joanna	sinnwell	Greeley	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael F.	Kolassa	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Ratliff	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Bullock	Winter Garden	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Cepero	Aurora	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Rodrigo	Conway	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must abide by its own regulations and legal precedent and block this merger.

suzanne	comins	Bangor	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Bobroff-Hajal	WHITE PLAINS	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morton	Millen	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Nutt	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

PHILIP	SMITH	PROVIDENCE	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Tuttle	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Glover	Copperopolis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Prinz	San Gabriel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heiko	Volkmann	Clarksville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shannon	Tyree	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ruth	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Oleg	Dubson	Sunnyside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerry	Nelson	Louisville	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victor	Evjen	Le Claire	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carey	Hume	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Araiza	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Litwin	Babylon	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Sellers	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SUSAN	WASKEY	Argyle	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	James	Audubon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Zamot	Addison	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Harper	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Lusardi	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barry	Payne	Vicksburg	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Kinsman	Florence	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Wechter	Arden	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Morris	Potomac	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Phillips	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Goldberg	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Lurvey	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

al	krause	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Zugaib	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Cunningham	Windsor	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J.	Looper	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Kuhl	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Parker	Chatham	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Martin	Centralia	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Silvern	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Teten	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael F.	Kolassa	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	McCabe	Virginia Bch	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Binggeli	Blue Springs	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Blaine	Ackley	Hillsboro	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tere	Magana	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This should not happen. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We need to stop this merger. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alana	Burman	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Trent	Duncans Mills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	DePage	Santa Cruz	California	We must have diversity and freedom in our media.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
William	Brown	Huntington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonard	Rappe	Roslyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucas	Mayer	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josephine	O'Donnell	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Gill	Stanford	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Leppik	St Louis Park	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Potrzebowski	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Sansalone	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Skeens	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	King-Hinkley	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patti	Elledge	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Trechter	Chantilly	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Megan	Sellers	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Stannik	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eleanor	Bazzini	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	B	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janice	Tanaka	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryn	Sedlacek	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aya	Pena	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Wall	Glen Ellen	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Geller	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Morgan	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Anderson	Kuna	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Loren	Follette	Richmond	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terry	Yandell	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Simonds	Hollywood	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Faraday	St Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eve	Duran	Lemon Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cyrille	P	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	W	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Murschall	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renae	Franiuk	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodrigo	Susperreguy	Castro Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Eckhardt	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Prochowski	Yale	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Solomon	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Levy	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cafer	Oz	Marco Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Anderson	Waterloo	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Coles	Brentwood	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Sydow	Newport	Oregon	As you already know, a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. So please block this merger.

Marilynn	Snider	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carole	Powell	El Paso	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	McCabe	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Lutje	The Dalles	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brenda	Hefner		6	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Miller	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Howlett	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Tapuke-O'Neal	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Barker	Lancaster	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Sylvester	Cape Coral	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Klotzbach	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Wenzel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Ammer	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It's more important now than ever that we American people have access to a variety of media in order to form discourse and dialogue among each other and bring ourselves back to a healthy America.
Jeri	Pollock	Altadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joni	Shereda	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Connolly	Chico	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Brown	Matthews	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Juster Shore	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Bayless	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ray	Neff	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Vestal	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Mobile	Malvern	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Mulcahy	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charlotte	Phillips	Richmond	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Baumann	Greensburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Drew	Hackman	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	McCord	Auburn Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Cohen	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

susan	sundermeyer	Chesterfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Foys	Audubon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hilary	Abe	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Shemanski	Norway	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Chen	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
enid	dunn	lanesboro	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Millicent	Allenby	Greenbelt	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger is an extreme threat to viewpoint diversity, given how they require particular slants on stories for their broadcast affiliates. I could imagine a future in which they simply didn't report on things like migrant families being torn apart at the border. This is the nightmare of a private media conglomerate whose principles are only to create a version of reality they find favorable, rather than to foster an informed and knowledgeable public who can make up its own mind. The airwaves are a natural resource, and belong to we the people. This merger flies in the face of that fact, using public resources for narrow and frightening ends. Thank you for denying this merger!

Kimberly	Reed	Hurst	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Howard	Arcata	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kendall	Day	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Herman	Rodrigo	Conway	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must follow its own regulations and the Court's decision and block this merger.

Lynda	Barry	Wailuku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Quigley	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Isabelle	Sobjack	Citrus Heights	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Donagher	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brett	Tabin	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Eisenberg	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Cutty	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hilary	Eckberg	Oakton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandi	Redman	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Byrne	Wheaton	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Grange	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Oldenburg	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Geoffrey	Bruen	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luke	Sanders	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Rhodes	Hesperia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Weappa	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ernest	Garcia	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty Lou	Hudson	Inverness	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Boylston	Sanford	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Stanczyk	Saratoga Springs	New York
Richard	Nelson	Whitehall	Pennsylvania

I am writing to ask you to block the Sinclair merger. It will be a much

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ana	belle	Santa Clara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angie	Neal	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Ferguson	Vacaville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Domowitz	North Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicky	Arnold	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Riki	Motes	Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	G	Phoenixville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Brown	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	S	S h	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R. Eugene	Manon	Hagerstown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Powers	Oro Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

laurie	Rodgers	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Kayne	Lawrence Township	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Winter	Napa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Minser	Marshalltown	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Corrigan	Blacksburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Smoucha	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Kukkonen	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

René	Flores	Bonita	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Hoover	Garden Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Halperin	Fredericksburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Sanderson	Corvallis	Oregon

Stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roy	Malpass	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Gladstein	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Davis	Chevy Chase	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Mass	LA GRANGE	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Wiese	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Wolcott	Temecula	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Blachman	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Hansen	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liz	Caine	Guerneville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kirstin	Quinn Siegel	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Murphy	Shepherd	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	McConnell	Talleyville	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mickey	Waggoner	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olga	Carroll	Livermore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Russell	Allen	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sunny	Bleckinger	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Lambert	Crosslake	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roni	Liberman	Pittsboro,	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	Pelafigue	arcata	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Wessels	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wm Scott	Roleson	Poway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Hall	Mount Vernon	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	French	Galesburg	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Collier	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ozzie	Fallick	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Cohen	Culver City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Williams	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Hector	Spring Lake	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Ryan	Henniker	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Ambrose	Marina	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Sandoval-Schaefer	Hamden	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
janna	harris	LA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sharleen	solares	hempstead	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Varga	Brisbane	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J.	Zucker	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Graham	Parker	Solebury	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Schwarz	Shelburne	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Rider	Mt. Auburn	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linc	Leifeste	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deniz	Parlar	West Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Woodward	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stuart	Greenspan	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Scheckler	Draper	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nate	Lagacy	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Lawler	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Mendes	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Eggerstedt	Clackamas	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Lowrey	Independence	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Adams	SMITHFIELD	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Our struggles to combat the spread of false news on social media requires a truly diverse collection of true news sources. Placing hundreds of communities under the influence of only one media company will compound the problem, not alleviate it. That is particularly true when we have seen that Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias.
Kevin	Schlink	Quaker Hill	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Augusto	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucas	Pearson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ida	Houston	Stilwell	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Richardson	Topeka	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Nasby	Springfield	Missouri	I urge you to reject this dangerous merger! It will endanger our free speech rights and co tribute to a state run media company. No merger!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
Anthony	Thompson	Minneapolis	Minnesota
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter W.	Rose	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Shuput	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angus	Madden	Hopkinton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deann	Davis	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krysten	Nguyen	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	McKay	Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bergeron	Warwick	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Thomas	Port Carbon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Margolis	Buffalo Grove	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Springer	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Mayer	Morristown	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vic	Polites	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger is a terrible idea. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that they would stifle free speech and diversity of views in the press - things that are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Illg	Boulder	Colorado

Do NOT allow this merger please. Sinclair isn't a media organization. It's a politically biased nationwide lobbying network.

Suzan	Lastovica	Spring Lake Heights	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonja	Davis	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judson	White	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Edelman-Tolchin	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carolina	Goodman	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Ware	Potomac	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marsha	Goldwasser	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Sanborn	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Tongen	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Chillemi	Collegeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Mayer	Morristown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

caroline	maser	Soquel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Fish	Linden	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Hamre	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Craig	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Goldwyn	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Farrell	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Schmitt	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hirsch	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Herzfeld	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
liz	winfrey-bird	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Garrambone	Flagstaff	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
T	Edick	Dimondale	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wava	Carpenter	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Brady	Galesburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	McCall	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valerie	Katz	Grants Pass	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Termaat	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Whitford	San Carlos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Stuehler	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Mackey	Norfolk	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hedda	Haning	Charleston	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D	Penning	Springfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

cathe	lester	el paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Cooley	Excelsior	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Wiren	Rocklin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary Mark	Munday	New Oxford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Cardenas	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Elizabeth	Glynn	Cincinnati	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is wrong, wrong, wrong! A free and open press is ESSENTIAL to our democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lydia	Pettis	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Richard	Leister	Berkeley Hts	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I write to support opposition to the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Torson	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MARIE	MORAN	Venice	Florida

It is time for the underground networks once more. John Lennon where are u?

Christopher	Wiren	Rocklin	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Silva	McKinney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Skenazy	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Joshua	Mayer	New Orleans	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The 4th Estate must be protected and remain independent! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MaryEllen	Andrews	Bartow	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Ramos	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Schmidt	Lafayette	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Tilley	Cartersville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed D.	Metal	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eyob	Tadesse	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Bell	Jamestown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff and Sara	Sacharow	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jordan	Morales	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Sabo	Mount Airy	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merlyn	Holmes	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drew	Morrison	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Farrell	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Xachery	Branch	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Simonton	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Denslow	Mount Pleasant	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Taylor	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ted	Boggues	Southfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shane	Garcia	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Wendel	Bailey	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irene	Gajjar	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	O'Loughlin	Amarillo	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	London	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Volkoff	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jairo	Angulo	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Edmonds	Carmel Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Callie	M	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yadira	Arellano	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Thompson	Saline	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Oliva	Ambrosio	Fillmore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Streams	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joel	Grumm	Lake City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Loyer	Valencia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	O'Neill	Dayton	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Liu	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Saundry	Simi Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Micheal	Gilliam	Cabot	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Anduskey	Valparaiso	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nan	Moorman	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gordon	Jones	Grand Rapids	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Stop this merger!!! It would greatly threaten my constitution guaranteed right to free speech in the First Amendment. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

candee	bass	Woodland Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeline	Van Dyck	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Evans	Mission Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Sanzenbacher	Orland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Ali Cordoba	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Skirving	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Silva	West Lafayette	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Steadmon	Boulder City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rich	Zadora	Clermont	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Boostrom	Evansville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Freda	Pyles	Russell	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christina	Wallerstein	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Sinnott	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Signe	Hammer	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Swalby	Organ	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Perry	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Devens	Suffern	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	Brown	Munroe Falls	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Mason	Dearborn	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Karen	Nedzela	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please abide by our forefathers' Constitutional intent and stop the Sinclair/Tribune merger!! It is dangerous for our Republic, and would seriously damage real freedom of speech and thought for a large part of our country. Dear FCC officials, please examine your hearts and conscience-- and keep this nation's freedoms safe for your children and grandchildren. Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Eli	Hansen	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rhys	Marsh	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Geneseo	Yarmouth	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
nancy	kaplan	ANN ARBOR	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Copperman	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Clark	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremiah	O'Neil	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marie	Lemenu	Dearborn	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Vander Meiden	ROUND ROCK	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Ross	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexa	Unruh	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvette	Gonzalez	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Freshney	Saint Francisville	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Krause	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Sigler	Aloha	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Tuckett	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ethan	Klitzke	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leigh	Stamets	Carmichael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francesca	Tomaino	Randolph	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John and Michele	Saridan	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Addison	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Freiheit	Centennial	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mahta	Pirooz	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LISA	FALK	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stewart	Denslow	Mount Pleasant	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sandra	martin	clinton twp	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Wyman	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Weber	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Winstone	Oak Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Sarricks	Running Springs	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Altman	Binghamton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamye Boone	Ward	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Anderson	Maineville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Rozzen	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Seaton	Sonora	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sofie	Backstrom	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	McFarland	Point Arena		California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

christine	Schnetz		94609	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherri	Kalman	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Coleman	Beach Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gordon-Lickey	Portland	Oregon	Why individual comment: This merger would create something akin to a monopoly. If this monopoly is a media monopoly, only one viewpoint will be expressed. Money will control the expression of diverse viewpoints, and we will have a de facto suppression of freedom of the press.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Simone	Pisias	Mendocino	California
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LaDonna	Gaines	Birmingham	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Occhipinti	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Roberts	Mundelein	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Thomas	Myrtle Creek	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marla	Caldwell	Snellville	Georgia	The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger absolutely must not be approved. The US needs more diversity of ownership in media, particularly broadcast media, not less. Sinclair's policies of dictating content centrally make it even more important in this case than it would be normally, because they aggressively seek to present a united view from all of their stations.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tamara	Keeney	Liverpool	New York
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keri	Merriman	Morrison	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Fletcher	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Roberts	Mundelein	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayne	Dutra	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Engel	Taos	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Bragg	Wauconda	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia M	Baker	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine Durkin	Robinson	Lutz	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Stovall	Macomb	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally	Olah	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva	Loney	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Aronson	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Stellrecht	Saratoga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eloisa	Edery	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Sweetser	Lombard	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Lyons	Ludington	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Taliaferro	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alex	Berlin	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Datlow	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Shelly	Gerding	Boulder	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The fourth estate is one of the pillars of our democracy. This merger is an attack on it's foundation. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Dorland	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Mittig	Mariposa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christian	Schelthoff	Lisle	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would be Horrible! To create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of such size and power would contradict the FCC's own policies. Let's face it, Tribune media needs all the subscribers it can get and this deal will lose most of Chicagoland for them. The Tribune will be known as the coupon-insert paper.
Mary Kate	Sheridan	Keene	New Hampshire	And Sinclair's broadcasts are basically nutso news. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyle	Crockett	Birmingham	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Brown	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Sorrentino	Westminster	Colorado	As a former broadcasting programmer & professional, I am keenly aware of how wtifling this merger can be for free speech & open access to the public airwaves.A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Neal	Whitman	Reynoldsburg	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theodore	Boomer	Mableton	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Migliozzi	Coventry	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

eric	trammel	belen	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Alger	Tivoli	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Evans	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	Muro	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee Riggins	Rich	Yorktown	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Clinton	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pattie	Meyer	Powhatan point	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Young	Walling	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	De la Cruz	WINDSOR	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	Hoffman	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Phillips-Burke	Woodstock	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Ferguson	Rio Rancho	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Roberts	Mundelein	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria Korina	Rodriguez	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter Paul	Illert	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J.Patricia	Connolly	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Max	Wolf	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yesenia	Garcia	Colton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A.J.	Kumar	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maura	Yasin	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Hannum	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne and Richard	Moeschl	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Hart	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vanessa	Fogg	Ada	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Graham	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. Mary	Mahern	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Grady	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leroy	Jones	Mobile	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Lentz	Mesa	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Riley	Essex Junction	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Malito	Palos Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Green	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria Cristina	Aguilera	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Zaayenga	Martinsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Lang	Los Altos Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Wolf	Traverse City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alfred	Winter	Mount Shasta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Silver	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Armstrong	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bette-Jane	Raphael	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Halloran	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Weisbeck	Preston	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harold	Engel	Clarksville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ivan	Rhudick	251 5th Avenue	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Citron	Raleigh	North Carolina	Freedom of the press is at risk. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
elizabeth	edwards	Pflugerville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

abena	williams	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Reinke	The Sea Ranch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Hamrick	Stephenville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Mashbir	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Mize	Spencer	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Andermills	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	LaFaso	Whitehouse	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Pillows	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Sims	Kirksville	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Webb	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keely	Farrell	Cresskill	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charmaine	Milder	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Swomly	Greenwich	Connecticut	I have watched in horror as Sinclair-owned stations have issued unified political messaging that can only be termed "propaganda." We do not want to turn the US into a totalitarian regime but that is made all the more likely when single entities control our nation's airwaves. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kathleen	Flanigan	Phoenix	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Turkus	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Bateman	Hillsboro	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lucy	elliott	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Krcmaric	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Edmond	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Rodeno	Ojai	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Whiting	Wilmington	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Poggi	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christie	George	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Kelm	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nico	Weiss	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Mullaugh	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Staci	Biernbaum	Billings	Montana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Pamela	Freeman	Skaneateles	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sinclair Broadcasting's pretense of journalism - while projecting a consistent, unwavering political bias - thinly masks its core mission as a propaganda outlet employing compelled speech by its on-air "journalists." Fostering this strategy through a merger with Tribune Media will pervert the First Amendment to pave the way toward state-controlled media as in North Korea, China, and other dictator states. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size devoted to biased political propagandizing, not fair media practice. The FCC must block this merger.

