moyer	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Feder	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
WILLIAM	MANCINI	kinderhook	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The free exchange of ideas is a foundation of a free society. The

Jennifer	Haber	Severna Park	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirt	Strother	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Grueneberg	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Hodges	Archer	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cedering	Fox	Studio City	California	I was just offered a job to be the female announcer for a Sinclair station in a major market. The contract was the most agregious I have ever seen. When I balked, I was told that all Sinclair employees sign these terrible contracts, including the anchors. It is not something I could do in good conscience. I have been a voice for many of the stations around the country for years but there is absolutely no way that any self-respecting professional can work for either Sinclair or Tribune. Tribune is equally bad. Together it will be a major disaster! This merger is a disastrous idea for employees everywhere.
Janet	Voth	Newton	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It is imperative that we retain as many different sources for

Thomas	O'Brien	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Barshak	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Barr	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Anderson Miller	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ali	Harris	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Brockway	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Tolk	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Amidei	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Lynch-Hayes	Augusta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Maysey	Gulfport	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Dunn	Highlands Ranch	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Gomel	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Valk	Orange City	Florida	The First Amendment is supposed to give us the right to free speech and a free press. A news station being forced by the mega-corporation that owns it to parrot the same messages violates these freedoms. There’s nothing free about a scripted press – and there’s nothing free about a public with no other option for local news.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Denise	Malone	Santa Fe	New Mexico
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olga	Bryskin	Great Falls	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalia	Perez	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Parsons	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Lutz	Birmingham	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

T.	F.	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Csaszar	Fleetwood	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

anet	ranaldo	los angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Lauer	Olathe	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Wall	Hamburg	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Duggan	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William and Janice	Kimes	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Pearson-Watson	Estes Park	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Hostler	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Wiechmann	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Bradshaw	Fredericksburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Grego	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Gilpin	La Plata	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Sinclair	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Petrella	Fullerton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
phyllis	segura	saugerties	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Argo	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaime	Schell	Towson	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	MacKenzie	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Ross	Beverly Hills	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Samways	St Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ardith	Keck	Akron	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barb	Martin	North Chesterfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Dustin	Hiles	Boulder	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. Moreover, it would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech and severely constrain and homogenize the diversity of views available in and through the press which are essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, and this systematically undermines genuine viewpoint diversity, which has been a value upheld by the Supreme Court since at leas 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

judy	davies	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Long	jamestown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Palermo	Landing	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Morehouse	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Freer	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Esther	Hauber	Mount Pleasant	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dreiling	Derby	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luanne	Hernandez-Storr	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eero	Bodien	Chanhassen	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Barton	Springfield	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Fish	Gray	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corinne	Frugoni	Arcata	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Eissing	Brooklyn	New York	Please, for once in your existence, do the right thing. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Miriam	vanWerkhoven	Erdenheim	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Benson	Newbury Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jared	Howe	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	McLaughlin	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Boutin	Lake Oswego	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Summers	Belton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Arons	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abe	Levy	Bonita Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Ault	Lenexa	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dreiling	Derby	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Calandro	Belleville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Liebrecht	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Buck	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura leigh	Hughes	Los Angeles,	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeane	Harrison	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

c	coll	Nanuet	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Kahlert	West St Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mrs. P. D.	Waterworth	Lanham	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
janice	sanes	Libertyville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Greif	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Doherty	Hastings On Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dreiling	Derby	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Dominick-Kosmicki	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Worsnopp	North Babylon	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Rice	York	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Connor	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Diner	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teri	Lunn	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Mckie	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth	Johnson	Long Beach	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Jernigan	Canton	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	McDonald	San Anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ericka	Thessen	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Osgood	Minden	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Childress	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Reed	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Lee	Poway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JeanEileen	Durgin-Clinchard	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Bowen	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Anthony	Saint Michaels	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Lawson	Richmond	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Lee	Miller	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sean	Kennedy	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shaylee	Smith	Parker	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Garfield	Smith	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Zemcov	Pittsford	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Zumbrunnen	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Woolrich	Olathe	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Germscheid	Plymouth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mac	McLoughlin	Danville	California	Here's your opportunity to show what a 'Profile in Courage' looks like. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christoph	Weber	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	DuPratt	Ojai	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Olive	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryan	Beyer	San Dimas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Witt	Sparks	Montrose	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Riley	Sparta	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dale	Mendoza	Bahama	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Greene	Savannah	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Dettro	Stonington	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tonya	Bednarick	Cadillac	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Wahl	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Brame	Kansas City	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	McGinnis	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Glidden	Tecumseh	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	Lester	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Fiorella	Redondo Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Gallegos	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Silverstrim	Wilmington	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
James	Klein	Corpus Christi	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Winchester	Overland Park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Singer	Brightwaters	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Hite	Lawrence	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laleh	Bahrami	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caren	Osgood	Redding	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	Seff	McKinney	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dreiling	Derby	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Cohen	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vic	Cook	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Pedroza	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Maceira	Keizer	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
steve	Joester	NYC	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SaraJane	Kukawka	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. PLEASE
Peggy	Handler	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Cooper	Sound Beach	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

steven	eagle	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriella	Fuller	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Dreiling	Derby	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Gunther	North Kingstown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Blum	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Coda	Clayton	Commerce	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rebecca	rothman	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Matt	Dublin	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Koester	Boiling Springs	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Adams	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mason	Kocel	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Linthicum	Piqua	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Sugar	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Schulte	New Canaan	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Matheron	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Radford	Glide	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carl	Rosenfeld	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Thompson	Silver spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celeste	Howard	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacia	Sambar	Pebble Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Philip	S.	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

elizabeth	lambert	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenny	Latham	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	LaCheen	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Miller	Tolar	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helena	Michalek	Escondido	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Barrett	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wesley	Beary	Iowa City	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Beakley	Gray	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roy	Bellante	Cheshire	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Moira	Whalen	Surry	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Pelka	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brandon	New	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Hohn	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ali	Trianfo	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Athena	Jolly	West Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thane	Boden	Cheyenne	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	cella	New Port Richey	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gay	Signoff	North Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Winn	Socorro, New Mexic	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Kodama	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Lachance	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jay	murzyn	Old Lyme	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerstin	Rao	Westport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Casey	Kuhnhausen	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzann	Graf	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Marzella	Wantagh	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Conner	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Arnato	El Dorado Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Dittmann	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Bonsell	Lewisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Powers	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Slicher	Port Saint Lucie	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Richards	La Jolla	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Molmen	Berea	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Casterton	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Wagner	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Stines	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Keipert	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noam	Lior	Toronto	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Sussek	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maryann	Carey	Villa Rica	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ali	Stow	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodger	Campbell	Knoxville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Treegoob	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Higginbotham	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Garcia	Alpine	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dreiling	Derby	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olga	Aguilar	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Pflug	Havana	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mara	Johnson	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Pratchett	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Brunotts	Ashburn	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

