L	King	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	DeMarta	Los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Jehly	Rohnert Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kerstin	Magnusson	Coral Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Gilmore	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zachary	Pearce	Norwalk	Connecticut	This is a crucial issue that must be prioritized over personal or political benefit; a free and diverse press--where no one entity can exert control over the majority--is crucial to our democratic institutions.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
James	Hamilton	Sheridan	Indiana
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Rauer	Portland	Oregon	Unbiased media controlled by communities, not large corporations is tantamount to maintaining some semblance of a democracy. We already have an issue with large corporations largely controlling our media. The Sinclair-Tribune merger is a huge step in the wrong direction. No corporation, or government office or agency should be able to control and force the content of our local stations.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Anna	Rubanova	Los Angeles	California
				This merger threatens decades of FCC precedent and will put us on a path to ruin.
				Free speech and freedom of the press are fundamental tenants of American society. Sell them off and we are nothing.

George	Klipfel II, CLS	Cathedral City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger is A DISASTEROUS IDEA.
J	Chanil	Los Angeles	California	It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Darrell	Cronan	Addison	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Wilson	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Maloney	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Kraut	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Martinez	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Janssens	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Longino	Gonzales	Saginaw	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Wicker	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hardip	Bakshi	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Davis	Chestertown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Borghese	Athens	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Kirby	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Lucchesi	Rohnert Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Witt	Horseheads	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Hammar	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Harris	Livonia	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Sarchett	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valerie	Guarino	Southington	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Sheryll	Jersey City	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Tarbutton	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Magdolna	Tanzer	Sanibel	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Rothenberg	Porter Ranch	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ingrid	Rochester	Elbert	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Phares	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Hein	Hudson	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	DeClue	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

william	claassen	Columbia	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Denman	Topeka	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Spallone	Browns Mills	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. For representational government to work well, various viewpoints need to be considered and honestly debated. Corporate power to impose a single viewpoint on supposedly local news would not serve freedom and liberty.
Joan	Hedrick	Middletown	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Levinson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen	Anthony	Maple Grove	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Pearlman	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	Miller	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Araceli	Mejia	Marina	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Hsu	Carrboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Reynolds	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Watson	FALLS CHURCH	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Schreiber	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffery	Harper	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Ash	Buffalo	New York	Oh joy! History repeating itself yet again! Anyone remember their history lessons in school as to what Hitler did in Germany while he had power
				?A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias
Donna	Boyle	San Juan Capistrano	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anaundda	Elijah	Sn Luis Obisp	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tami	Roniger	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Irwin	Westminster	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Susan	Lea	Berkeley	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. By forcing its newscasters to read prepared scripts, Sinclair is the

Susan	Potterat	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jackie	Goodman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Anthony	Maple Grove	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Eisen	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erna	Auton	Saline	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Keir	Sandy	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Watson	FALLS CHURCH	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
B	Fleitman	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Hauck	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Ecker	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Buttafuoco	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Smith	Tijeras	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

christine	koenig	long beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lennell	Mak	Beverly Hills	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva	Peck	Paso Robles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie K	Hudson	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Young	Revere	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Grill Sanders	Zionsville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Stevenson	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Merkel	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	McCartin	Fort Wayne	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Fulkerson	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marshall	Seal	Mesquite	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Ekeroth	Sebastian	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Jacobson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Bienlein	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Jones	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamra	Marinello	Shelby Twp	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Mahoney	Topeka	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenny	Lillis	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Peng	Albany	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	King	North Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julianne	Eanniello	Palm Desert	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Maisen	La Honda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don and Debra	Sprague	Bristol	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Esser	Bloomfield Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Wolf	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Helmer	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Beltz	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Goldammer	Jefferson City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernice	Van Zwalenburg	Kamuela	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victor	Dotson	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Elbrecht	Winfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Duffield	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Martin	La Grange	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emmalia	Harrington	Forest Hills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Surbrook	Saint Marys	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Hagy	Paso Robles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Prival	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lanora	Mueller	Batavia	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Brown	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history (I mean right not wrong, not right not left!) and block this merger.

Randall	Jones	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sidney	Silliman	Upland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Rowland	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaime	Filipek	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jay	Grossman	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Kinnings	Garden Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Laird	Hampshire	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aurelie	Ward	Statesville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marni	Turkel	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Forster	Waldport	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It would stifle competition, outright eliminating it from many communities. It is a direct move towards a state broadcast service which shows egregious bias towards one political side and towards corporatism rather than democracy.
Joanne	Dillon	Friendsville	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Clark	Port Clinton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Bleecher Snyder	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Dixon	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andie	D	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kara	Lucas	Broomfield	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Highland	Pentwater	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherrie	Weitzenhof	Bath	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Rieping	Madera	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Breidenbach	Floresville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	DeStefano	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nancy	weissman	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Richard-Amato	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Cole	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Anne	Nau	Kearney	Nebraska	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The local TV station, NTV is owned by Sinclair. The employees of this station do not necessarily share the views of their owner, but are forced to comply with Sinclair's policies or risk losing their jobs. This is no way to treat the First Amendment or freedom of the press. The duty of the press is to inform the public with unbiased information. With this kind of merger, that duty is greatly reduced to almost nothing.

Kathryn	Donaldson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Giorgi	Aumsville	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Violet	Nakayama	Truckee	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Grimes	Cordova	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

janice	duarte	Pleasanton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Yaciuk	Richfield Springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Wooden	Ellicott City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clarice	Nelson	Cave Creek	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Sexton	Clarkdale	Arizona
Nathaniel	Williams	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger concentrates information power into a sir A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Gotz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dustin	Shuman	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Teachworth	Hartfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Vitale	Surprise	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tanya	Kingsley	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allison	Preston	Fairview Hts	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Priscilla	Jenkins	Winthrop	Maine
Daniel	Roberts	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis it	Rodgers	EWING	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	Rogers	King of Prussia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Turnbull	Bellevue	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valerie	Maguire	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Weinstock	Oxnard	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	George	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Parks	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Mackey	Hampden	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Karp	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I strongly agree with the following message:
Lois	Gwirtz	wynnewood	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Nancy L.	Roll	Seward	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

thorayya	said giovannelli	portsmouth	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vance	McClure	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
PATRICK	GRAHAM	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curt	Carlson	Tuscaloosa	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neil	Hall	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Wirtz	Macungie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lily	Chapin	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Franz	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Rosser	Eagleville	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Royer	Peoria	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Mattson	Fortuna	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DAVID	MONDEJAR	ROSENDALE	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gale	Arden	Arlington Heights	Illinois