Rachna	Mathur	La Verne	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Traina	Des plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Wesner	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Wiener	Shreveport	Louisiana

W E N E E D D I V E R S I T Y

W E N E E D C O M P E T I T I O N

V V V

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting

Michele	Boyd	Medina	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Jacobson	COLUMBUS	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven and Susan	Mayes	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bette	Carlisle	Aloha	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Orion	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Wilson	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Bernhardt	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dilruba	Ahmed	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Gregg	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It is not in the public interest to have our broadcast media
Tim	Mollette-Parks	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Smith	Brooklyn	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Sweeney	Dixon	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Meador	Marble Falls	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Buss	Corrales	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Anderson	East Meadow	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Stanberry	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	Mckinley	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shoshana	Weinstein	Chesterfield	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Walker	Coshocton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Shutkin	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	McCollom	Salem	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Brownell	New Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Waznis	san diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Bergen	Skokie	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

gloria	moore	san jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hilary	Hyde	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Shamis	Deltona	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
pam	lins	brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Ashley	Delray Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Dorsher	St Cloud	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Berkow	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Aileen	Boyce	Santa Barbara	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please protect citizens' access to the free flow of information. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Denton	Cottonwood	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Montez	Lafayette	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph & Lynn	DiBlanca	Highland	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Utigaard	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katharine	Richman	Salinas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Thomas	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morris	Narunsky	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claudia	Thuring	Huntersville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monty	Wetch	Fort Myers	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sincerely, Monty Wetch.

Nelson	Reese	Park City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Ruland	Dorset	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Craddock	Fort Wayne	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alana	Schroeder	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Michaels	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Mendoza	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Benjamin	Walnut	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelley	Lazear	Englewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Stierand	Whitsett	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kent	Kitzman	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Davis	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Wiggins	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
LuAnn	Yocky	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

D.	Lucas	El Mirage	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Otis	Smithson	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dierk	Haskin	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marta	Hubbard	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Martino	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Barbara	Samuels	Woodland Hills	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. DO NOT ALLOW THIS DANGEROUS MERGER TO CREATE A MASSIVE CONGLOMERATE THAT WILL CONTROL THE NEWS THAT MOST AMERICANS HEAR AND SEE.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Jim	Desmond	Mamaroneck	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Eldredge	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Godwin	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rei	L'Asche	Kailua	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Leister	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	Chayefsky	Chappaqua	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Bosch	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Wilkins	Shelton	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacey	Sherr Michelon	Glencoe	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Honalee	Elkan	Juneau	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aloysius	Wald	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Foley	Zephyr cove	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toby	Hollander	Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Francesca	Zett	Newton	New Jersey	Media monopolies are more dangerous to Democracy than any
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Araujo	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally	Tofle	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Galbreath	Woodridge IL	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aspen	Brooks	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	McGrady	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Helton	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cameron	Hull	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stanley	Anderson	East Meadow	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ralph Q	Smith	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Raccio	Osseo	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Wagner	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brenda	Murillo	GARLAND	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bret	Smith	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Kaplan	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Gluck	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Trowbridge	Fishers	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Flanders	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Wagner	Egg Harbor Townshi	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Urbanowicz	Detroit	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edgar	Zelle	Wavery	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Volkenant	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bryce	Vernon	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Simpkin	Pelham	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Marine	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

diane	fabritius	Murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Irene	Gnemi	Newburg	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Dunnigan	West Kingston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Friedman	Solon	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Orman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rob	Gallinger	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald Lee	Butler	Port Deposit	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janice	Gintzler	Crestwood	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not deny me an independent medium: News, TV, Internet.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

A G	Khakee MD	Sanibel	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Allen	Olathe	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kia	H.	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Isabeall	Logan	Middlebury	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Savage	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	May	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alida	Westman	Ypsilanti	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Kenney	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Craig	Winfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimmie	Aaron	Cartersville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ethel	herring	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimberly	Agosti	Rancho Cucamonga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Banbury	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adele	Anderson	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Weigel	Wadsworth	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ACLU Supporter	Unknown	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emillie	B	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Belikoff	Madison	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Beebe	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Holmes	Lewes	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Krier	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Lanteigne	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Weldon	Lewis	San Antonio	Texas	This should be illegal !! Bring back the fairness doctrine and quit allowing these right wing extremists to lie to the American people ! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Stephen	Workman	Alameda	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terri	Bellas	South Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Wackerla	Kearney	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Blanton	Guilford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Green	Pacifica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Paull	Aptos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Texler	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Breiby	Wasilla	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Losure	St Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Naimon	Midlothian	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Gott	Salisbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sincerely,

Nina	Kisch	San Ramon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Fuller	Littleton	Colorado

The FCC's is often related to consumer protection, but it was actuall

Barbara	Kepley	Graham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nena	Tatum	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Meadows	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Mackenzie	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clarice	Evans	Brunswick	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colin	Kay	Tinley Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Rich	Hallandale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen Rose	Brown	Madison	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roy	Saltman	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerouac	Mackendrick	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Fitzgerald	Felton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Skinner Ricketts	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wrench	Georgetown	Kentucky	Ma Bell breakup? You wouldn't allow that power to continue. Now your letting a Corp. build up to that. I say NO! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ruba	Leech	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo	Cam	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josh	Hunt	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Randall	Harriman	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Knipp	Catonsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Washington	Mansfield	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emillie	B	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Fitzgerald	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Hjerpe	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Johnson	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Weber	Chatham	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeri	Fergus	Redway	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
e.	darby	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Gambale	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Parker	Dallas	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Dewey	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Johnson	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

K.J.	KAP	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. More consolidation more control!
Trisha	Farco	Binghamton	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne-Louise	Marquis	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Dangeriously, it has directed its media outlets what to say and how to say it, rather than allowing for a free press in its markets. The merger will provide Sinclair a monopoly in markets with little other free press, and will stifle free speech, a free press, and the diversity of views that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Monique	Hanson	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Apol	Los Altos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Zislis	Exton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathleen	LeMaire	Woodstock	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Nelson	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Sevald	Caledonia	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Barrett	SALEM	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Crisafulli-Delio	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Wright	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Axton	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Gould	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Barach	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alice	Berlin	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Gambale	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janice	Gintzler	Crestwood	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

val	lord	LOS ANGELES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Casper	Union Springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Kingsolver	Ellettsville	Indiana
Kathy	Durner	Enfield	Connecticut

Dear FCC: You must stop this merger and protect free speech. The S

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Graveline	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Ackerman	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Lippman	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Lane	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Llewellyn	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Woods	Trenton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Guest	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francine	Jupiter	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	Manning	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Blaxland	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayne	Cerny	Inverness	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
aldo	figueroa	Inglewood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Nunez	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Newhouse	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Alger	Lahaina	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Verna	Sutherland	St Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Lambert	Laguna Woods	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Norloff	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Harper	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Whitney	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Finkel	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Kentis	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Lincourt	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Gibson	Stockbridge	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Rehner	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Burke	Keedysville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Strodtbeck	Marina Dl Rey	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Welkowitz	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Gebb	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Davis	Massapequa	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Truhlar	Lindsborg	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mw	stevens	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Johnson	Starke	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	A. Johnston	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Kipnis	Cherry Hill	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Keidel	Canyon Country	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cameron	Zavattero	Manchester	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Romano	Prescott Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

margaret	mcelveen	Palm harbor	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Waller	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Lester	Saint Joseph	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Scales	Napa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Bell Kearney	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Halcarz	Crown Point	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Grimley	North Wales	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
geneva	skeen	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	LoVerde	Chandler	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Therese	Garbarino	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carmen	Schultz	Prairie Grove	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Bergman	Tarrytown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

loretta	miller	Huntington Beach	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Goldman	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Espy	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tony	Juge	Fullerton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Kipnis	Cherry Hill	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Stevenson	Bay City	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymond	Marshall	Foresthill	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Starkel	Cumberland	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trisha	Connolly	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Nicholas	Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

enid	brick	Northbrook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Bassett	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Barlow	Nevada City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jacqueline	kramer	SONOMA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Fellows	Old Bar NSW	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Duane	Mantick	Lafayette	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Mitton	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Peebles	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	O'Grady	Templeton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Ramirez	Huntington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Subhajyoti	Bandyopadhyay	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Elizabeth	Milgram	Silver Spring	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It is contrary to the basic principles supporting diversity of views on TV if this merger were approved. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. This would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marshall	Myer	Knoxville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	Larmeu	Metairie	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Gaston	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Goldsmith	Manchester Center	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Worrell	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Delibes	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Chisholm	Wilmington	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Eisenberg	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Anderson	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
leonor	warren	hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Maxwell	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Simon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Ford	New Paltz	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Kulikowski	Myrtle Beach	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Estay	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Arnold	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katharine	Baldwin	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Birnbaum	Bronxville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Miller	Phillipsburg	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Misch	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth & Wayne	Paulson and Mayer	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Eaton	Brentwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Rowles	Sedona	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rich	Everett	Pensacola	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monika	Winchester	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Southard	Southern Pines	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Mullaugh	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janna	Passuntino	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a PROPAGANDA MACHINE and TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	LoVerde	Chandler	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Patton	New London	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Markillie	Grand Blanc	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jeff	Bond	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am writing to express my extreme concern about the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. Such a merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would diminish diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This merger would contradict the FCC's own policies on National TV ownership. Due to Sinclair's broadcasts portraying unwavering political bias, this merger would undoubtedly undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. But this isn't a question simply of partisanship. Sinclair’s attempt to acquire Tribune Media would virtually guarantee limits on the views that local news stations

Connie	Barber	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Kamm	Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harvey	Thaler	Westerly	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ewan Tristan	Booth	Tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Barone	Salt Lake Cty	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Troy	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esta	Walker	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Loffer	Campbell	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Crowle	Auburn	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Brown	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Morgan	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maxine	Deseta	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Renkert	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger greatly concerns me because of their broadcasting groups history of politicizing the news media. This is a threat to freedom of speech in the United States and there is a reason we have historically tried to break-up monopolies.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Peters	Sonoma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Bachelder	North Street	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	O'Connor	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Kane	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mubina	Gaffar	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Ash	Edwardsville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rob	Nelson	Zionsville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Jones	Santa Fe	New Mexico	I do not agree that the Sinclair-Tribune merger should be allowed to happen. A merger of Sinclair and Tribune threatens our First Amendment rights, thus contradicting the policies the FCC was founded on, as well as threatening freedom of speech and freedom of the press. It would set us up to operate more like Russia, thus threatening our democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Chris	Vincent	Monona	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Shopiro	Kissimmee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Lorenz	Littleton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathie	kentfield	LAGUNA NIGUEL	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rochelle	lazio	Lakewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Slanovits	Hoover	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Norman	Atkin MD	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential to a vital, healthy democracy.This merger is monopolistic at best and flies in the face of the United States' tradition of nurturing healthy DIVERSE opinions in the Forum. The Press is certainly the MOST ubiquitous and thus influential Forum in America! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

John	Renfrew	Annandale	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Kerschner	Tempe	Arizona

I'll be blunt: Even as it is, Sinclair and other stations with such strong bias are extremely dangerous to our democracy. The last thing we as a country need is further consolidation of news sources, and a merge like this would be another strike against viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Blocking this merge is one of many things at this turning point in our country's history which is essential to helping ensure a bright future for the United States.

Anita	Bixenstine	Kent	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Cioffi	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Worst	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Douglas	Thiel	Fairfield	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Schonewolf	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
wanda	sciascia	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Herring	Vilas	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Gamblin	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	de Keijzer	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Nathan	University City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gay	Block	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Schlosser	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Weiser	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J.D.	Ruybal	Windsor	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Cormas	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joyce	Smith	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Anderson	East Meadow	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianne	Go-Wheeler	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Goble	Norman	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Fichera	Wyckoff	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Brooks	Oberlin	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fern	Schlesinger	Glendale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Lipson	WEST BLOOMFIELD	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Brenner	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Benzacar	NEW YORK	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Mcclamma	Riverview	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Kovac	Streamwood	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen	Vice	League City	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Keats	Deerfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marsha	Suber	Lansdowne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Wright	Mobile	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lenora	Hall	Alpharetta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Crowley	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patty	Anderson	Orinda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ladonna	Pierce	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Ham	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Picchetti	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
loretta	miller	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheri	Langlois	Mendocino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sharon	Kalie	Nathrop	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. Sinclair makes their stations spout pre-packaged "news" that is NOT local, but is their propaganda. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martin	Israel	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Shapiro	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Beaird	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Isom	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Brown	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David A	Woolsey	Ellsworth	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regina	Sadowski	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bernard	Riedel	Belmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Folkner	Chandler	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Handford	West Warwick	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Epstein	Northbrook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Kudlaty	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	DeMaio	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Danielle	Silber	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Evans	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Protect our freedom of the press right and maintain American diversity! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Eames-Peck	Crofton	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annelise	Rolander	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
victoria	scheiderer	St Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Lovett	Plymouth Meeting	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nathan	Pate	Paoli	Indiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We are taught, and I believe, that competition is good. This merger would limit that good.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Tom	McClure	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elisa	Tessier	St. Charles	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clifford	Ryffel	St. Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Picchetti	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Schneider	Stockton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo Ann	Pinotti	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucinda	Lea	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Cheryl	Byrd	Albuquerque	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Radine	Borowsky	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Evans	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marge	Schwartz	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Fowler	Otego	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucy	Bonner	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Weakley	Truckee	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	McKenzie	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. No corporation should have that much power. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Grabauskas	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janna	Passuntino	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Barnes	Menifee	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Lynn	Emeryville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonci	Aguillard	Duluth	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Jameson	Calgary, AB Canada	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

chip	monk	loveland	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Maclean	Croton On Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Diamond	Tujunga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Dominguez	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Gruhl	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	K	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Gibson	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Wobus	Rough and Ready	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Ros	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Craven	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	Centoni	Redwood City	California	Monopolies are NOT GOOD for America. Competition is much better. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Hodges	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Pierce	Carrollton	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Greenman	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nadine	Binkowski	Perrysburg	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Scheib	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Clark	Port Clinton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ying	Wang	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bahar	Khatibi	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lynch	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jannie	Oppenheimer	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Suttmann	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jk	Anderson	bisbee	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is a plea about basic civil rights. In a world where the in world where the indigent are more and more dependent on the internet to survive, this merger is terrifying! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Virginia	Dwyer	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Callahan	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Riera	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Johnston	Hood River	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Kay	Ann arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Schreiber	Canoga Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maren	McCaleb	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Wuthrich	Elkhart	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lyn	Hines	Corte Madera	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Isom	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Alloway	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Pierce	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Hammond	Mount Laurel	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Forbes	Randolph	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Akbar	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Kurtz	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenna	Anderson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bernadette	Lynch	Sawyer	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Elmendorf	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Rose	Sonora	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sheila	Rithman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Daniel	Young	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vanessa	West	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Isom	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Weston	El Paso	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Frankenstein	Tempe	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

This is as much a threat to the freedom of speech, a free press, and

Carole	Maddux	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Wilks	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Finkelstein	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Swanson	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Ward	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Pivovarnick	Dunmore	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I would be reduced to only ONE local news station that was not Sinclair-owned. That's an unfair advantage in the market. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by Patricia	Radder	Clymer	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marsha	Palitz-Elliott	Los Gatos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mehran	Mohsenian	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Heflinger	Goodlettsville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Rouse	Arlington Heights	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Gunther	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Rose	Hudson	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Hanback	Shady Side	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SHEILA	GARY	Hayden	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shane	Hutchison	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Payne	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue and Ron	Shapiro-Holleman	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

N. L.	Morford	Indpls.	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hamid	Cheraghi	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Rosenthal	Brunswick	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Cisek	Loveland	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleanor	Farrell	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gene	Binder	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Ahler	Woodbury	Mississippi	The proposed merger represents a clear danger to American freedom of the press. Sinclair has already demonstrated its unconscionable willingness to compromise that fundamental freedom by dictating what its own journalists may say. Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mark	Nelson	San Anselmo	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randal	Helm	Compton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Weintraub	Pleasant Hill	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would violate the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erica	Godoy	Sahuarita	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J	Davis	Sf	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Forbes	Shamokin	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Peplinski	Middle Village	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sam	moussav	solon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Muehl	Moss Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	McLaughlin	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Berg	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Croft	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hamid	Cheraghi	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ric	Corless	Augusta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Dankel	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Gallaher	Wilson	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Lange	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nadia	Sas	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Jordan	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Ahler	Woodbury	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Kelsay	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reta	Bold	Godfrey	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Ryans	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Winters	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Williams	Rowlett	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Easley	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this
Ruth	Goldstein	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Genosa	Huntington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggy	Meyer	South Lake Tahoe	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	M	Stratham	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theodore	Beloin	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Johnson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Conn	Valley Center	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Miller	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Ruby	Woodside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Wurr	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elise	Beliak	Foster City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David and	McGraw-Schuchman	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Bethea	Warrenton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Worlow	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Palombo	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Wujcik	Newberg	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Susan	Gubar	Oceanside	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A free and independent Press/TV/etc. is absolutely vital for the survival of democracy. The TV stations Sinclair already owns requires their newspeople to read the same statement; I've

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kyrk	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Maderer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Inglis	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Katzburg	Thousand Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Bishop	Elk Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Bermeo	Woodland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Cummings	Merritt Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Martin	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Fait	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Greg	Romero	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	Lai	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Nestor	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Billingsley	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Bryant	Laurel	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Davies	San Carlos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Zaebst	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beronica	Russell	Allen	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Geyer	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Letcher	San Francisco	California	We need a diverse and varied media! Not one company. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Canlaslaflam	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Pugh	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Armendarez	Santa Ana	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Howarth	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Lambert	Waxhaw	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Wilber	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Donahue	San Franciso	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Palmer	Allen Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mira	Albert-Bullis	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cherie	Gaston	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawn	Nasralla	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Bradshaw	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DeAnna	Hanson	Cotati	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don E.	Dumond	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Kunkel	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Kohn	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arthur	Ungar	Lafayette	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luc	Le Noir	Morristown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	LaPointe	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Okerson	Bensalem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Leonard	Paducah	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Stark	Sausalito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rana	A	Fremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Katin-Borland	Croton-On-Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Shindelman	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Le Boff	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Weisl	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Eidenshink	Broomfield	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Tate	Hixson	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	McHardy	Louisville	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barsby	Gemma	Elk	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Emery	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christina	Fox	Farmington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Carey	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	STURDEVANT	VIRGINIA BEACH	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Hannah	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Bally	Mundelein	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Middaugh	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ben	Solnit	Morris	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Cameron	Tinton Falls	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Graves	Schenectady	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Mohning	Brentwood	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Hicks	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Burke	Ketchum	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Duncan	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Yeomans	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Parsons	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Lapple	McKinleyville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Worth	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dollie	Moir	Safford	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Crystal	Pickard	Mount Kisco	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Shapiro	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Shapiro	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Freeman	Henrico	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. They stifle the ability of reporters who work for them to be able to report the news fairly and accurately. They refuse to allow them to criticize the President. Imagine if the President were a Democrat and they wouldn't allow criticism of him!
Dianne	Snyder	Alexandria	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Anderson	Dana Point	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jackie	Wetzel	Bothell	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Rusk	Van Wert	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Swift	Durham	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Shapiro	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Whitney(Crompton)	Green Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Dennis	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Muchael	Devereaux	Greenville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Yacobucci	Bowling Green	Ohio
JoAnna	Barrell	Longmont	Colorado

I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger because it would create a mas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Kameya	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
kelly	Francis	Oyster Bay	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Wiegand	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kim	Shaw	The Woodlands	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I strongly oppose a Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate that contradicts FCC policies. Further, large media conglomerates stifle the free press and decrease the diverse views that we value in our democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts have consistently exhibited political bias, which undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in the Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC case. I strenuously urge the FCC to uphold our democratic values and block this merger.

Margaret	Burdge	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vivian	Watkins	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Weber	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scot	Cowan	Slc	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Mahoney	Chiefland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Keiser	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Rochon	Excelsior	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Relora	Joyce	Montrose	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Cody	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Knickle	Fort Myers Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Knudsen	Salt Lake Cty	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Cynthia	Blum	Calimesa	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Freedom of the press, not monopoly of the press. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dina	Willner	Mahwah	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Olin	Winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Zabelski	Chico	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts(the "fake news that Lord Littlehands is really talking about) portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lianna	Shaw	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Lowe	Morro Bay	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Kornfeld	Portola Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Talmadge	Cooper	Atherton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deon	Frank	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennie	Sandler	Beavercreek	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Korn	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Whitfield	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Cholst	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Atwood	Lincoln	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggy	Moran	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Al	Silver	Redondo Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Smith	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimball	Milton	Norman	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Neustadtl	Lyons	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Kapp	Norwalk	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ANNE	MARTIN	hampton	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Moffat	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	Telsrow	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgette	Michko	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Feda	Elgin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Sasscer	Elkridge	Maryland

The Sinclair-Tribune merger is wrong for America and for the future of a free press and journalist. Sinclair already operates unimpeded in forcing local stations to broadcast administration propaganda that is false. This creates broadcasting company of extraordinary size and power. It's creation would also violate the FCC's policies. Sinclair already stifles free speech and diversity; given it's history, there's no cause whatsoever to believe that will change in a way that's beneficial for healthy democracy.

Michael	Yarnell	Phoenix	Arizona

The FCC must block this merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Owen	Waterford	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alison	Schmidt	Nevada City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Knoll	Orinda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Dresner	Pittsburg	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Hoffman	Macungie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mari	McShane	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erica	Davis	Knoxville	Tennessee	The truth is being threatened more and more every single day!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Michael	Burr	McMinnville	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Boman	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Rohde	Youngstown	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bahman	Chavoshan	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Sharp	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Worth	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Anthony	Sevierville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Mogavero	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies.

Sinclair requires statements read by their news staff on-air and portrays consistent political bias. This could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Meyer	Cannon Falls	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Laflin	Bowling Green	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Creighton	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Dichov	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Parker	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerald	Vinikoff	Mechanicville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roseann	Cratty	Exeter	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Burwasser	Oberlin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Fano	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurence	Cohn	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kerry	Angle	North Richland Hills	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Preston	Williams	TOPEKA	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Pon	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toni	Lobsenz	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Saucer	Rancho Mirage	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Will	Beatty	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anton	Sober	Reisterstown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alysia	Krapfel	Cottonwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Siekevitz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katheryn	Jeffery	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Siler	Homer	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chadwin	Walker	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Susan	Goering	Baltimore	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We need local news syndicates that run a diversity of programs, including ESPECIALLY a diversity of local news and opinions. Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kate	suhr	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Hill	South Sutton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Conger	Tooele	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Misty	Antonacci	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Harding	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elayne	Futernick	Hartford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Raycraft	Lockwood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Johnston	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Nicol	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Adam	Willett	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Watson	Arcata	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Branden	Koch	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellyn	Drathring Jung	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mieke	Pagan	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Constance	Garcia	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	DeCubellis	Lutz	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Byrne	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janet	Michea	Fernandina Beach	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A free press is essential to the preservation of our democracy. If a huge conglomerate takes control over what news we are allowed to hear, that puts our freedom in extreme jeopardy. Protect our right to hear news from many sources, not one controlling conglomerate. Stop this merger of Sinclair and Tribune. It is not in the best interest of the values of the American way of life. VOTE NO, PLEASE!

Lyle	Otte	Decorah	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Miller	Collegeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Klein	Milwaukie	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Busby	McCall	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Cohen	La Quinta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Bomkamp	Seattle	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Lessnau	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Messenger	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aline	Sansome	Lincoln City	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Manini	Gupta	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Nova	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberley	Fischer	Madera	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	McGeorge	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Scheinman	Mission Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

helene	stoller	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevyn	Armstrong-Wright	Auburn	Alabama

I do not support this merger. This supports big business and it gives

Diane	Pierce	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Lifton	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Hilgenberg	SANTA ROSA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Clark	Sausalito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paulette	White	Ecorse	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Ripley	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Beal	Skaneateles	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Siobhan	Phillips	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gene	Goff	Ridgway	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Younker	nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Solis	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Funaro	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Smith	El Rito	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Lindberg	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ursula	Lenihan	Foster City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anahi	Dodge	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Wood	Auburn	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Pollock	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Tuke	Slc	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Victoria	Hamlin	Oakland	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is a bad idea. Our democracy depends on free speech, but that is the right wing agenda- to stop freedom of expression and the exchange of ideas. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Bartlett	Ocenside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Granger	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica F	Taylor	Fort Bragg	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Omidi	White Plains	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Shinder	Levittown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Kennedy	Silver City	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Carpenter	Green Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hline	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Scollon	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally	Warrick	Costa Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Bains	The Villages	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shareef	Noor	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Bennett	Tubac	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Doroski	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannoon	Kelley	Ponte Vedra Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Merkel	Fairbanks	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monique	Haywood	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tess	Olsson	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liana	Olson	Carmel Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Friederichsen	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Brandes	Merrick	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Lang	Saint Cloud	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Cavalier	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leticia	Alvarez	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria-Celeste	Delgado-Librero	Amherst	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
francesca	toledo	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Schwartz	Colorado Spgs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Mullin	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Baer	Hanover	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
carol	decarr	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Davison	Moscow	Idaho
Sandra	Eynon	Richmond	Michigan	The Washington Post's "logo" statement, "Democracy Dies in Darkn Hey Sinclair-Tribune merger is detrimental to the American democracy. The FCC must abide by its own rules and not approve this merger. One sided news is a danger to all of us. A Republican controlled administration is not standing up to a far right agenda that is destroying us. I agree with George Will and his comment about an invertebrate Republican party. Show some spine! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Gary	Burr	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kim	Gohman	Minnetonka	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A diverse media is essential to keeping the public informed. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Musich	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Donnelly	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Naeser	Jamestown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Griffiths	Melbourne	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Mendez	Coral Gables	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rached	belhadj	Frisco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucille	Costello	Clinton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Samford	Ruckersville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacey	Carlisle	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Mairs	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Toscano	Corona	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynelle	Hughes	LAS VEGAS	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Whang	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arthur	Nicholson	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Avants King	Thornton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Noble	Norman	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Force	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Jaffe	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Rose	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harry	Grace	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Knight	Newport News	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Monaco	Micanopy	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rached	belhadj	Frisco	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maurice	Monahan	Brookings	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

alessandra	assaf	west hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Shapiro	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Burr	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Venus	Maher	Rohnert Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deana	Allert	Corona	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Lee	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Freiling	Payson	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Hanny	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Lee	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Lyons	West Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Tewlow	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Maass	Longboat Key	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jean	dwestler	Silver Spring	Maryland	SINCLAIR ALREADY IS REQUIRING THEIR TV STATIONS TO BROADCAST "CANNED" NEWS PREPARED WITH A PRO-TRUMP, REPUBLICAN SLANT. NEWS IS SUPPOSED TO BE OBJECTIVE, NOT SUBJECTIVE. SINCLAIR SHOULD BE BROKEN UP, NOT MERGED WITH TRIBUNE TO BECOME EVEN BIGGER. IN A DEMOCRACY, NO ONE PERSON SHOULD BE DICTATING NEWS--SHOULD BE UNBIASED COVERAGE. WHAT'S WRONG WITH FCC THAT YOU DON'T SEE THIS? DOES FCC WANT GOVERNMENT-RUN NEWS COVERAGE?
Jenny	Laden	PHILADELPHIA	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Ramsaur	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rowland	Laedlein	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Lewis	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Magree	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sascha	Alper	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Monique	Sorgen	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Zrobek	Lakeville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	Johnson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Marrinson	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Lambert	Sandy	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ray	Biddle	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Bambach	Suwanee	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G. Alan	Libove	Dresher	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rached	belhadj	Frisco	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Wells	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregg Ward	Matson	Elk Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MICHAEL	PADULA	West Gardiner	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Mason	Tucker	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Bixby	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maya	Grey	Martinez	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Becht	Cumming	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Miller	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Robinson	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Rubin-Horton	Ocala	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history. Please block this merger!