The Sinclair merger should be unacceptable to the FCC. It is a clear t

Paula	Janu	Kirtland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Barry	Middletown	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Bursatto	Layton	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erich	Schoessler	Chula Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Baker	Tucson	Arizona	A FREE SOCIETY is at stake. The press is the only one entity that is specifically mentioned in our constitution as being essential to a free society. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Wyatt	Fairbanks	Alaska	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Downie	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaylanne	Chandler	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Bateman	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Rutkowski	Topeka	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marge	Schwartz	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chi-Kai	Sin	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Bailey	Clive	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	McClure	Encinitas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hartman	quilcene	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Gliksohn	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Domenic	Cuzzolina	Hollidaysburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Gregoire	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lynn	marcus	Monterey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Josh	Malloy	Sioux Falls	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Williams	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eddy	Dwinal	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Tam	Kaneohe	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Ashley	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Weaver	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patti	Amsel	Cockeysville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roki	Abakoui	Montague	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jackie	Christerson	Sioux City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Lawson	Mountain Lake	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Sohm	Richardson	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Consul	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Byers	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Garwood	Camdenton	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alana	Gishlick	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Lewis	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Glacel	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Finnegan	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yahaira	Cardoza	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Basel	Basha	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theresa	McElwaine	West Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Musgrove	Rock Hill	South Carolina	I am deeply concerned about the potential merger of the Tribune and Sinclair broadcasting companies. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It is crucial to maintain diversity and competition in the broadcasting industry. Anything less threatens our freedoms and our access to accurate and complete information.
Daniel	Frumkin	Wilson	Wyoming	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Lord	Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Timmons	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Cady	Bowling Green	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Brady	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Legaspi-Wilson	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Luis	Caridad	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jordan	Herskowitz	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Cheney	Bellefonte	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Carlson	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	McGowan	Charlotte Hall	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Moe	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Kirk	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Schrader	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Brengle	York	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	McClure	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Franz	Villa Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Egan	Warwick	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Neurauter	Glen Ellyn	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edmund	Barron	Mount Pleasant	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Aston	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S.	Nam	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alma	Jackson	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Pierson	Tarpon Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Stuhaan	Ridgecrest	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilee	corey	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Dowell	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Robbins	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amber	Ziegler	Moscow	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Kranitz	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Tobin	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Kenworthy	Anytown	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alicia	Conde	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Roth	Fayetteville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	O'Reilly	Christiansted	Virgin Islands	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Sohm	Richardson	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christian	Baughman	Clive	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dmitry	Sagalovskiy	New York	New York

Please block the Sinclair-Tribune merger. I have followed the slow but nearly complete annihilation of media freedom in Russia over the last decade. As with Sinclair-Tribune merger, it has been driven and justified by private ownership, but it has turned Russian media into a pure propaganda machine.

Please protect the United States and don't let this happen here.

- Dmitry Sagalovskiy

Uranise	St. Clair	Middletown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jary	Stavely	Fort Bragg	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Mintz	Weston	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisabeth	Jones	Kent	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

brittany	kugler	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Carroll	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot's	Shamis	Deltona	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hugh	Moore	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martin	Mador	Hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jo-Ann	Garavaglia	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Dzija	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Wells	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Gates	High Point	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Pierce	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Shoffner	Calhoun	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zandra	Ellis	Durango	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Boyd	Forest Knolls	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Whitman	NYC	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Forlan	Benson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Mazza	Alpharetta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Fred C.	Brooks	Big Stone Gap	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Palma	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Espie	Gleneden Beach	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Armando A.	Garcia	Perris	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stanley	Dees	Rotonda West	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harlan	Vale	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ethan	Parker	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Kouba	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Schopplein	Larkspur	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tresa	McCallie	Chattanooga	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eve	Bernstein	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Willenbrink	Batavia	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Lawton	Temecula	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abigail	Kadell	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Shatkin	Occidental	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Dillon	Bolinas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophia	Infranco	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DeWitt	Dennison	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Ellis Adams	Denver	Colorado

The most dangerous threat to our country right now is the erosion o

Jonathan	Briggs	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Wood	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Sheidlower	Kew Gardens	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Raines	Cypress	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Simon	Irizarry	Avon	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jodie	Hulden	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Castillo	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sivan	Amar	Flushing	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Swenson-Sherbuk	Dunedin	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Kojis	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Hall	Williston	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Snyder	Woodstock	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Wilson	Hawley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Way	Pottstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Love	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jared	Miller	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Simon	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Hamm	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aline	Linden	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jann	Walker	Carmichael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Kahn	New City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Shannon	Gautier	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Wurst	Ogden	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Kessler	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Woodbury	Tigard	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rania	Bolotok	Naples	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Woodruff	Somerville	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Chirdon	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hao	Le	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Abler	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gorden	El Cerrito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nadine	Scott	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Czapski	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverly	Mitchell	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	O'Heffernan	LA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diana	Acevedo	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Berman	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth	Tubman	Scottsville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsey	Clepper	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Giesy	Gloucester	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stefani	Van Aken	Union	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbar	Patinkin	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Teubner	Atascadero	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Forrest	Cardiff By The Sea	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Stoken	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Moran	Roseville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jana	merrill	Felton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Schamp	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Frasier	Shoreview	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. State run media is unacceptable, undemocratic and un-American.
Sarah	K.	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wesley	Derr	Nottingham	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Emerman	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Anick-Jenkins	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ray	Verna	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ariel	Sigal	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Shook	Tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Bradley	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Kessler	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Walsh	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyn	Yount	Bloomington	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Goldman	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raymond	DiCarlo	Maple Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilee	Lambidakis	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
C	Sa	Boulder	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Over time, I have voted for Republicans and for Democrats. I am able to do this because presently there is basically FREEDOM for the press - all sides to speak and broadcast what they find and what they have researched. Based on the information as well as other factors, I have been able to vote my conscience. Monopolies in this US of A are illegal.....are they not? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Joyce	Vega	Monterey Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Card	Monterey	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC MUST stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernest	Looney	Santa Clarita	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Gorczyk	Orchard Lake	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Duane	Cochran	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Wright	West Linn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Cox	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kamille	Hammerstrom	Salinas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirsten	Sullivan	Cloverdale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samantha	Busa	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Gallagher	Levittown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ed	Rudolph	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Campbell	Holder	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would be too big for anyone's safety. Shut it down, and fast. You won't, because Sinclair is a useful tool for you, but if you had any principles of justice you would.
				You know this is dangerous for democracy. You know Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias that could undermine viewpoint diversity. And you know about the precedent of Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC (1969). So, will the FCC stand on the right side of history and block this merger?
				My money's on no. But hey, feel free to surprise me.
Deborah	Dimond	Manchester	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Sullivan	Perry	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Blunt	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Fast	Dansville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
O	B	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Deshon-Donnelly	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Young	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Felt	Burnsville	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Campbell	Alpine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	RIm	Suwanee	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Hvoslef	Salida	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seona	Ritchie	Ormond Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Franz	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Gilley	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Coller	Shasta Lake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Harrison	Metuchen	New Jersey
Anne	Pieper	Concord	California