Stephanie	Thompson	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Barbara	Hofrenning	Brooklyn	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It will block our rights!! Barbara

Paul	Kimmer	Clarkfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Avalos	Norwich	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Richman	Boynton beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Meyers	Hatfield	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Edington	Seattle	Washington	Freedom of media outlets, news, and speech is the foundation of our country. It is how new ideas flourish and diverse opinions are shared, all of which strengthen and empower our citizens to be informed and make accurate decisions. Diversity and freedom in speech is absolutely essential to our nation and is threatened by this merger. Please don't let it go through, chipping away at the strength of our democracy.
Elizabeth	Hutcheson	Dublin	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The freedom of speech and of press are principles our country was founded upon that reflect our core values. The FCC must understand the threat that large media mergers can cause to upholding these values, and the Sinclair-Tribune merger is no exception.
				Sinclair has a proven track record of consistently injecting political ideology into what was intended to be unbiased local news. Regardless of the ideology Sinclair possesses, its use of power to force local news stations to endorse partisan views is unacceptable and dangerous to our democracy.

Oliver	Osborn	Corte Madera	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Barron Holmes	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Mehr	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JOAN	BRAUN	Aventura	Florida

STOP SINCLAIR'S STRANGLEHOLD ON MEDIA.

Katy	Cesarotti	Bowling Green	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Gonzalez	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ariel	Horton	Joplin	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tania	Chavez	Santa Fe	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

clare	mclellan	los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rudite	Schmidt	Coopersville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Morrow	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leanne	Mariano	Paradise Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Davis	Wake Forest	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Art	Glick	Renick	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vivian	Marek	Leonardtown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Coyne	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Blasche	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Lynn	Auburn	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Sytzko	Fair Lawn	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rached	belhadj	Frisco	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cath	Stimac	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair is trying to own the message - it is clear they are a propaganda machine. You can stop this - please stop this.
Kristina	Fisher	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by I am writing to express my opposition to the Sinclair-Tribune merger. Sinclair's broadcasts demonstrate persistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I urge you not

Tony	Prato	Stockton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
stephen	maddox	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Lee	Joplin	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Christopher	Hamby	Walkersville	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sinclair should be ashamed of themselves. They should not be allowed to spew their own propaganda on America's local television stations. They should not own any of the Tribune (WGN, KTLA, WPIX, etc.) stations.
				A Sinclair-Tribune group would create a mega-TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies.
				It would harm our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Doris	Donovan	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Williams	BROOKLYN	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Dingman	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Alter	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Justus	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wilson	Hogan	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Russell	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bob	Tures	Flagstaff	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kris	Montgomery	Rohnert Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samara	Chasen	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Stanley	Muscatine	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Lopes	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Wylie	Arvada	Colorado	I'm concerned about the future of free speech and the independent media in our country. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Grozde	Birmingham	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This is unacceptable. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mimi	Alvarez	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evan	Goldstein	Rye Brook	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Halby	valdosta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Schroeder	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristy	Nelson	Akron	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Katz	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Schachter	Summit	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Abend	Bermuda Dunes	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Koehler	Oceanside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Safiya	Jeremiah	Jamaica	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Rosenthal	Williamsville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louvenia	Morrison	Lexington	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Correll	Garberville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Francesca	Dodson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rex	Hanson	Caldwell	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gay	Walker	Modesto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Bergey	New Wilmington	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kray	Van Kirk	Arcata	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

p. e.	suter	Flushing	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R. Dugald	Stewart, Ph.D.	Tiger	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janine	Tominaga	Wildomar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Weaver	Worthington	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Broder	Sausalito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Estrin-gelblum	Boulder Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lydia	McCloskey	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Knight	Rio Rancho	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Bailey	McKinney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Caldwell	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wade	St. Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger IS A DANGER TO THE FIRST AMENDMENT and would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Larkin	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Bell	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Jackson	Lake Forest	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymond	Smith	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Lieberman	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Withrington	S Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Marsh	Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Stevens	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
GJ	Betz	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Hansen	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Brown	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Lubker	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Dwyer	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Fields	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Reisland	Reston	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Hawkins	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Steiger	Olmsted Falls	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	McInnis	Bellflower	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Lane	Flushing	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Stoyer	Fullerton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Therese	Turkington	Anchorage	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nageswari	Shanmugalingam	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Henderson	Larkspur	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	McDonald	Farmington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Boeddeker	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Sigmon	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jacqueline	hackel	Piedmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Wright	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Mehr	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Stern	Hartland	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Crisp	Vienna	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phillip	Deem	Conneaut	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Lawrence	Henderson	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Derek	Gendvil	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ed	Donato	North Wales	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Taitel	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	Winter	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malcolm & Doris	Hart	North Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Randolph	Union Pier	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Bamber	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elissa	Rubin	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Dobrovolny	North Richland Hills	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gregory	Seta	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am writing to express my extreme concern about the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. Such a merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would diminish diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This merger would contradict the FCC's own policies on National TV ownership.
				Due to Sinclair's broadcasts portraying unwavering political bias, this merger would undoubtedly undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. But this isn't a question simply of partisanship. Sinclair’s attempt to acquire Tribune Media would virtually guarantee limits on the views that local news stations

Tom	Sahlin	Johnson City	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jon	Badua	Buena Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eliina	Karyndinha	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raja	Moreno	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	McMullen	Colonial Beach	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	B	Hamilton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Sangston	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Cassidy	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve and Marie	France	Education	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Marocco	Peru	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Riley	Tribble	Benton	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennie	Thompson	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sameera	Merchant	Canoga Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Woodbridge	Meadow Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Kuzmyak	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Fawcett	Newberg	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geralyn	Johnson	Bullard	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please protect our democratic republic by denying this merger.
Dan	Forestiere	Whitehouse Station	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deidra	Butler	Belpre	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Case	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Tovar	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Shofnos	Potomac	Maryland

Please block the Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Rees	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Neavitt	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Reilly	Espanola	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Atwood	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Bible	Bridgewater	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Armon	Rabiyan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sameera	Merchant	Canoga Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Welch	Standish	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Zych	Savoy	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Millhollen	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Smith	Marina	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed and Louise	Preston-Hensley	Grass Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Clemente	Cumberland	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Saltzman	Somers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krissy	Jones	La Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Christenson	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Beebe	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and Orwellian power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would still further stifle our free speech and diversity of views in the press would be virtually eliminated for most of the citizenry of the land-end stage cancer for a democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this is NOT viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Fulk	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Carlson	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Oakes	Fishers	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sidney	Berkowitz	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Lewis	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Chu	Jericho	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendell	Rushton	Orange Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

donna	miller	Mission Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Tucker	Yorktown Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S	Jacobson	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rajal	Cohen	Moscow	Idaho	Please do not approve the Sinclair-Tribune merger. If approved, this merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, contradicting the FCC's own policies and stifling the free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent political bias; this merger will undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amber	S	Pomona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Avenarius	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Pomidor	Orinda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Worst	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Fisher	Little River	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Schwenkmeyer	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erica	Fuson	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Federico	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracie	Lin	Catonsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Hammond	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Wingfield	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Robinson	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Vanam	Cornwall Bridge	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joy	Rex	Raton	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Plunkett	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Brewster	Paw Paw	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abdul-Raheem	Muhammad	Carbondale	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	White	Ann Arbor	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not approve the Sinclair merger with The Tribune Co. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helaine	Wesley	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Holly	Krohn	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Mervis	Mission Viejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sierra	Christensen	Paso Robles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Pingel	Antioch	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Baiba	Jensen	Brighton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Miles	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rainbow	Di Benedetto	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Philips	Norwich	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Wasielewski	Oriskany	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Golin	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	Gleason	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Herring	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	L	Hamilton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Jenett	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald L	Bumgardner	New Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Katzen	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Jaroch	Los Altos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mich	Sear	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynne	Hovey	Remsen	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

charles	whitfield	Tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sadja	Greenwood	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Spriggel	Battle Creek	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sterling	Barlow	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Harris	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	McKay	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MaryCate	Farwell	Brookline	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Rae-Reeves	Topsham	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Burr	McMinnville	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Celli	Portsmouth	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Bradley	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Swanson	North Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Motry	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Just	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patti	Hodgetts	Cape May	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Partridge	Simi Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Cerise	Ojai	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	Halfnight	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Rosenthall	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Camarillo	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Marks	Coral Gables	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harry	Brass	Berkely	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Bell	Fletcher	North Carolina	There are very good reasons for the existing limits on the number of local TV stations a corporation can own. Any single corporation owning a vast number of stations throughout the country would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Meggers	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. And if allowed to go through, a Sinclair/ Tribune merger would set a

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Parada	Alviso	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyne	Hamel	Oceano	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Doyka	Redway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Moore	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charl	Norloff	Broomfield	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Rabinovitch	Medford	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanine	Smith	SAN JOSE	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Edelman	Altadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tasha	Drake	Jasper	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lester	Latham	Albuquerque	New Mexico

I know you guys are already bought and paid for so i'll Make it quick:

Monopolies were broken up in the late 1800s because of how much damage they caused the country and I hope I live to see all of you fall with us. What you're doing is illegal and corrupt and every single person in the FCC should be fired

Ellen	Homsey	Hockessin	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ira	Marcus	Holladay	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Portsche	Union City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Staehr	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	Miller	Brecksville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Halpern	Cambridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Testaverde	Franklin Lakes	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jill	Craig	Henderson	Nevada	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Stop the merger! We need to preserve free speech! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Briggs	Escondido	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marshall	Anderson	Corpus Christi	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin Kostich	Guerrero	Rancho Palos Verdes	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Wynn	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Robinson	Angelus Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sanjiv	Bhattacharya	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

christopher	lujan	Midland	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Iovenko	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Gerstley	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kerry	Sheehan	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederica	Huxley	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Ricker	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Smith	Great Falls	Montana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Allen	Fishers	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendell	Bainter	Banning	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Neill	New Britain	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	DICKEY	LAS VEGAS	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shannon	Poe	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alicia	Jackowiak	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Rayton	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Hearon	Santa Barbara	California

I believe you understand that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It goes against the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrice	Fisher	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Bomer	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Collins	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Sucato	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Danny	Buerkett	Pleasant Plains	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chelsea	Sparkman	Collierville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martin	Feinstein	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Shamburg	Sparta	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Prescott	Modesto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Koopman	Cockeysville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Abigail	Sawyer	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret Marie	Mosher	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Ellis	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Behn	Columbia	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	De Santiago	Murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Lubaway	San Francisco	California

AT&T lied to the public and to the court. They said they would lower proces and less than a month later they raised prices. https://arstechnica.com/information-technology/2018/07/att-promised-lower-prices-after-time-warner-merger-its-raising-them-instead/

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Wilson	Ronald	Scappoose	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kanapathipillai	Sanjeevan	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carey	Armstrong-Ellis	Cape Neddick	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Bacsik	Garland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Harrow	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Logan	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DeVaughn	Slone	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Savage	Catawba	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Seil	Omaha	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah H	Chilton	Brasstown	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rita	shell	Hummelstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

claudia	devinney	Perry	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Larson	Calpella	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tullan	Velte	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Capra-Petercuskie	Centerville	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albert	Harris	Virginia Beach	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Manning	Lynchburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Lewis	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Waller	kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva	Douglas	Lafayette	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Skelly	COCONUT CREEK	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Hersh	El Cerrito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Owen	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Villarruel	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dino	DeConcini	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerri	Lacher	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Mirabile	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Hemker	Tinley Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Munts	Kamas	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candace	Morgan	Portland	Palau

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Seitz	Charleston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ELLEN	AKNIN	DENVER	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	White	COOL	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Coutts	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Ogbonna	Easton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maurice	Monette	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeleine	Graitson	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Tam	Fairfax	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Oliver	Yourke	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Cunningham	Gallatin	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

linda	dodds	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Fischman	Mission Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Risa	Bell	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roana	Thornock	Glendale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mary	schwoebel	Weston	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mia	DAvanza	Jackson Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Curren	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noah	Cohen-Cline	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
alaeddin	hakam	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hans	Larsen	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alegria	Beveridge	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Borelli	Santa Rosa Va	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wesley	Patterson	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Mamet	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rolf	Figdore	Lake Hopatcong	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Neary	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger to protect our democracy.

Rosina	Wittmeyer	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

andrea	gaines	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gayla	Cremin	Collinsville	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Jackson	Bluff	Utah

The first time I ran across a Sinclair broadcast in Northeast Georgia, I tried to find another station to get away from the relentless "preaching." Down the road, I came across the actual station building and decided I would pay a visit. But when I pulled up, the place was padlocked. The broadcast was coming from somewhere else, not the local station it had bought.

Ever since, I have been wary of Sinclair. The idea that it might merge with Tribune Media concerns me.Living in rural America is very different from the metropolitan media environment to which I was accustomed. There are not a lot of choices; people are vulnerable to whatever comes their way. A merger will only make this problem worse and of concern to our democracy. Please reject

Brenda	Goates	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dmitry	Volodin	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marci	Dillon	San Leandro	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A well-informed public is vital to a thriving democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Petryk	Lansing	Michigan	Stop this monopoly creating merger that will be a propaganda arm of American fascists that would make Goebbels giggle in his grave.A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David W	Caldwell	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlene	Gagon	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Hughes	Pensacola	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Geefay	Cupertino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evan	Wright	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Sherwood	Long Beach	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Korbel	Lakeville	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Charlton	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Varun	Saravanan	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Gray	Fort Myers	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is closer to controlled information that exists in certain closed countries.
Frank	Kieviet	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Perkins	Gardner	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Rosenthal	Williamsville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Herron	Livermore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Summers	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Getchell	Belmont	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lillian	Brown	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Putnam	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tiffany	Trunz	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hickman	Snow Hill	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Magee	Waynesboro	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Crawford	Knoxville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Millsaps	Lakeside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyle	Kleckner	Berkley	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Melissa	Kadri	Madison Heights	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Not only is a Sinclair-Tribune merger unfair to local news stations, it's also extremely dangerous to our democracy. I want my local news stations to be honest about me to what is happening locally and nationally, not to say whatever the CEO of Sinclair wants them to say. Many people who work for Sinclair say that the job is horrible, that Sinclair treats them extremely unfairly. How can we do that to our local news stations? This would even contradict the FCC's own policies! Come on now. Our democracy is dying, and this would be like a death wish come true. We need new stations to be independent and not owned by a monopoly. We need diverse views, not just one.

Charlotte	Sadler	Jonesville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Volkan	Earlysville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucille	Roussin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Gamble	Attleboro	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Cook	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Unger	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Cochran	Gainesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Hardy	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Smith	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Mott	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stevie	Feliciano	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Jacobson	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Manning	Forest	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Jones	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Swenning	El Sobrante	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The Press is our only way to get consistent ACCURATE information and He who controls that access has more power than our own Government...
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Auerbach	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gavi	Stevens	Largo	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sherman	Lewis	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Ressler	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bettie	Nielsen	Richmond	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisbeth	Caccese	Santa Barbara	California

I find it curious that the FCC is going to OK another media merger that makes FOX News seem tame by comparison. Having experienced the "fair and balanced" news approach on Fox, watching excerpts from Sinclair's "news" format was earth shattering to put it mildly. George Orwell's double speak come to life!

I would have thought that local news should be LOCAL & not tethered to ANY ideology. But that's not the world I live in anymore and the FCC, should it OK Sinclair's stranglehold on local news stations, will be remembered as the boot-licking lackeys of a corporately controlled media.

Wendi	Paschal	Kanab	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Diernbach	Mineral Ridge	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgia	Lyman	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Parker	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Omeara	New Smyrna Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Moore	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Linda	Tratechaud	Santa Fe	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Local News Company's should be owned by Locals who care about and know their own communities. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Carolyn	Flook	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Whiting	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	McCarthy	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Renee	Lansley	Pennington	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. In the interests of protecting free speech and fostering a diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy, this merger must be blocked. The American people depend on the FCC to protect the common good, not pander to the interests of businesses and corporate conglomeration.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Rhoda	Sharpee	Watersmeet	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Sailer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Tussing	Newport Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Jeffery	Temecula	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	John	Jefferson	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Quinn	Camas Valley	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Simpson	Pittsfield	Vermont
J	Reich	Boulder	Colorado	I have been in broadcasting for 45+ years. Since the mid-90's, I have A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hartford	Hood River	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelsey	O'Hollaren	Seattle	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Gill	Carson	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Busby	Spring	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Sherman	San Luis Obispo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Connie	Calabrese	Port Orchard	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Suhanovsky	Saint Petersburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tyi	Jones	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elak	Swindell	Waynesboro	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen Ann	Watson-Gegeo	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Brooke	Cambria	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Gliva	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelly	Hudson	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Goldman	Freeville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Temple	San Leandro	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Cloud	East Greenwich	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Lustig	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leila	L	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Williams	Columbia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Griffin	Brecksville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Johnson	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Behr	Salt Lake Cty	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DABNEY	MUELLER	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Holloway	St Joseph	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Paschal	Kanab	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elise	Bartosik-Velez	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Wright	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Salsman	Sanger	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bethe	Dufresne	Old Mystic	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Biolos	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter J.	Benson	Fall Creek	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liane	Arter	Medina	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Shepherd	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Oscar	Martinez	Orange	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jodi	Kearney	Buffalo Grove	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Ames	Front Royal	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Klein	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Fent	Salina	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristiine	Kadela	South River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Rapp	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Stanley	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Unfortunately, I fear that Ajit Pai, who only represents the corporations and not the people’s interests, will ignore us once again.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dvora	Gordon	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Wheelock	Grand Ledge	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Nelson	Anthem	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Gerrity	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	McLauchlin	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Stock	Leesburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karrie	Stouffer	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Omar	Martin	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erika	Navarro	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Edwards	Hampton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Rosen	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marita	Straffin	Cranberry	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kris	Garfield	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mathew	Bittleston	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Olwyn	Conway	Columbus	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. A free and independent press if vital to the maintenance of an informed electorate. American voters should have the opportunity to choose from a variety of news media to ensure a well-rounded exposure to different viewpoints. A monopoly on broadcasting would eliminate this opportunity. Sinclair in particular displays broadcasts that portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red

Nancy	Hiestand	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Marcussen	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Nosek	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	McMahon	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Columbus	Woodstock	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Swart	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kat	Herder	Cedar Rapids	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Karas	LAGUNA WOODS	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Schwartz	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Cynthia	Sherrill	Mimbres	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This company has a history of forcing its affiliates to air partisan views that it dictates and is leaning to a state-controlled medium such as exists in current dictatorships and in fiction of past years picturing big brother controlling our access to the "truth." This is a blatant attempt to stifle our free speech and freedom of the press that are foundations of our democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Lynn	Reer	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joey	Sanders	Rocklin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	McDill	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Lyman	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Margowsky	Orange	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brad	Miller	Anthony	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hirshorn	Groveland	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bert	Menco	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Lang	American Canyon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Cohn	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Horsley	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Kiely	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melinda	Barbour	North Ridgeville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gina	Norton	Forked River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Miller	Placerville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Stafford	Central	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Demetra	Giannis	Lake Barrington	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Estelle	Srivijittakar	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janis	Abraham	Apple Valley	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Quiceno	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Winston	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	Wrench	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Pew	Girard	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Owens	Burke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Hauss	Yonkers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alice	Lovejoy	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Mannion	St. Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hirshorn	Groveland	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Nash	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Reitz	BROOKLYN	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Fehr	Berwyn	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Clopton	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Pais	Southfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Thompson	Thurmont	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Ponton	Thornton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margery F	Rosen	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Gonzales	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louisa	Sloan	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Pehle	Mechanicsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Callahan	Arnold	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Hollinger	Westminster	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	McEvoy	Del Norte	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Key	Dismukes	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashly	Burch	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Linnebur	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alison	Gerson	Woodstock	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vina	Ermagan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Silverman	Pittsboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Gyving	Point Arena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Malin	New Richmond	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margery F	Rosen	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Dunstan	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mads	Christensen	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dayle	Denton	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Christianson	La Porte	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	DeNegre	Martinsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

alice	smith	Palo Alto	California	Why concern is that the media controls the access to news, and has a disproportional impact on the American citizen. Please don't allow this huge merger to take place.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Michael	Stang	Baltimore	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Gorgan	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Case	Flushing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Schneider	Greenwood	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Blum	Los Angeles	California

The Sinclair Tribune Merger goes against the decision of Red Lion Br

Callie	Riley	Citrus Heights	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Riverton	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nola	nordmarken	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Murphy	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

carol	looper	Portland	Oregon	Current Sinclair TV stations have given proof that Sinclair misuses its ownership of these stations to use them as forced propaganda broadcasters! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jeremy	Davis	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charle	Luckett	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Wilson	Costa Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Iris	Maher	Palm Coast	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Callie	Riley	Citrus Heights	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Laurence	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Magin	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathlyn	Liscomb	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanetta	Miller	Inverness	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Holford	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Newberry	Solon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Eidson	duluth	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Kearney	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Vossen	Forestville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Courtney Alyssa	Nandagiri	Peekskill	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Briggs	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	Shead	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Ladas	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Benson	Bloomfield Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Raney	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ricky	Hopewell	Baltimore, Maryland	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Dias	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Wiener	Shreveport	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Les	McIntyre	Lake Forest	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cari	Newman	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vic	DeAngelo	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Lazarus	Urbana	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Magus	Smith	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Fredrick	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Cinque	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. No to Sinclair ...
William	Geoghegan	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Brandy	Schumacher	Citrus Heights	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Druwing	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Horejsi	Litchfield	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Farrell	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Foxhoven	Millbrae	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harley	Putnam	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Denzer	Bronxville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth Jane	Freeman	Wantagh	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Vargason	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Armando	Gonzalez	Boerne	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Essman	Healdsburg	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Kelchner	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marsha	Hymanson	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Bamber	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beatrice	Smits	Troy	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Swyden	Rio Rancho	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Deranger	Reisterstown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin and Carol	Heher	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antoinette	Olesen	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Callahan	Fieldsboro	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martin	Weinberg	Whitestone	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
christine	parus	Hyattsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Jordan	La Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	George	Columbia	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Cabarga	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Tonini	Mineola	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Riley	Citrus Heights	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Robbins	Boise	Idaho	Absolutely opposed to this merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitzy	Gordon	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jorge	Guzman	El Paso	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Hopper	Moscow	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
b	franklin	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Benhur	Blue Jay	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Rosenblatt	Pikesville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Douma	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Johnson	Blanco	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Sawicz	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	de Rham	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Pierson	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katharine	Deiss	Spencerport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Flannery	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Borlase	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harvey	Reading	Shoshoni	Wyoming

There's nothing free about our propagandist media. It's all owned by the wealthy and run for the sole purpose of brainwashing us.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would only worsen that situation and create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for democracy that has never existed in this country, one that, in fact, is prohibited by the pathetic constitution, written by rich slave owners, for their own benefit.

Sean	Casey	Gilbert	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Skyler	Westlake	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Tomlins	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am adamantly against this merger!

melanie	elberg	brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo Ann	Howse	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Bailey	Wheatland	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Haley	Bash	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norman	Garber	Ojai	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Swain	Front Royal	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Vanhorn	Duncannon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Max	Rissman	Summit	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	harradine	Pacifica	California	We need a marketplace of ideas. That is what the 1st Amendment protects. We can not preserve our democracy if we have only a few major news outlet pushing their personal poltical agenda onto the public.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Arthur	Kaplan	Gladwyne	Pennsylvania
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Antonellis	Coos Bay	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Wood	Camarillo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshalyn	Twyman	Norfolk	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Willets	Derry	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Westbrock	Monument	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Davis	Wake Forest	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	Sojourner	San Francisco	California
Georgia	Del Favero	San Jose	California

Media consolidation is dangerous and anti-democratic. Reject the m

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Berardi	North Hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Alikhan	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Miller	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
becky	Richardson	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Lederman	New Providence	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyn	Cordell	Clatskanie	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanne	Hodgson	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linnea	Thistle	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Gilmore	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Filippelli	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Martin	Greenwich	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Pereira	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jordan	McMullen	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
paula	rios	hazleton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Fox	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorene	Davis	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Schnake	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Liggett	Mineral Wells	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Andersen	Santa Ana	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Hull	Gallup	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Hartley	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Talcott	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrington	Petras	Verona	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Treon	Waldport	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawna	Atteberry	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Jackson	Tigard	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Acklin	Bandon	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Rice	Costa Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Kamath	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Zimmerman	Weston	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kris	Brandenburger	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Friedman	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Murray	SCOTTSDALE	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	West	Sn Luis Obisp	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Gray	Oceanside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kate	Puls	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Harter	Susquehanna	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Juarez	La Feria	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denny	Allman	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Russell	Buikema	Pinon Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kimberly	stelly	Porter	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Berlant	Auburn	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Runo	Whittier	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danny	Peary	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bartley	Lawson	Hamilton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Carrier	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Owens	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Powers	Mountain View	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Perry	Bard	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathan	Taylor	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

christine	lott	NORWALK	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brandon	Shorter	Glendale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Kelly	Knoxville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Zimmerman	Weston	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexa	Inman	Smackover	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Smyther	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Pressman	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cd	Meier	Las cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claressa	Guyette	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Fischler	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jisho	Warner	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynetta	Richardson	Lincoln City	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Hogan	New Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Wilson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristofer	Sween	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wayne	Gibb	Forestville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colby	Smith	Crestview	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Meder	Norfolk	Virginia

Democracy dies in darkness.

Please help.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

gina	sanchirico	Lake Peekskill	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcel	Belisle	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nanette	Betts	Clio	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sally	Abrams	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merilee	Waters	Voorhees	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Bailey	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Solem	Sparks	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Katherine	Rinne	Berkeley	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The Sinclair-Tribune merger must be stopped if we Americans are to hold our right to receive news that is not tainted by coercion from conglomerate ownership.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Janet	Fitch-Johnson	Thaxton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Garitty	Nevada City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Billie	Barthelemy	Pinewood	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Debra	Harris	Skokie	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Democracy can only thrive when multiple points of view are heard. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chuck	Surprise	Spring Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Spiegel	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Henkel	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phil	Lieberman	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Aronson	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Marsden	East Corinth	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Normington	Folsom	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Painter	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

herb	schulsinger	Valinda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Krantz	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Sleeman	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noah	Youngelson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Brand	Rocklin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Malone	Farmingdale	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Fellman	Felton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Bjork	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Davis	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	Cory	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Eggeman	Cleveland Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Kauffman	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanette	Denton	Whitehall	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Sears	Richardson	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Stephon	Fort Washington	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Werner	Corbett	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Wolfe	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Smith	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Levine	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cristen	Thayer	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Staight	Cottage Grove	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Hannah	L	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger.
				The merger would create a TV conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, contradicting the FCC's own policies. It would stifle the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy and would put forth only the biased and often inaccurate views of Sinclair Broadcasting.
				The value of viewpoint diversity was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Diane	Sattler	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Wingate	El Segundo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Hofmann	Urbana	Illinois	I am strongly opposed to a Sinclair-Tribune merger that would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine the diversity of viewpoints, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	MacAlpine	Middletown	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Peterman	Parker	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemarie	Kalnas	Franklinville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Molder	Newberry	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Janovy	Mankato	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Skinner	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Steinberg	Tinton Falls	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alessandra	Stoffo	Tempe	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Devan	Paddock	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christy	Eylar	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
K. M.	Aubitz	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tim	austin	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Navone	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Poppy	Milliken	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Riggs	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Schmidt	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Taylor	Fitchburg	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Roper	Honesdale	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Caren	Rabinowitz	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. Fox News is already of propaganda machine for this administration. The American people do not need another.The FCC is supposed to prevent monopolies like the Sinclair-Tribune merger. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block