Local News should be local. Sinclair has a track record of imposing t

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Sowder	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Sova	Nixa	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Haddad	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Smith	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Gauri	Winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Wetzler	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicky	Fields	Denver	Colorado	I am lending my voice to state my opposition to this merger. I want clear, non-biased news reporting at my local Denver Station. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rachelle	Farber	Carlsbad	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Spidell	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
stephanie	hoffman	Macungie PA	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Menzies	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harry	Shaw	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

I	deBorhegyi	Laredo	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joe	Frascone	Dallas	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Vodra	McLean	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Navarro	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Bradshaw	Westwood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Loewenstern	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	West	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Junko	Etherton	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janie	Lucas	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Fritz	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A media company shouldn't control this much of the market.

John	Lewis	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Johnson	Assaria	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jan k	stewart	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nishell	Falcone	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Reich	Glendale Hts.	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erika	Hagan	Ridgefield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brad	Wood	Tigard	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Matthew	Crespi	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I'm writing to oppose the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. The new entity would be one of unprecedented size and influence, able to operate at a massive scale without meaningful competition in several areas. The merger contradicts the FCC's own policies too. We need more voices and perspectives and competition, not less.
				Sinclair's broadcasts are all tinged with a strong political bias which would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Mary Jo	Jacoby	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kay	Schulz	Trinidad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Our democracy will suffer if this monopolistic merger is allowed to

Judith	Parker	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Richards	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Wiechman	Newbury Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Douglas	Burgener	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Roshell	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Shorr	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Bouett	Moraga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lagi	Netzler	Logan	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Hodlin	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	MacVicar	Kyle	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Freiwald	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mike	Stuchlak	Eynon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Silverberg	Woodacre	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	von Foerster	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Oliver	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Stadstad	Morristown	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MaryLou	Bailey	Auburn	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly Jane	Thomas	Shelburne	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Duvall	Decorah	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Lynch	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Kaiser	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laureen	Agadjanian	Stockton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Pakan	Geneva	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janet	Werness	Minneapolis	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The Sinclair-Tribune merger should not be permitted. A free and independent news media is essential to democracy. In this age where the president of the United States says a free press is the enemy of the people, and anything he disagrees with is “fake news” there is immense pressure on news organizations. People have the right to express and hear divergent views. Sinclair has shown it does not respect that basic principle. Protect the values of the First Amendment. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

J.	Whitson	Birmingham	Alabama	Please support and affirm the importance of local broadcasting for local communities by blocking the Sinclair-Tribune merger.
Mora	Hedayati	Raleigh	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Walker	Grinnell	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Busse	Staten Island	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Landis	Romeoville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Keegan	Heilman	Henderson	Nevada	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The limiting of access and the weakening in the freedom of expression through other governmental measures necessitates this letter. Without such conditions, a merger such as this could not have the impact of undermining our democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Susie	Foot	Mckinleyville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Lynch	Whittier	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sabina	Mosher	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Westley	Rutter	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Jonssa	Peachtree Corners	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Natasha	Sweeten	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger!!!

Meghan	Copas	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Seccombe	Grand Junction	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karynn	Merkel	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Manny	Burruel	Glendale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Lapic	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marty	Hoag	North Richland Hills	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Bumpus	Maryville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Hogan	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Wyckoff	Tulare	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Shaffer	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gulshan	Oomerjee	Simi Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Alice	Brake	Germantown	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Soto	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Flanagan	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monia	Joblin	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Milton	Strauss	Corrales	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Grant	Des Plaines	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Garren	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colin	Brodd	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	Elberg	San Anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susie	Foot	Mckinleyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Gorczyk	Orchard Lake	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Williams	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherryl	Wilkins	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Finn	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miri	Regev	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roseanne T.	Murphy	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judit	Alvernaz-Nagy	Rio Rancho	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Grodin	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Kokesh	Trenton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Kobak	Palos Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susie	Foot	Mckinleyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Novorolsky	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Marcus	Great Neck	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	OrozcoMartell	Sunland park	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Sherrow	Longboat Key	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Havener	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would be a DISASTER, it would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies! It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and BLOCK this merger!
Susan	Uyeda	Morton Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Caron	Hudson	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Renee	Crevelli	Vacaville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Mathers	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Schwager	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Balducci	Liverpool	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	Sager	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susie	Foot	Mckinleyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Marsh	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nancy	shea	Reseda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miriah	Reynolds	Birdsboro	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Bell	Aurora	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Stein	Lake Bluff	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Loomis	Camarillo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
B. M.	Goonan	Flushing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

madi	silverman	Kailua	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
KIM	STRONG	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Fieldhammer	Swoope	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Briseida	Davalos	Rancho Cucamonga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samantha	Annesley	Novelty	Ohio

STOP THIS MERGER! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Siegner	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Barron	Georgetown	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Pines	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Zimmermann	Avon	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Deans	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Twayn	Williams	portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jacqueline	Holmbeck	Plymouth	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. America was founded on the idea of free speech and free press. This proposed merger is a step toward state-sponsored TV, something that dictators and military governments love. We are a democracy--don't allow this merger, which goes against the FCC's own standards.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Jonathan	Knowles	New York	New York	I ask that the FCC block the merger between Sinclair Broadcasting Group and Tribune Media. It has been well demonstrated that Sinclair exerts significant control over the political views expressed by supposedly local news sources. To permit this entity to acquire Tribune Media, greatly expanding the range of channels over which it has control, would greatly diminish the independence of local media and the diversity of media content across the United States. Thank you for your time and consideration.
Hannah	Jennings	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Pfaffman	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susie	Foot	Mckinleyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	MacLowry	Bend	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noemy	Cruz	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yefim	Maizel	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Hanson	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L.M.	Kowats	Park Ridge	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Safman	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Graham	Brookside	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Belgeri	Saint Charles	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A J	Elliott	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christy	Jenkins	Hertford	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irwin	Arnstein	garland	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Brugger	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Lewis	Lake Worth	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
PJ	Kinney-Lorenz	Littleton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susie	Foot	Mckinleyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Pomeroy	Kapaau	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Stansen	Dillon	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
carmela	arnoldt	phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeremy	Hockett	Lansing	Michigan	STOP allowing SO MANY ANTI-DEMOCRATIC MERGERS!!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
calum	traveler	golden	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Stiefel	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angie	Hranowsky	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Brown	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Chasteen	Mechanicsville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Dunkle	Black Hawk	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kauffman	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackie	West	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Graham	Brookside	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aimee	Arnold	Hereford	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mike	Gallagher	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Browder	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phillip	Mitchell	Oro Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shana	Reeser	Penn Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Rubiano	Pennsauken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Falbo	West Islip	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Stringer	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathin	Yang	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Eads	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Dambrun	White Lake	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arliss	Ungar	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Weiner	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Ingrao	Bel Air	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Wilson	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Share	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Griffin	Silver Spring	Maryland	Our democracy requires that free speech be protected, over the public airwaves or in the public square. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
olivia	gaddini	Rancho Mission Viej	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Barkin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glenn	Thompson	Gold Beach	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Lord	Springfield	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Sherman	Naugatuck	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Luck	Marshalltown	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Stiefel	Henderson	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raymond	Katz	Larkspur	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emerald	Zeitz	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elinore	Olsen	West Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Herlihy	Taylors	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Vaughn	Medford	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Perry	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cyrus	Bharucha	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Taylor	Pensacola	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Evans	Florence	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Van Patten	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	McBride	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sonia	Stagg	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ginger	Kitchen	Fremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carl	Ezold	South Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Stoddart	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Westhoff	South Vienna	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Griffin	Silver Spring	Maryland	In a democracy, no one should have the power to use the public airwaves to broadcast his selected political viewpoint while excluding others. Free political speech demands a fair and open public forum, for th
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nancy	Peterson	Palo Alto	California
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	P	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debbie	Hatcher	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Kappus	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Schellhorn	Mission Hills	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pina	Kamolnick	Rancho Mirage	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marc	Gelman	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bass	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Bly	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lani	Rodriguez	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Kray	Collbran	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seymour	Simon	Florham Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Hicks	Fayetteville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosa	Huezo	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Cotterman	north royalton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albert G.	Smith	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joahn	Rain	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Vossler	Prairie Village	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Hines	Southlake	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Priscilla	Khuu	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tammy	garrison	liberal	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Bresnick	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	Statz	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lenore	Rodah	S Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gudrun	Weinberg	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Spivey	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee Ann	Roberts	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Petrone	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	Payne	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Larson	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Boehm	Hercules	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Seydel	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Olsen	Orange Park	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Haswell	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Forth	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Covey	Hawthorne	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Houston	New Carlisle	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Gigy	Point Reyes Station	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Lyall	Corpus Christi	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Greene	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Merlene	Smith	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It is wrong as it threatens our First Amendment Rights, and would control everything we hear or read. Doesn’t that sound like a country under a Dictator?!!!’ Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. FCC LISTEN AND BLOCK THIS MERGER!

Anita	Mancini	Gibbsboro	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	Kondratieff	Shawnee	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Matchett	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Jennings	Oro Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Tyler	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rev. Jisho	Perry	Mount Shasta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Brown	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Schwager	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tee	gee	n/a	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Hubbard	Lawrenceville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth	Goldberg	Foster City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Elaine	Cass	Orange	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. AM ADAMANTLY OPPOSED TO SINCLAIR'S EFFORTS AT

Bruce	Tucker	Newark	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Hattaway	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Dorman	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Rea	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Giarrusso	Menlo Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Petrone	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gay	Matthews	Stockton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan M	Oliver	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kali	Gooding	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Forsyth	Rocklin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Bresson	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Winik	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Chess	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kali	Gooding	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Ashley	Oakland Park	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mirna	ostchega	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Richter	Red Bank	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Murison	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Brenum	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Levy	Mt Pleasant	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Koletskyf	Shaker Heights	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Rechs	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Anderson	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Bradie	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Zangrilli	Sandy	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Mulenburg	Fairfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Cran	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Williams	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hava	Buchanan	Downey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Britney	Winthrope	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Raforth	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Bares	Dickinson	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Cannatti	austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This is one trust that should be pre-busted. The merger would stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Brian	Havenner	Saint Charles	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this has already undermined viewpoint diversity at their broadcast stations; the merger would eliminate viewpoint diversity for most of American broadcasting, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Given Sinclair's previous actions I agree with the ACLU that this merger is bad for the US and negatively our right to free speech. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicola	Nelson	North Salt Lake	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Alward-Saxon	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Fromowitz	Lutz	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen Garza	Roeder	Whitesboro	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Nickels	Newcastle	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Murray	Brown	Amherst	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. There is insufficient evidence that a Sinclair-Tribune merger will create sufficient economies of scale, either horizontally or vertically, to justify it. Nor will the resulting increase in the share of corporate earnings to employee costs. lower consumer costs. In fact, it is known that existing TV broadcasting conglomerates of such unprecedented size and power in this country do not share the increased monopoly returns with either employees nor consumers. And to allow the merger would increase the power of the firm to publicize its own ideology, which would limit our free speech Sinclair's broadcasts display unwavering political bias, which undermines diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Dan	Rather	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Pease	Rockford	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Goddard	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Daniels	Spring Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Welte	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Anderson	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ross	Bailey	Glen Allen	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jill	Budzynski	Maple Grove	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As former residents of northwest Michigan, we have noticed consistent bias on the part of Sinclair-owned broadcasting outlets.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. We know that it would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Connie	Wittig	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gert	Bernstein	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Miller	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susana	Matias	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Shaak	Reading	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tony	Wise	North Augusta	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Wineburgh-Freed	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dr. Phillip	Shamas	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Kerbel	Takoma Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ENID	BLOCH	Tonawanda	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Hand	El Cerrito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candy	Reiser	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Neumann	Lincolnville	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Davis	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Rund	Great Falls	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Snyder-Torr	Beloit	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	DeGooyer	Kihei	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Kirkpatrick	Benicia	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Anderson	Sedro Woolley	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Soraya	Conserve	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Mortimer	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda K	Barnhill	East Sparta	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. STOP this abusive greedy agenda NOW... I no longer watch my