William	Stone	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Salam	Elahmadi	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Diamond	Pacific Palisades	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James T	Finlayson	York	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karina	White	Sierra Madre	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Lessinger	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Pryble	Wheaton	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Juan	Rivera	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Bryce	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Reverend Sandra	Mackie	Gettysburg	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As one who appreciates and relies on a diversity of news sources, I write to oppose the Sinclair - Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Staszak	Aurora	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Jackson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Schmidt	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cassie	e	Harlingen	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Williams	Belfast	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Halman	Grapevine	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Chiaravalle	The Dalles	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Walsh	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malcolm	Smith	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Roujansky	Placitas	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Wilson	Nevada City	California	I oppose the merger of Sinclair Broadcasting with Tribune Media. A diverse and independent media is essential to the health and vitality of our democracy. This deal would result in Sinclair Broadcasting controlling some 70% of the country's media outlets. That scope would enable one single company to control the news for the majority of the country, which will seriously damage the ability of any other viewpoints to come through. Sinclair has a long history of biased reporting, even to the point of requiring all of their newscasters to read verbatim statements on how they provide real news, unlike other organizations. Their behavior does not follow the American tradition of free speech and ignores the long history of American journalists to reserve bias when reporting the news. In the long run, Sinclair's biased, monopolistic approach will impede the ability of American citizens
Dana	Herpe	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Walkenhorst	Los Angeles	California	I write to you to urge you to block the merger of Sinclair Broadcasting and Tribune Media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Deborah	Marro	Newport	Rhode Island	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia and Jonathan	Gordon	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Kuenning	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisa	Lendvay	Pougheepsie	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	Woods	Western Springs	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Devine	Tempe	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Bowden	Bloomington	Indiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Olsen	Arvada	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Figel	Central	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Johnson	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Orcholski	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Nowak	Cottonwood	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Hundtoft	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Lathrop	North Conway	New Hampshire

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Livia	Marques	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Perez	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	Sklar	Cherry Hill	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lester	Petrie	Oak Ridge	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jo	Defyn	Hubert	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Ferrandiz	Garden Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Elgin	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Wallace	Murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thelma	M atlin	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kara	Berg	Gustavus	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Pio	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Judd	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Add to this net-biasing laws that allow isps to restrict what is viewed on the internet, and the unregulated monopolies of isp providers available in much of the country, I don't know how some people would be able to get outside news. Shortwave radio may have a comeback.
Wan	Yang	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Armstrong	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ilene	Malt	San Anselmo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Sweeney	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Terrance	McCann	Glen Carbon	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Burns	Morgan Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Long	Fountain Hills	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Shaw Feit	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Wilensky	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maryellen	Read	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Tregidgo	Holtwood	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Schroeder	Humble	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	O'Malley	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Sussman	Phoenix	Arizona	I urge the FCC to stop the merger between Sinclair Broadcasting and Tribune Media. Such a merger would represent a dangerous concentration of media power in the hands of one corporation. In addition, Sinclair's track record of political bias threatens to stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Margarita	Asiain	NYC	New York	While Donald Trump cries about non-existent fake news, you will be complicit in ensuring that actual fake news becomes the only news of this merger comes to pass. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irene	Navarrette	Manor	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Fontaine	Westport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Petro	Papageorge	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	May	Okeechobee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucy	Kenyon	Cotati	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tess	Rottman	Fairfax	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Bulla	Saint Augustine	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elliott	Franklin	East Stroudsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Stern	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Ritz	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Wood	Salisbury	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dee	Steele	Carson City	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Gallagher	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Price	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malcolm	Perry	Johns Creek	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Gengler	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dmitra	Smith	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loren	Glass	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susane	Fishman	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Traci	Mueller	Orange	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Blatchley	Frankfort	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronda	Reynolds	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reid	Wood	Oberlin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Thomasson	Apache Junction	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcie	Parisi	Pleasant Hill	California

Please take action on this.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Seilback	Dix Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thea	Van Der Ven	Manlius	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christy	Sherman	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Brenner	Moorpark	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Shoaf	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Foulke	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	Rodrigues	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tyler	Groskinsky	Merrick	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Grist	Laguna Woods	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Christenson	San Anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kara	Naber	Deming	New Mexico

Our country is already suffering with an abundance of severely-biased news sources. Allowing a Sinclair-Tribune merger would only compound this problem. It would also create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Bowsher	Sandusky	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicolette	Smith	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lala	Hulse	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tessa	Apschnikat	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yasser	Saleh	Naugatuck	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Mattiuzzo	Whitethorn	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Borzotra	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lois	Levinson	Aventura	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Magaretha	Herman	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Denberg	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Swift	Louisville	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	Anson	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Matalone	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Reynolds	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Rutland	PORTALES	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lauri	macklin	reno	Nevada	Block this!!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Goetz	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Farley	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Warner	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim and Carol	Coufal	Cazenovia	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	McGraw	Saint Charles	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Winnie	Gallagher	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Gaetano	Laguna Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyle	Broschat	astoria	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Britton	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Iris	Anderson	Laguna Niguel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Lieb	River Forest	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Brin	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Combs	Ojai	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shakayla	Thomas	Compton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Parker	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Irons	Garrett Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Altheide	Solana Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Ryack	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Taylor	Brady	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Zeitlin	Tehachapi	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachelle	Woods	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
becky	wilson	irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Gonzalez	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Sun	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurey	Tedeschi	Palm Coast	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Wilson	Placerville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Flores	Lakeland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Rippolon	Putnam Valley	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Taylor	Tamworth	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Stechschulte	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Agee	Saratoga Springs	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rudy	Zeller	Benicia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toni	Myers	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deanna	Davis	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stewart	Gooderman	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Warrick	Costa Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pauline	Katauskas	Glen Burnie	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patti	Donaldson	Richville	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Casey	Mendenhall	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lou	Haines	Collinsville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark and Cynthia	Rosin	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Lockhart	Helen	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mj	Pramik	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evelyn	Anderson	South Plainfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Gerardis	Allen	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Seely	Cotati	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Davis	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Weissglass	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Gordon	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rosemarie	K	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerry	Chapman	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Van	Smith	Silver City	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Mulholland	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Monica	Comas	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ray	West	Astoria	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

cindy	cohen	thornton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luanna	Burris	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Sherrel	Fair Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebeca	Pacas	Monrovia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Niko	Mann	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Delisi	Lenox	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Rogers	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Donoho	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abid	Ali	Sanborn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Menagh	Palm City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Strianese	Telluride	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christa	Calangelo	Wheeling	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Englehart	Montgomery	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Y	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alison	Wade	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Corning	Santa Fe	New Mexico	There is no doubt that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and political power in this country and would CONTRADICT THE FCC'S OWN POLICIES. The merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marylucia	Arace	Oceanside	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering POLITICAL BIAS and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Thank you.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Harris	Merced	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Schaffner	San Luis Obispo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Fisher	Forest Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Lisa	Conley	belmont	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do not allow this merger, and please take the next step by evaluating Sinclair's "Thought Police" tactics. We need unbiased news sources, not persuasion and mindthink tactics on our news programs. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Leslie	Sharp	Lumberton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jack	Kornacki	South Windham	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Smith	Rock Hill	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caleb	Parks	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Elam	Media	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bob	Schildgen	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyce	Callison	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Goller	Brook Park	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Salas	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Petrovic	Merrimack	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Albracht	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Gose	Morristown	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corey	Copp	Chicago	Illinois

This cannot happen. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angie	Mercer	JOLIET	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thad	Van Bueren	Westport	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Clark	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Saunders	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Trapp	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Quashon	Avent	Blounts Creek	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kate	Lenthall	Wawarsing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	Wassemiller	Evergreen	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Constance	Coleman	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wechsler	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Schill	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Hurwitz	Arden	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianne	Schlies	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyle	Turman	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Brogden	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Field	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rod	Garner	Irondale	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corey	Copp	Huntington Beach	California	This cannot happen. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cyndi	Cox	Jacksonville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Aldrich	Levittown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernest	Isaacs	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristy	Kirkland	Farmerville	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Cohoon	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Moland	Clearwater	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Rohde	Appleton	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jodi	daniels	Alabaster	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Aleksy	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Shrock	Hammond	Louisiana
Karl	Sidman	Plantation	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Weiman	LIC	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Feiring	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kelly	crowley	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Nepi	Highlands Ranch	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Crapuchettes	Brunswick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Russo	Elk Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Ferrell	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
janette	berne	Sandy Springs	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Loretta	Wisniewski	Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Clark	Land O Lakes	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Hopping	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwen	Vilches	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Silbert	Santa Barbara	California
Gregory	Smith	Los Angeles	California

Please protect our democracy from fascism. The FCC must block thi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Depyatic	Evansville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Holly	Shipley	Dallas	Texas	Block this merger!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Wilkinson	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wallace	Iimura	Cupertino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julio	Arreaga	Upper Darby	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Smith	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Ryder	North Hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Teske	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Monical	Happy Valley	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Wolf	Wayne	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Beuschlein	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laurie	Silver	Accord	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Omar	Tabikha	Corona	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louise	Lieb	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Gole	Indio	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Stamper	Stone Mountain	Georgia

America needs greater diversity of available information -- not less -

Judith	Rogers	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Azmat	Khan	belmont	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Montgomery	Santa Cruz	California	This merger is clearly a bad idea. Stop it, please.
Maurice	Doucette	Slidell	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Shea	Franklin	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Daniell	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bowker	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Heumann	Loveland	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becky	Howland	NEW YORK	New York	Please no! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sara	Freeland	North Hollywood	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do block this!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Brown	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Bergeron	Andalusia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Lapidus	Aromas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phillip	Baehr	Lakeland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Weaver	Redway	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Brazis	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melecio	Estrella	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Henrietta	Jenrette	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toni	Hanson	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Crabill	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Strickland	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Philip	Quadrini	Sausalito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Warren	Lorain	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Annie	Taft	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. What is currently happening to our democracy is truly frightening. This merger is about stifling free speech and giving one company entirely too much power. What happened to our anti-trust laws? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Mary Lynn	Monge	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Canter	Aliso Viejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Kirby	Lompoc	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Gaeden	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rie	Ma	MANHATTAN	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Harris	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Williams	Holland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonio	Bayona	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvie	Stevenson	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edith	Alston	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

frank	Ramil	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sumner	Peirce	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Brogden	Leander	Texas	I am extremely worried about the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Neeley	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamlea	Nelson	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Lapinski	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S.J.	McCarthy	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edgar	Rust	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aere	Greenway	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marlene F.	Emmett	West Palm Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Zweiback	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Pitt	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Owens	Mt Pleasant	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rolf	Saxon	Vallejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maia	Safani	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ali	Terkel	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

wilma	Decubellis	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Wheeldon	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Keller	Brooktondale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Goering	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rolf	Saxon	Vallejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	Banasek	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Baer	Stockton	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Patricia	Madsen	Denver	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. For heaven's sake, do not allow Sinclair and Tribune to become one. Bad enough we have 200 identical news broadcasts. We do not need a thousand. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hunt	McRoberts	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	VanAntwerp	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Michaels	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Glider	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Stambaugh	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Holland	Arcata	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Wood	Carmel Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jane	Morgan	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Erby	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Clements	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Gressle	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Coyner	Fort Myers	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Meier	West Linn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lowell	Young	Mariposa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Talley	Beaufort	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bryan	Dehoff	Newark	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Zmitrovis	Hardy	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Warren	Kundis	Villa Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Aziz	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Gehring	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Bushman-Copp	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Weidell	Luther	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Brody	Pittsburg	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Hunter	Port Saint Lucie	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Palafoutas	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Mayes	Athens	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naeem	Bari	Chesterfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shelby	Shannon	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Pelzer	Strongsville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Copenagle	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Hidalgo	Henderson	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Anderson	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yol	Swan	Weaverville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Chester	Payne	Warrensburg	Missouri	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Unlike Fox News, which is a cable only broadcast, Sinclair owns a multitude of over the air broadcasters, meaning they already control a large number of American news choices. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Vincent	Stokes	Ypsilanti	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Daly	Green Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Lewis	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Howard	Feldman	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Ross	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Schonebaum	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Larson	South Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Poole	East Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Braico MD	Queensbury	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Devon	Swisher	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Pazmino	Providence	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Gottschalk	Old Lyme	Connecticut

The Sinclair-Tribune merger represents a threat that could stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Sheppard	Forest Knolls	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alycea	Maki	Royal Oak	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Cameron	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
carole	ranco	Westbrook	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Angress	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neal	Mock	Truckee	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Hickey	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Harlander	Benicia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendie	O	St Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Robin	de Bled	Oak Park	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				I am very concerned about the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. The size of the resulting group would concentrate a vast broadcasting power in the hands of a single controlling entity. For the sake of competition, fair and free speech, and diversity of the press, I believe it is important to block this merger.

Nancy Jo	Reed	Hillman	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dylan	Sun	Califon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Klif	Hodgkin	Linden	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lora	Dunlap	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Dow	OMAHA	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Costello	Santa Monica	California	The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Seishas	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Louise	Woo	South Pasadena	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The last thing we need in this era of rampant misinformation is a merger between two problematic television companies. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bill	manser	Woodlake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Costello	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

I.M.	Cox	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angie	Smith	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Goldfinger	Encino	California	Propaganda media is a clear sign of crumbling democracy! Save truthful free speech! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Valerie	Dimond	Dallas	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erica	Berent	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anishka	Lee-Skorepa	san diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Hansen	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
amanda	Gabriel	CHARLESTON	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianna	Cooper Ribner	lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Phillips	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerri	Hurlbutt	Northfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Weber	Westminster	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Bassein	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Schwab	Newport	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Beaudrot	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Hodgins	Ballston Spa	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Dolson	Ben Lomond	California	There are forces in our country right now that stand against democracy. Please don't let the FCC be one of those forces. The history books will not be kind on this matter.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Maribel	Coniglione	Pleasanton	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cedar	Koons	Dixon	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Pucak	Carbondale	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Diamond	Topsham	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Angela	Matteson	Grove City	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Juliette	Cunico	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Masha	Udensiva-Brenner	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fay	Bi	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Floyd	Hale	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Cohen	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Schley	San Fernando	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Nelson	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Marvosh	Hollywood	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gaia	Schubert	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Smith	Cedar Falls	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Preston	Shimer	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	Live in Pennsylvania, which has limited access to radio and television stations already. This merger will significantly reduce the already limited number of options for listeners and viewers to be informed. We need a broad range of news and opinions to enable our democracy to know the truth. In a perfect world, we would benefit from more outlets, not less; more reporters, not less; more versions of news reports, not less. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jay	Cardinal	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Sharpe	Bayside	California	In this small-town, rural area of Northern California, Sinclair is attempting to purchase local stations that have for decades reliably reported our local news. We can't afford to lose this essential community resource. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sharon	Willson	Irvine	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Huey	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Berlyn	Hamden	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aden	Weisel	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karola	Smith	DeKalb	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Larson	Indianapolis	Indiana	STOP TRYING TO STIFLE FREE SPEECH AND THE MEDIA! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vicki	Romm	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenavie	Norton	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Capers	Rumph	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Owen	Gustafson	Rockford	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Dilley	West Grove	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Smith	COLUMBUS	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lily	luchau	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roxann	Carmean Floyd	Payson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ricardo	Hernandez	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kris	Lacy	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	McNeely	Vacaville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Major	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Pitt	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeline	Trait	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Trosten-Bloom	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Harris	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arezo	Tabrizi	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ann	dey	Dayton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Anna	Crotty	San Diego	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The US is best served by a diverse set of media organizations, many of whom should be focused on their local constituents. The loss of media companies like this is a prime reason for the polarization we experience today. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Alex	Proctor	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Kaan	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Brace	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Gwynn	BLOOMINGTON	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Bartl	Coos Bay	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Ruda	Duncanville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackie	Metelak	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michaele	Shapiro	Encinitas	California

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias! Democracy must have unbiased reporting and not serve as an arm of the government.