Richard	Guevara	Plover	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelli	Lent	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Sweet	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Bayless	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

hedy	weinberg	Greenwood Village	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John-Patrick	Doherty	Lawrence KS	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Martin	Henniker	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Accorsi	Ballston Spa	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Johnson	Waterford	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Gasparovic	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Anderholm	Cazadero	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Camille	Bass	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Schouggins	Hixson	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tony	Gonzales	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Larson	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christy	Carrano	Hometown	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean A	Autrey	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Bell	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nelle	Jurgeleit-Greene	Haines	Alaska	Americans must have fair news representation. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruben	Cerrillo	Duluth	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

T	Scharmann	North Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Downey	Valrico	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terrance	Shinney	Ogden	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michaela	Hartsfield	Tillson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Ulibarri	Taos	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David Wesley	Brown	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Pease	Rockford	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dahl	Honolulu	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

david	lappinga	ladera ranch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
judith	hutchison	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Oroza	Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Anderholm	Cazadero	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Hon	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bette Jo	Hammer	Findlay	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helena	Roberts	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marianne	Arkeat	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gulshan	Oomerjee	Simi Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Harper	Sherwood	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnilee	Kaufman	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sasha	Tremblay	Lake Orion	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	McCourt	Newtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Towne	Rockford	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Brown	Apache Jct	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Don	Mckenzie	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Wilson	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Guy Birken	Wauwatosa	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Applebaum	New Milford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Kraft	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Beltran	North hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Salvatore	Barbatano	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Manire Fowle	Northridge	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Warren	Clayton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ortiz	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Felici-Gallant	New Milford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Grant	Wheeling	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Garry	Bloomfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Sando	New york	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Mendes	Pound Ride	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Niswonger	Tigard	Oregon	I am very concerned that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Nicholson	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Bloxham	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patti	Perrin	North Plains	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Chambers	Hooksett	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Xenia	Gonzalez Silva	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Haynes	Dewey	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rob	Sackett	Erie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Johnson	Van Nuys	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Vaughan	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Tipps	Placentia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jane	benning	allentown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Madar	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Frankel	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Cantero	Brooklyn	New York
Jamila	Horabin	Tallahassee	Florida	This merger paves the way to far-right, racist, homophobic, misogyn A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Clarke	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Support the freedom of the press, a Constitutionally protected right.
Chelsea	Pang	Kaneohe	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Santos	Vargas	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marianne	Meeker	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Scott	Cleveland Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle the free speech and diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts display consistent, unwavering political bias enforced by Sinclair. This bias, if imposed across a merged Sinclair - Tribune conglomerate, would severely undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC should do its job properly by blocking this merger.
Kimberly	Feilmeyer	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlene	Heitner	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Brown	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Slechta	Playa Vista	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Engvall	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Savage	Reston	Virginia	This is CRITICAL to the future of the United States as we know it. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. What a truly frightening prospect that is.
Susie	McVicar	El Dorado	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. Do the right thing for the country - not what the Trump administration tells you is “right.” The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marsha	Walton	Fairport	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Dean	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Paglione	Brighton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Gray	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Betancourth	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Syed	Khan	Cumberland	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Mooney	Mantoloking	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Hartley	Effort	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Zeimer	Moraga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allyce	Bess	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Murryelle	Bothwell	Tucsonmo	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Drexler	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Cuccaro	Carson City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cama	Merritt	Winston Salem	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Fogel-Richmond	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Lyba	Adamstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erica	Case	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Colon	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wilma	Dollemore	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina and John	Kapp	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Amora	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Devra	Filler	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Appleby	Portland	Oregon	At a time when we need more informed discussion, more variety of viewpoints and analysis, more news unspoiled by political bias, the proposed merger between The Sinclair Broadcasting Group and Tribune Media would be an irreversable plunge towards the total control described in 1984 and other dystopian literature.
Tomand Lauri	Holmes	Kalamazoo	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a media conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy. This would directly contradict the FCC's

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Don't let this happen!!!!!!

We are alarmed at the stifling of opinion that we already see here.

Maeve	Kinkead	South Nyack	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Buhrke	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Weinger	Oakland	California	The Sinclair-Tribune merger is a terrible idea for democracy. Local news stations and anchors must be free to express a variety of opinions. Sinclair's insistence on local news airing pre-recorded propaganda-like political messages often full of mistruths and outright lies is an affront to the free media envisioned by the founding fathers as a bulwark against tyranny! This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Peg	Merkel	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Kerfoot	Schaumburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Sieff	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harry	Bernhard	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Kramer	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellin	Klor	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Whitley	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Juliet	Hawk	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cristina	Mayer	Costa Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Drahos	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Kalan	Orange	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Buchan	Reesor	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Donna	Granby	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Allen	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Rines	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natasha	Altman	Greenwood Village	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Chambers	Port Richey	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Winfield	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ahmed	Ortiz	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Ramirez	West Covina	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Jones	Angel Fire	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chilton	Ryan	w	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marge	Fear	Cleveland Hts	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Morgan	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Oliver	Kelseyville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Freeland	Vernon Hills	Illinois	As a consumer, I feel that the FCC's thumb has been put on the scale in favor of big business and monopolistic policies. The same goes with consumer protections. Is this what we want - a country that is eventually run by a few companies that control the message? Today, companies don't grow through old fashioned innovation, research and development. They simply buy up othet companies. This is how dictatorships and fascism operate. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Cheryl	Vanni	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Davis	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Simmons	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

REV. HAROLDO	NUNES	Orrville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Anderson	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Branning	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzy	Sayle	Steamboat Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Rothstein	Hollywood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Oliver	Kelseyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Colton	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roxanne	Kelly	El Granada	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Savage	Mammoth Lakes	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carmen	Barnard	Cardiff By The Sea	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Drahos	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Quinn	Valley Center	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Watson	West Lafayette	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Williams	Oakland	California

I'm very concerned that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John Christian	Durdines	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chriselle	Tidrick	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melia	Schnefke	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Barbara	Isely	Corvallis	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy.
				We need fair and balanced information. That always requires being open to various viewpoints
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Sauzen	Leyva	Midland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Volhein	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nora	Auston	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Baum	Pinole	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Fine	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Curtis	Barnett	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Rafferty	New Cumberland	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tommy	Lewis	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer L.	Boyer	Mohrsville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leroy	Hoffman	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Hirst	Harpswell	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Friesenhengst	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Greenwood	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Tholstrup	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candace	Pratt	Portland	Oregon	Dear FCC, Please do not allow the merger of Sinclair-Tribune. It is unthinkable that such an openly biased company would be allowed merge to create a conglomerate that would virtually guarantee limits on the views that local news stations could express. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Paola	Leon	Ma	Massachusetts	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. DO NOT SUPPORT! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LeeRaye	Mitchell	West Jordan	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tino	Fragale	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirk	Glaser	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Briggs	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mary	fulton	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Ikeda	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cliff	Bishop	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Brenneman	Jefferson	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Malchow-Hay	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Gregg	Craig	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randi	Silverman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Burris	Noblesville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Greiner	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
NATALIE	SMITH	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Bowen	Superior	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Nachmias	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Simpson	Clearwater	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Hogan	Tomales	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Paul	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Limon	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Out	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Tatomer	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Jaffee	Portland	Oregon	I am writing to urge you to reject the merger of Sinclair and Tribune Media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would also contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Patricia	Launer	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Rasich	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Cuff	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Osika	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Bruinsma	Springfield	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elke	Hoppenbrouwers	East Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Mueller	Alpharetta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurent	Comes	Kinnelon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Kapiloff	Commack	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Austin	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Lucas	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Guidoux	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Chieffo	Souderton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Nance	Wheat Ridge	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Alvergue	Pittsburg	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ian	Dogole	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miccaela	Montague	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Calhoun	Lakeside	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

KATHY	BEN	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Crowley	Redwood City	California	People deserve a choice in local news, not a corporately controlled proaganda machine. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rob	Jenkin	Walled Lake	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Ivey	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger is UnAmerican, plain and simple.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Ann	Cooper	WinstonSalem	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Gregg	Craig	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elissa	Germaine	Pleasantville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Straka	Evansville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Myers	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Ayraud	Shepherdstown	West Virginia
Sherry	Bridges	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome Most people watching/reading their local news are unaware that required scripts are being provided by the owning corporation. Please keep local news from becoming a monopoly able to dispense propaganda to a large and sometimes unsuspecting audience. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Cheryl	Thomas	Hamilton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Tyler	Dexter	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Chandos	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	DiNapoli	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Alms	Westmont	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Frederick-Neznek	Clinton	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amber	Geiger Morgan	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Whitney	Leeds	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Rudolph	Bandon	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Teplitz	Thousand Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Olson	Broken Arrow	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Bordner	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brittany	Cali	Springfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Kaiser	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Raimondo	St. Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgia	Moseby	Conway	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Mathews	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jimmy	McMillan	Swannanoa	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Moss	Margate, Florida 33(	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Carpenter	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Alderson	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charlie	Smith	Rhinecliff	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Evans	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Green	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neal	Artz	Millville	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary Cecile	Gee	Oakland	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Free speech is the right every American touts as the most powerful signifier of our inalienable freedoms. On its face, after the quickest of glances, this proposed merger of Sinclair-Tribune, that would put 200 stations under the control of Sinclair, a media syndicate that has proven itself to be a scripting entity, more interest in control of what is said, and not the utter freedom to report what is true, this merger would so clearly signify a willingness on the part of those who are charged with protecting our freedoms that the end of democratic checks and balances, discrete and free "estates" upon which freedom must be built, and in which it rests. History will know your names, and those whom you are charged to protect, the truths you are meant to allow to be spoken, will be squashed by any vote in favor of this merger. Vote your conscience. Vote in the name of freedom's obvious truth. How you vote in this case will not be forgotten. The future of our democracy

Brian	Collins	Leawood	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must block this merger to protect the American public.
Allan	Wood	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Carman	Saratoga Springs	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Reeves	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Breanna	Furbish	Saco	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Maher	Carmel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Millward	Ogunquit	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Withers	Hood River	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kebbi	Sheppard	S Ozone Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Butler	Birmingham	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brittany	Mullins	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Trudy	Jamieson	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

alison	wright	Manhattan Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carolyn	Martin	Litchfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Goodman	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Rosinia	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Glickstein	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Osgood	Hollidaysburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Surtees	Toluca Lake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Rodrigues	Fremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ela	Pete	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Henry	Nelson	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Heyl	San Luis Obispo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernie	DeHut	Bergland	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Lyons	Rochester	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Kramarck	Townsend	Delaware	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We must not have state propaganda media. It is anti-democratic, pro fascist and un-American. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Christine	Herter	Farmington	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Liroff	Newark	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Phillips	Boonville	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Rustanius	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Schroeder	Spring Grove	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marji	Greenhut	Brunswick	Maine