Please...the FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Burns	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Dowell	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glen	Kendrick	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Merrix	Wilmington	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Jamieson	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Uphoff	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karla	Gallardo	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evelyn	Barrack	Birmingham	Michigan	I am horrified that the FCC is even considering this merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Ruys	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Benz	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

christine	Mirkhani	SAN JOSE	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drew	Lewis	Alhambra	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Orleman	Wassaic	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maricel	Hahn	Chebeague Island	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Garvett	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Dryden	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Snow	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Miller	Brooktondale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Beale	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Darragh	san francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Messing	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mark	Laird	RED LION	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Allowing this merger is allowing the beginning of a fascist state. So

Charles	Sharpe	Bayside	California	In this small-town, rural area of Northern California, Sinclair is attempting to purchase local stations that have for decades reliably reported our local news. We can't afford to lose this essential community resource. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Alexandra	Schoolman	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by Do not allow the Sinclair-Tribune merger to happen. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Schubel	South Haven	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stevan	Chandler	SAn Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Lau	St Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not allow "rotten" news.
Mary	Lawler	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Thomson	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lola	Haag	Ojai	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Sanchez	Ewing	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Jamieson	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Anderson	Montgomery Village	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

K	Howland	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamara	Sharton	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Chew	Manassas	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Eaton	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debbie	Wagstaff	Barstow	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Nielsen	Chapel HIll	North Carolina
Leon	Cheng	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Smith	Elmira	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harriet	Shalat	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Pavich	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Genorie	Church	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Calati	Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Coberly	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	McCoy	Burlingame	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Cope	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Eaton	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Adams	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Sharpe	Bayside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dona	Alexis	Loveland	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Christian	Grand Junction	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Willis	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Cooper	North Berwick	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edgar	Lopez	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edwina	Harvey	Baton Rouge	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Polon	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Rubin	Beaumont	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Wolk	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dayna	Wick-Carlson	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cristy	Holden	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lillie	Rizack	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Bond	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hallie	Bulleit	Jackson Heights	New York

The FCC must protect a free, balanced and diverse landscape on American television. On average, Americans watch about 5 hours of tv a day... it is where most of us stay informed about politics, government, and the world around us. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a dangerous TV broadcasting conglomerate. Such conglomerates are against FCC policies, precisely because they give too much power to one organization and threaten the free speech and diversity of views that keep our democracy healthy.

We are counting on the FCC to block this merger and stand up for all that’s American.

Arezo	Tabrizi	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Brandt	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amber	Harrer	Clarksville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Blackburn	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Biehl	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Spitzner Claussen	Coralville	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Davis	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Rich	Saint Johns	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doneen	Frazier	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Stephan	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rama K	Paruchuri	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lea	Ferguson	Winthrop	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stanley	Gross	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Embree	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Wielins	Honolulu	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Carlson	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Burkhart	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Barton	San Clemente	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Kaidy	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Harold	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeannie	Hosey	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorna	Elmasry	Kensington	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Schapiro	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	C.	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Prefontaine	Cottonwood	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Gobely	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanne Hesse	Dyer	Alachua	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Elberg	Paia	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Reclusado	Bakersfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Ellis	Fairlawn	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Titcomb	Waimanalo	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Miller	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Victor	Madera	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce Dudney	Fleming	Oceanside	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D	Allen	Piedmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dy	Larson	AUSTIN	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanette	Bokhour	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hunter	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fran	Nohling	Geneva IL	Illinois	WGN is a Chicago area unifying treasure. Great harm could happen with a Sinclair-Tribune merger that would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Ball	Scarsdale	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shyama	Orum	New YOrk	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heiko	Mauermann	Hemet	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Kagan	Jersey Shore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kitty	Mrache	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Casamento	Laurel	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Mann	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dirk	Calderwood	Hemet	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Nolan	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Toni Mindling	Schulman	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Robillard	Turner	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Thompson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Barton	Campbell	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Hubbard	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Williams	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Orlando	Melendez	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Hochman	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
diane	Wilson	Tucson	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John S	Pearson	Orland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Bodnar	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jose	Pe?a	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Foxen	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Share	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Heermans	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kurt	Speidel	San Clemente	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Hintze	Tulsa	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

stephanie	moy	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Neal	Attinson	Sonoma	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias an

Jon	Bazinet	Vallejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Rau	Gaithersburg	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maricel	Hahn	Chebeague Island	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Koenigsdorf	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sarah	Thayer Ogden	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naasirah	Gooden	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghan	LeVaughn	Brandon	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J. L.	Carraway	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joslyn	Green	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	O''Sullivan	Flushing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Jefferson	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Stofsky	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Devens	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

john	ordway	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Duarte Clark	El Segundo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yale	Abrams	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Sargent	Colchester	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Jones	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Doshay	Calabasas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Murphy	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Considine	Camarillo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this democratic country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our Constituionally guaranteed right to free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering right-wing political bias and this would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this insidious merger.
Mark	Knobil	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Hoofard	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Davenport	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Will	Sanborn	Merrimack	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	DeLeo	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Johnson	Rockland	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Gunnerson	Roseville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregg	Weatherby	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Dilley	West Grove	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teri	Jernigan	Newport	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Sisk	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bart	Stagner	Desert Hot Springs	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Krisbergh	Jenkintown	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Hill	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deenaz	Coachbuilder	Riverside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lizette	Rivera	Albany	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dane	Wilson	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Halley	Sanchez	Pasadena	California	We need to keep a diverse media where no one entity has ownership or control over the majority. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We need independent media outlets to present many different views.
Janet	Hermer	Huntingtn Bch	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Guimiot	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirlene	Harris	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Horner	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Coleman	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Rupp	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Zeeshan	Khan	South San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Christensen	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margie	Sandheimrich	St. Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neal	Pardee	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victoria	Godwin	Hempstead	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Warren	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Keck	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Beardshear	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Hogan	West Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Hermer	Huntingtn Bch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Uhing	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

neil	parekh	Altadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Morgan	Hallabrin	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Williams	Aurora	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Mooney	greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Kelly	Cooperstown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Geller	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Offermann	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jody	McCoy	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alvin	Brooks	Waldron	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Hunt	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Hermer	Huntingtn Bch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Morrell	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Levine	Niskayuna	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dominic	Marino	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

P. Scott	Johnston	Windsor	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
B	Sloan	Conway	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	Sredl	RENO	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Harden	Tualatin	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Alphin	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Offermann	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Benko	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	VanSant	Smithville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	McFadden	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Emmott	Traverse City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	McCauley	Hurst	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Gordon	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Dimarco	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cate	Cruse	Pierre	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Lacombe	Hopewell Junction	New York

I oppose the Sinclair/Tribune merger because of it's shallow reporting, political bias and lack of commitment to truth in local and national news in all it's diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The FCC is failing to serve the interest of the American people if this degradation of our news is allowed. Please uphold the above standards set by the Supreme Court.

Paul	Erickson	Littleton	Colorado

Don't allow this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evey	Jones	Placitas	New Mexico

This is unacceptable and is against all our democratic values of which a free press is number one!

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

David	Kloos	Avon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Fuller	Sebastopol	California
Angela	Marsoubian	Altadena	California	Please don't let the Sinclair-Tribune merger happen. It's bad enough A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Wanser	Las vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Porter	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Sells	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Sarlatte	oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Serena-Wayman	Dewey	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Capell	Fresno	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Janecek	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Siemens	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liz	Trister	Newington	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Latimer	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Butler	Hedgesville	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terry	Beaver	Mount Vernon	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Spencer	Sapienza	Paramus	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Bullard	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Burns	Bayside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Riman	Clifton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Leslie	Plano	Texas	Please consider my concern that the proposed merger will create another divisive force in our country, one which we cannot afford. It is obvious to me that a primary goal of this is the creation of a pervasive propaganda arm for right-wing persuasion, as evidenced by Sinclair's past actions.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Molly	Rhodes	Commerce	California	Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

WILLIAM	PIRKEY	High Point	North Carolina

STOP THE SINCLAIR-TRIBUNE MERGER!!

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	Betz	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Castner	Milwaukie	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
F	Meek	Steamboat Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Kaden	Riverwoods	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stella	Samiotou	Valencia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caryn	Graves	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ulrich	Buddemeier	Venice	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Iverson	Royal Oak	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Hicks	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Corpuz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Ritter	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Cruz	Merced	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Kaster	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jodi	Elder	Woodmere	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Fathy	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harshita	Gupta	Fremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Praglin	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Schroeder	Stillwater	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Duszak	CHICAGO	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Ford	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Burns	Bayside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jorge	Rodriguez	Watsonville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Staker	Greenwood	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyliss	Dowd	Presto	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
geoff	shaskan	Greenbrae	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Mortensen	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Wiant	Glenolden	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raye	Rush	Apache Junction	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynette	McCortney	Park Ridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irina	Kirnosova	Lake Forest	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	kent	ZIONSVILLE	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georganne	Spruce	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Day	Yankton	South Dakota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Jacques	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Welss	Dublin	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Roland	El Granada	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Devon	Nuckles	Huntington	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Sheldon	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Craig	Whitney	Independence	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernest	Luppi	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Cooper	Arcadia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Stahl	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sam	Feuss	West Paterson	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Grandinetti	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Rose-Fortmueller	Ocoee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Dombeck	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Wolff	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clara	Beard	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rose	Cuddy	Easley	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Iain	Macdonald	Arcata	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Aloni-Boldon	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stan	Makowski	Aurora	Colorado	Stand up for our democracy and do the right thing.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Christina	Nguyen	Hugo	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Wiant	Glenolden	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Loustaunau	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Kritzer	Chesterland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corina	Flores	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neal	Klein	North Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcastkns portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joyce	Cousino	Deming	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hugh	Dougan	Ho Ho Kus	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Wess	Chadron	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Young	San Marcos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Snyder	lake worth	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Wicht	Fridley	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Reader	Burlingame	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Smith	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daryl	James	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Mueller	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
steven	barabas	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regina	islas	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Jackson	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Eckbold	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Quinn	Berwyn	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Szolnoki	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yazmin	Gonzalez	Bellflower	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Watt	Peoria	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Mainardi	Lakewood	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Connell	Sebastian	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris Ann	Daugherty	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Von Bergen	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dustin	Benton	Carmel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Williamson	Ester	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Sullivan	Streamwood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Uphoff, Ed.D	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Diaz	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Ingman	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Burns	Bayside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cameron	Sills	Tustin	California	I, Cameron Sills, post the full comment below agreeing and supporting it 100%. This was left by a real frustrated citizen.
Kathi	Ridgway	Canal Winchester	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Wald	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Mondor	Mckinleyville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Wachob	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Blaylock	Bloomington	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Dexter-Ganek	Cumberland	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy D	Gregor	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power and would contradict the FCC policies. It would stifle the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy.

Because Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias that could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC it is important that the FCC block this merger.

Regina	islas	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vivian	Nicely	ANGOLA	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sadie	Benning	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	O'Shea	Menifee	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nancy	Markstein	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Carson	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Beers	Avon	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
shelley	friedman	san francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Davis	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Larman	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hurd	Hess	Fairfield	Iowa	Remember the AT&T monopoly and how the FCC broke it and why!
P. L.	Mayerson	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriel	Graubner	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Heffernan	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	McCurdy	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Loomis	Haiku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Booth	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Foster	Markesan	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

arnold	roman	nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Reiger	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Powers	Lebanon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DONA	WARD	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Clark	Greene	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Mitchell	Cape Elizabeth	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paulette	Lambert	Beavercreek	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We don't need another Trump broadcasting network- he already has FOX. PLEASE protect our right - under the Constitution - for a free press. Thank you!
Robert	Geiselhart	Verona	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly P	McWilliams	Macon	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	Johnson	Winter Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Haugsjaa	East Northport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Gardner	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Uphoff	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheldon	Eng	Romeoville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecilia	Plante	Olney	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Steffen	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Hoffman	Pearisburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tucker	Kendrick	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Liss	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Rigberg	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Hellerqvist	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Becky	Croll	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Sublett	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynda	Wade	Brentwood	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	Schacht	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sean	Dugan	Denville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yesica	Arredondo	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Muriel	Stitt	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Bungert	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Blume	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Garuda	Love	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Stephenson	Pompano Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucy	Hansen	Tipton	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Belletti	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Nelson	Yucca Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jay	Allen	Glendale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	McConnell	Concord	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
erin	dooley	rockledge	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Klein	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Bannerman	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Bernhard	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
CYNTHIA	HUDSON	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cori	Bishop	Egg Harbor City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	Whitley	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruben	Rosario	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Fleming	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Rush	Wasilla	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	Voines	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Grimes	Raleigh	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Winograd	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Anderson	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maxine	O’Reilly	Ogdensburg	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Salguero	West Monroe	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Bernier	Newport	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hilary	Austin	CHICAGO	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Weilong	Li	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This is seen by the fact that Sinclair already takes away journalistic freedom from their individual stations by airing predetermined pieces that have a partisan slant. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan K.	Carpenter	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ada	winsten	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sasha	Meshkov	Palm Desert	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Rose	Casper	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curtiss	Hammock	Flagler Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Grow	Chula Vista	California	I am sick and tired of all these criminals being moved into high
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Stamos	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melanie	Young	Waterford	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Hough	La Habra	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
judith	root	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Augusta	Lucas-Andreae	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
N	Dornenburg	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Baisden	Johnson City	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Cox	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Moritz	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Weithoner	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	DiCara	El Paso	Texas	I am greatly concerned that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Surely it would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Deanna	Mousaw	Walnut Creek	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. It is absolutely necessary that the FCC stands on the right side of history and blocks this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Mueller	Scottsdale	Arizona	I don't want the same scripted political propaganda on all channels or in all print. If Bell telephone wasn't allowed to have a monopoly then Sinclair-Tribune shouldn't be allowed either. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Timothy	Alstrum	East Hartford	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rueenfang	Wang	El Dorado Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	cavender	Albany	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Lifton	Encinitas	California	I am vehemently opposed to the Sinclair-Tribune merger. This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Kindall	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Kermiet	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edwin	Seburn	Redlands	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Sarna	North Little Rock	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Sperry	Terre Haute	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo-Anne	Harris	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lavanya	Chimata	Woodridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Cooperberg	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bethel	Oestman	Elgin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaime	Schwarz	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Dotzler	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Glowa	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
DOLLY	WILSON	SAN DIEGO	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Abts	Ely	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dylan	Spaulding	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Marshall	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Engle	Brookline	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Skinner	Guerneville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Pacheco	Wilton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