PLEASE PROTECT A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	May	Howell	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lorraine	Heagy	Lititz	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Reinhold-Shor	Prt Jefferson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Webb	Ft. Collins, CO	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Huxley	Coulter	Big Bend	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Miranda-Browne	Plainfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Leuschner	Windsor	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Charles	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A.J.	Morrisette	Paso Robles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Manning	New Castle	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Maher	Joliet	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Otto	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Fine	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Lehnis	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Winter	St. Petersburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S John	Steines	Annapolis	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hayley	Patterson	VICKSBURG	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
K	Chase	North Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Blackwell-Marchant	Castro Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Ingraham	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Angell	Cottage Grove	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Paige MSG USA Ret	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	LeBaron	Turlock	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Tan	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Cornish	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eann	Daly	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Falk-Krzesinski	Buffalo Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lloyd	Affholter	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robbie	Pearce	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Toni	Deslaurier	BETHEL	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Borden	Escondido	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Messerschmidt	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S	Thompson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Hammel	Maryville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norma	Corral	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adele	Cuthbert	Potomac	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Lusk	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rodney	Margison	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Matthews	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Callahan	Pflugerville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amin	Dharamsi	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karol	Olkowski	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Mackey	Denver	Colorado

The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Gilbert	Charleston	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Skisak	Lockport	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Morris	Coraopolis	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Evanczuk	Plant City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Jackson	Greenbelt	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a dangerously large media conglomerate. A free and independent press, with substantial variety, is necessary for the survival of our democracy. Any merger of this size is a threat.

In particular, Sinclair has already demonstrated that they are willing and able to dictate how the news is reported across their already very large media holdings. This makes this merger even more concerning, and it should be categorically opposed.

Leann	Rabaey	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alyssa	Burko	Macomb	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Brodner	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Borden	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	LaJeunesse	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Erica	Ehrhardt	Leesburg	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It's not good for one corporation to have a monopoly on local news in so many areas. Sinclair does not give its employees freedom to report as they see fit, but forces them to read from its scripts, sending messages which appear to come from trusted local journalists but are actually dictated by a shadowy, secretive corporation. This misleads viewers in an unfair way, creating the illusion of diversity while actually delivering the same message through many mouthpieces across the country.

Jackie	Hong	Gilbert	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Wood	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Brooker	Plainfield	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeline	Sprague	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Vana	Casa Grande	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katelyn	Cunningham	glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mackenzie	Cox	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Risa	Wallach	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Marino	Johns Island	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christian	Westphal	High Rolls Mountain	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Gay	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Carman	Saratoga Springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hodder	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Covert	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Cole	Warren	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Schechter	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Richards	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Thompson	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Loving	Sparks	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Philippe	Schleret	n. potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Thayer	Commerce Townshi	Michigan

The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donne	Richmond	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marylee	Meagher	Pembroke	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Grace	North Olmsted	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Canterbury	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Curtis	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Lee	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Steinfeld	Santa barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kent	Wright	Waterloo	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Wehrer	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisa	Canning	Harvard	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Munitz	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Taylor	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Canice	Lawler	N Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Oscar	Spear	Topanga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Rogers	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Flick	Cimarron	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	VanMeter	Paw Paw	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mostyn	Thayer	Port St Lucie	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Kelley	Los Gatos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Zarate	Suffolk	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjel	Zaldivar	Brick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Craig	Osseo	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Goodin	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janelle	Peters	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Lyon	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Archbold Andrs	Corona	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kate	Graham	Seligman	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marty	Brown	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lopamudra	Mohanty	Saint Peters	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Self	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Luke	Steichen	Renton	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stein	Malvey	Sun Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wesley	Vandegrift	Glassboro	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Gulick	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nya	Garvin	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

katrina	walter	Oakland	California	This is OUTRAGEOUS. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The FCC should be investigating Sinclair, not allowing them a broader platform!
William	Montgomery	Pottstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Abuelghanam	Columbia	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriela	Frank	Boonville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Shumski	Warrington	Pennsylvania	As a former journalist, I feel strongly that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. With newspapers going out of business at a rapid rate, it is now more important than ever to assure that the remaining news media retains the ability to make independent decisions based upon the best interests of their local customers.
Jackie	Hartstein	Milton	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G	S	Canton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julianna	Chitwood	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ariana	Rodriguez	Santa Ana	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tasmin	Gardner	Pocatello	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianne	Wokeck	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lopamudra	Mohanty	Saint Peters	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Hill	Durant	Oklahoma	I am very concerned about the prospect of a Sinclair-Tribune merger, which would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Michael	Fuchs	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jake	Davidson	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
R	Catana	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Cruz	Carol Stream	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Heckel	Clemmons	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Harvey	Cary	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Hilker	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Danziger	Sherman oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marge	Schwartz	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marta	Fuentealba	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Isabel	Fuentes	Hazleton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

olivia	cullen	Homosassa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Doc	Pierce	Ojai	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carllynn	Allen	Warren	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Prendergast	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albert	Cobian	Ephrata	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Yules	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisabeth	Aaron	Swarthmore	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Hemm	Manahawkin	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Becker	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Easthope	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Palmer	Baker City	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Winnie	Holzman	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mithun	Chaubey	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kent	Morris	Fullerton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Carrell	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Virginia	Wadsley	West Des Moines	Iowa	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not allow a Sinclair-Tribune merger which would be a threat to our democracy and contradict the FCC's own policy of no single company being allowed to reach more than 39% of households. The unprecedented size of the proposed conglomerate and the political bias Sinclair imposes on its stations would stifle the diverse voices of free speech protected by the First Amendment, adding to the alarming fascist trend now occurring in our country. It would also undermine the SCOTUS 1969 ruling in Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC which calls for diversity in broadcasting.