E	Anderson	Pittsboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Centers	Hauser	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Herzog	Sun Lakes	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eliza	Erhardt-Eisen	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	McClintock	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Saroyan	Humphrey	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Nolfi	Hinesburg	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bj	Wagner	Cape May	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jared	Graham	Salem	Oregon
Joan	Dean	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger creates a threat to independent news bro

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Penman	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Walker	Oberlin	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Novitski	Sausalito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Quenk	Saco	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Eagleson	Youngsville	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Whetsell	White Oak	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Anaya	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Reid	Calistoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ana	davidson	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debi	Feistkorn	Roswell	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bj	Wagner	Cape May	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tricia	Bastean	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Hunt	San Tan Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Bayouth	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Belanger-Iott	Eaton Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Maselunas	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Kline	Tulsa	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brooke	Conti	Cleveland Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Jacoby	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Kholodov	Gaithersburg	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Ullman	West Linn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Timberman	Los Angeles, CA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Goldsmith	DAMES qUARTER	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Blazekovich	Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kellie	Mitchell	Birmingham	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
L.K.	Curry	Anna	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremiah	Moore	San Francisco	California	We must not allow a Sinclair-Tribune merger, because a non-free press is a threat to democracy.
Ian	Carlon	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Burnett	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeana	Menger	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Cline	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elisa	Monte	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Hillard	Salinas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rand	Embertson	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ira	Hurvitz	San Gabriel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Leiva	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Gallagher	Burlingame	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Juli	Zimmerman	Rogers	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn G.	Mitchell	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Halie	Hennessey	Cape May	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maribeth	Clemm	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Gellert	Anchorage	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Osborne	Evansville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Dannenfelser	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Paulus	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jasmine	Landry	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dina	Azarkman	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Tatum	Waco	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jasmine	Ueng-McHale	Pennington	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Knowles	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Quenk	Saco	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Wilson	hamden	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Inukai	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deb	Hahn	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katrina	Barron	South Bend	Indiana

I am concerned because a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

My family and I are quite alarmed at how Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, and know that this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glen	Hirshberg	La Crescenta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Mahoney	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harley	Miller	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Green	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	VanDyke	Marceline	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Gildersleeve	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Davenport	Simi Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Vogelsong	Duncannon	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Farmer	Lake Bluff	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jasmine	Landry	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Brown	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Simmons	Lubbock	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Hays	Higginsville	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Campbell	San Marcos	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Valadez	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Evangelou	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	McCarley	Fuquay Varina	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Davis	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karishma	Brough	Tucker	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Rich	Bend	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
janet	pertusi	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Courant	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Niemer	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Johnson-Motle	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Schaut	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Pape	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edmund	Round	Beachwood	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Salih	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D	Jessop	santa fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gailen	David	Coconut Grove	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Manning	Maquoketa	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Smith	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Myrna	Fisher	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	G	Mountain View	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christian	Pepera	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Smith	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Shull	Costa Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

April	Post	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	McCurdy	Auburn	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Welborn	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tash	Hash	Moorpark	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mila	rose	los angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lou	Furman	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarna	Marcus	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ahmed	Kassem	Morro Bay	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Brown	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Janson	Eden	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Williams	Muncie	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Guillermo	Montoya	Corte Madera	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Adan	Carmichael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Warren	Manhattan	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonya	Martinez	Corona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karhy	Hartong	Braidwood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Olson	Flint	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Houston	Noble	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Though this comment may be pre-written, it accurately reflects my beliefs. I act according to my own free will in posting this comment.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Linda	Williams	Tahlequah	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymond	Cvetovich	Scotch Plains	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Gavian	Cambridge	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Polack	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Mcgarry	Averill Park	New York	I do not want to live in a fascist dictatorship. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Leah	Schulz	Blackfoot	Idaho	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Ferris	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Hinton	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Smith	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Leveque	Marana	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Vaughn	Downey	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Zanol	Montrose	Colorado

This merger is all about political propaganda and state media which all Americans should fear.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Petrie	Overland Park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It's outright dangerous considering we live in a country where the President tells us lies and calls it the truth, while simultaneously shouting down facts as "fake news."
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history—the right side of truth—and block this merger.
Dhyana	Westfall	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Waid	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kayla	Novlan	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Corwin	Ukiah	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	Julian	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerard	Popescu	Westfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ilene	Mondschein	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	McGuire	South Bend	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Ichioka	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rohini	Ross	Topanga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
A.L.	Steiner	Cornwallville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mella	Trier	Belmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Yeoman	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Goulden	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhoda	Seidler	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Van Ark	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virgil	Pauls	Newton	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Cooper	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Burkett	Kingston	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Naugler	Germantown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Holmes	Minden	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Payne	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Crowley	Madison	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	OToole	Arlington Hts	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Becknell	DeKalb	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lissa	Holloway	Britt	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Pettit	Moab	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gerridge	Hightstown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Albert	LeBlanc	Williamston	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Haffner	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Leslie	Maplewood	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Leavens	san francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Hood	Jemez Pueblo	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Madeo	Boonsboro	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Ferrari	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Wizer	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Brooks	Tuscaloosa	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gisela	Cory	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Bender	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ketzel	Levine	Manzanita	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Faith	Bugely	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Winston	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brant	Cooper	Encinitas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Stern	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Maurer	Glendale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Echols	Lehigh Acres	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Brailsford	Edisto Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LAURA	ESPARZA	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Chan	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Collins	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Draper	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Loe	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Ranheim	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Kelly	Springfield	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sunny	patten	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	St.John	Brunswick	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
James	Barber	Evergreen	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Collette	Clark	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Mauprivez	Portsmouth	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Muceus	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Jung	Fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Brandlin	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Reimer	Clayton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mara	Lambert	O Brien	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melvin	Taff	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penelope	Andrews	Bangor	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Parrish	North attleboro	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Williams	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melinda	Parr	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Ross	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Ross	Hamilton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JERRY	MCMURRY	Lakeside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Myers	Lawrence	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eloise	Hill	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kecia	Bailey	Laguna Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Godwin	Meridian	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Birky	Baton Rouge	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Martin-Risk	Alamo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Klein	JACKSON HEIGHTS	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Austin	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
robert	dalling	natchitoches	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Fortes	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Francine	Dolins	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myra	Schegloff	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leandra	Gerena	Morristown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Bregman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
LuAnn	Rosenzweig	Mt. Pleasant	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Rothman	Crozet	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jesus	Guzman	Goleta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Memmert	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sandra	Liberty	Kansas City	Missouri	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. A single, large press that would come from this merger is not a free press; it is a single point of view. The media should be a check on our government to ensure we are hearing the truth. It should not be an arm of the government. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Ree	Hawkins	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Chanterelle	Yarmouth	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vincent	Hittson	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Del	Pullen	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Bamberger	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alejandra	Wilson	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Frederick	Waverly	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teri	Cavanaugh	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Meston	Manistique	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Sanders	Louisville	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reece	Castellano	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brita	Thompson	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kara	Tan Bhala	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlos	Vasquez	San Bruno	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phoebe	Antrim	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angry	Voter	Weslaco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Dame	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marina	Long	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. To the FCC: Please honor our citizen's rights to freedom of speech, wisely protected by our founding fathers, who understood that Democracy rests on it. That freedom is now in danger by forces in government that not only don't care about it but actively seek to destroy it because it is inconvenient for their power grab and their plutocracy of the very rich.
				Please say NO to the merger of Sinclair Broadcasting Group and Tribune Media, which would form a conglomerate of unprecedented power to distribute fake news. This is not what our Democracy needs. Please let local stations and individuals decide what to air. This merger will make it impossible to get at the truth of what is going on in our deal-making, power hungry

Marcy	Donaldson	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Hemmingsen	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amie	Ruth	Lebanon	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arthur	Schuller	Carmel Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Espinosa	Fairway	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Cindy	Lindsay	Boulder	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. DO NOT ALLOW the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A TV broadcasting conglomerate of this size and power would contradict the FCC's own policies. Allowing a huge corporation to force its subsidiaries to spew only its view of the world and provide NO DIVERSITY of views is unAmerican!! A FREE PRESS is essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Nagel	Ellwood City	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Katzen	Lantana	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annabelle	Dixon	San Pedro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Marshall	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	LaFata	Mcminnville	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Cryer	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Wilce	Yonkers	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Arnold	Baton Rouge	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faye	Ellman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Swint	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Mayer	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Marro	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Basile Fero	Portola Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Connor	Box Elder	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	M	Philomath	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Price	Florence	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Kozminski	Solon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Wood	Washington	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ethan	Middlebrooks	Sunnyside	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Chrobot	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Cook	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Ayers	Grass Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Rubio	Hollister	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaynul	Islam	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Ciazza	Torrington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kristen	Weller	Minneapolis	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not allow a Sinclair-Tribune merger. Please don't encourage monopolies over our small-town news broadcasts. This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. We all need diversity of views in the press. It is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

MaryJo	Malone	Temecula	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Vaughn	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Denham	Redondo Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva-Genevieve	Scarborough	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rob	West	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vicki	Skeels	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Ray House	Highlands Ranch	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Rogers	Maple Grove	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Lotman	Los Angles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fran	Tilgner	Deming	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Murphy	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Shaun	Reno	Kirkwood	Missouri	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is not just a quick buck game, this is how Americans will be A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Thomas	Peoria	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Watts	Lake Forest	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Burwen	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Castleman	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Brown	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruby	Grad	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Atkinson	El Sobrante	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Emre	Tepedelenlioglu	La Honda	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

I strongly believe independent journalism, owned and operated by l

loree	moore	deming	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Davis	Hilton Head	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Livingston	ojai	California	We rely on the fourth estate as a vital part of our democracy. It has already been damaged by allowing a certain news outlet to act as not an authentic news source, but a propaganda machine. We cannot further dilute this democratic leg by allowing so much power to reside with one corporation.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Brian	De Soto	Milpitas	California
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Godfrey	Sterling	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rudite	Schmidt	Coopersville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ted	Bahn	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ruth	Sheets	Brookhaven	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. No communications entity should be able to own or control more than 1 radio and TV station in a particular market. That moves toward monopoly. When that happens, the chance that fake news or limiting what is covered grows. That is not democratic and does not fit into our democratic system.
				Sinclair has already shown itself to distribute "news items" that MUST be read by the local news team. That is just plain wrong. Sinclair has shown themselves to have their own political agenda at their center and not a fair reporting of the news. Letting them get even bigger is unAmerican, just plain unAmerican and must stop.

Gabriela	Arnon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Pilecki	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Day	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Cohen	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Bernard	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Powell	Toledo	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nanette	Schweitzer	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Devra	Small	Huntington	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Smith	Sherwood	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Haffner	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Rouff	SAINT LOUIS	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ramona	Ponessa	Bandon	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Vaughn	Coeur D Alene	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	King	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Loven-Crum	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	De Soto	Milpitas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Saren	Nelson	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jack	McGuire	Oakland	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Concerning the proposed Sinclair-Tribune Sinclair is already notorious for presenting extreme, one-sided versions of true news developments—and serves vast areas of the country where no other voice is available. Our Democracy thrives on a rich diversity of views: the health of the First Amendment must not be compromised—we Americans deserve a free press, to be able to make informed, non-biased decisions about the events and actions that effect their—and all of our—lives.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free

James	Tabussi	Upper Saddle River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Fortunak	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernard	McQueeney	Sugar Land	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Kruse	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Reed	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. Harvey	Gardner	Oro Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Aldiero	Trenton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mee	Haaw	fair oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Skok	Camp Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Les	Gustafson-Zook	Goshen	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelly	Gerhardt	DENVER	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nellie	McKay	Pocono Manor	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Frick	Castro Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Augusto	Molano	Schaumburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	West	Algona	Iowa	We need and deserve a free and independent press. Even more we need independent TV and radio stations serving local communities not political goals. Individual social devices overwhelm the public's services and create a fantasy world that does not face facts. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Laurie	Porter	West Linn	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

karina	machado	lawndale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Goff	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Markham	Forsyth	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Jones	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Washington	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
N	Fregin	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Napier	Napa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Jones	Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruby	Grad	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Herbert	Lord	Columbia	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lyndall	Nipps	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Castille-O'Keefe	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gaye-Gonzales	Saginaw	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Joshua	Caron	Hermitage	Tennessee	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Kimber	Temple	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean E	Meehan RN	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Rinzler	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Hackenberger	Los Altos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Baylee	Foster	Glennville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Thompson	Fair Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Hubert	Chesterfield	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Young	Catskill	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Haegele	Cambria	California	We must stop the merger between Sinclair and Tribune in order to protect our democracy and access to information.
				Sinclair is a politically biased organization and I am scared that in the near future, our media will become an arm of propoganda and not a way for the citizens of this nation to get the valuable information they need as they decide who to vote for and how to take action.
				We must prevent this merger!
Gail	Bjorkman	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Kursky	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjorie	Castanien	Defiance	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Weinberger	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sherri	Nourse	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Coleman	Billingslea	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Jacoby	Brook Park	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curt	Frederick	Cedar	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Sinclair is already too big and should be broken up!

Dr. John	Fawcett	Newberg	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Griffith	Citrus Heights	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Everett	Woods	Saginaw	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Casey	Miller	Dallas	Texas	As a trained journalist, this proposed merger would be a real threat to the Fourth Estate and would severely damage our democracy. The reason for our laws and oversight is to foster a MULTITUDE of FREE VOICES for a healthy public debate. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Andrew	Flanagan	East Greenwich	Rhode Island	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Dahlman	Florence	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Tolmach	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Smisek	Bloomington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Evon	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Whitney	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jalynn	Venis	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Greenberg	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yefim	Maizel	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Wolff	Carmel Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Schkade	Boulder City	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Guzman	Fort Pierce	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Coleman	Billingslea	Emeryville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tali	Winkler	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Katsaros	Mount Vernon	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Lee	Florence	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Kofoid	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karly	Larson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Brown	Streetsboro	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

anita	knight	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
dr. judy	mcnew	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Brown	Agoura Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The extreme right is trying to dismantle checks and balances. No wonder Putin loves Trump.
Karen	Hay	Soquel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Madden	Palisade	Colorado	We need independent press coverage and news. Keep the press free.
shelley	spiegel	West Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayne	Hamilton	Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	McQuade	Albany	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Mazzeo	West Caldwell	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Taylor	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerstin	Magnusson	Coral Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myrna	Stillman	Winnsboro	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Harding	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Smith	Sherwood	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Chowdhry	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jadranka	Suster	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Zander	Southbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianne	Wells	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Naranjo	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Tyler	Tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Lilly	SHAKER HEIGHTS	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Vaughn	Coeur d’Alene	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Harrison	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
harris	rollinger	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Abrams	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Olszewski	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Alexander	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