The FCC must carry out its purpose of ensuring that the American people can be fully informed by our diverse voices under principles

Rose	Ernest	Tavares	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Hughes	Westland	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Davies	Schaumburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Priya	Rao	Edina	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Arnal	St. George	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Manno	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Henry	Hartung	Bethel Park	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Evans	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emelie	Hebert	Madison	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Guadalupe	Cano	El Cerrito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

alice	siegfried	Oneonta	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianna	Dougherty	Fallbrook	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephany	Creamer	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	McVey	Nederland	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Berreth	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Smith	West Haven	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Baab	Middlesex	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Arnal	St. George	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Avi	Burg	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Kimball	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Zuidema	Robbinsville	New Jersey	When a single person or entity has control over the information the public sees free speech no longer exists. For democracy to exist the people must have access to a variety of viewpoints. The supreme court recognized this in 1969 with the Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC ruling. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate that would have unprecedented control over the public access to information. Past actions by Sinclair have shown that it will use its power to control what the public sees. The FCC has policies in place to prevent this kind of stifling of free speech, it is extremely important, especially in this case, that these policies be enforced. For the FCC to fail to enforce its own policies in this case would be a dereliction of its duties and a severe blow to the principals of democracy in this country. The people deserve, and must have, access to a variety of viewpoints. I urge you to uphold long standing policies and block
Jim	Farrell	Fairbanks	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Smith	Melvindale	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Cooper	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regina	Leeds	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Bloom	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Webb	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Therese	Stanley Tatol	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Weston	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hayley	Patterson	VICKSBURG	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deb	Compton	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Derek	Koloditch	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Geffner	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Chiapello	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Burrier-Lund	Prescott	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evan	Pritchard	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Murray	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Becky	Andrews	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Barrett	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Corey	Dahl	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yvonne	Venuti	WOODLAND HILLS	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Megan	Creutzburg	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Warner	Angel Fore	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Takacs-McCombs	HAZEL PARK	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richey	Scott	Lynchburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Ackerman	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Hewitt	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Herbert	Seal Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaime	Jenett	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lise	Weisberger	Skokie	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debi	Hughes	Reseda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mohsen	Shenas	Whitewright	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cate	White	Manteca	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monique	Comacchio	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Cunningham	Adkins	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhys	Smoker	Bellingham	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Concetta	Simas	Port Jefferson Statio	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Wolaver	Grass Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elspeth	Harris	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miriam	Abramowitsch	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Russum	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Childs	Miranda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn M	Bradley	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Colwell	Pinckney	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Zeller	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Daily	Robbinsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andree	Dailey	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
MICHAEL	Jablow	SHERMAN OAKS	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abigail	Langer	Shoreham	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Silton	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Kresojevich	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Andrews	Mendocino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robie	Liscomb	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jamie	Cooper	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kirchner	FORT WAYNE	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louise	Abel	Medford	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Spencer	Green	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	Rauhouse	South Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mrigendra	Steiner	Los Altos Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louis C	Harris Jr	Cherry Hill	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Carty	Warwick	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Schreiber	Winter springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Innelli	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gwen	Clark	Edwardsville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gilbert	Blount	San Clemente	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Buxton	Whitehall	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Madden-Bentle	Silver Springs	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Gleicher	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Biswas	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawn	Tabai	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Bercovitz	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Pitcher	Richardson	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robyn	Thompson	Culver city	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joey	Barbee	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

NANCY	BEJA	COLUMBUS	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Kozdron	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Glickman	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Fishel	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Fernandez	Baldwin Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Gaudette	Manchester	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Geer	Willow Springs	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Elton	Melbourne	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abigail	Warner	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trish	Pottersmith	Lafayette	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mercedes	Moore	Clearwater	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynda	Pauling	Stillwater	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Soeren	Johnson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Cohn-Jalbert	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Blackman	Playa Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Thompkinson	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dominik	Lobkowicz	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Bieri	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Lewitt	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Watkins	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gordon	Ginsberg	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Lazarus	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Brunt	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wee	Yee	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Betancourt	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Stinstrom	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Hall	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Townsend	Pittsford	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Adkins	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alison	Goodnow	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dara	Murray	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Oliver	Dublin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Arnal	St.George	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lorna	Wells	Binghamton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Robinson	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	Rooney	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Szostek	Fair Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Williams	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

R. Terry	Lyon	Taylor Ridge, Illinois	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	West	Silver Spring	Maryland

The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block the merger of Sinclair and Tribune. If permitted, this merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Susan	Shields	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Hill	Laguna Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Keller	Milbridge	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Kirchman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Cook	Corte Madera	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. This bias is so pervasive, that Sinclair has recently been caught dictating scripts to its news anchors. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stacia	Yeapanis	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ivna	Gusmao	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Weinstock	Oberlin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Kunitake	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Walsh	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Jackson	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Holt	Murrells Inlet	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth	Morrison	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Vinciguerra	Germantown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Goodwin	Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Hart	Mountain Brk	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Davis	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yvonne	Venuti	WOODLAND HILLS	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Kurata	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Varun	Deedwaniya	Poughkeepsie	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danny	Eiden	San Francisco	California	As always, the ACLU's pre-written message is fantastic. As a result, I'm leaving it below. In addition to their note, I'd like to add that the FCC should be ashamed for even considering allowing this merger. The idea of a national corporation owning nearly a quarter of all local news stations and dictating their reporting is appalling. Such concentrated power in media cuts against public interest and the American value of having a free and diverse press. Editorial power at that level is tantamount to country-wide censorship. It cannot be allowed.
Dveera	Segal	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Gross	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hiroshi	Mori	Rancho Santa Fe	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Pearson	Oak Brook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alicia	Cassity	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Modifica	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must block this merger now!
suzan	fezzuoglio	Maspeth	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Rabb	Williamsport	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joel	Huber	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Loretta	Kane	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Levesque	Lewisville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bodo	Germantown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Kean	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Laborde	Colorado Springs	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dylan	Lee	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	B	Kimberton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Meskers	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Haslett	Williston	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gabriella	Johnson	Kent	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Pauley	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joey	Weitzel	Tracy	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Kaye	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Hayes	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melony	Paulson	Diamond Bar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Willa	Fox	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Barabe	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
pat	ichinoe	Mount Angel	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Baran	Astoria	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Cohen	Lake Oswego	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eliska	Rejmankova	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Dingwall	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	White	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Gordon	Carrboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marg	Tobias	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jennifer	Reed	Coal Valley	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do the right thing, block this merger!

Pat	Thompson	Roseville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Armer	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Cope	Coral Gables	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheri	Garrison	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Kennedy	West Wildwood	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Friedman	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Hammar	Ocala	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Macconaugha	Anchorage	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Floyd	Clark	Modesto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M.	Kamath	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Burns	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Horn	Chesterfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Hill	Fostoria	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Sands	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Hendrickson	Garwood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Coppola	Elmhurst	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

T	Baus	Jersey City	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Backlund	Fairbanks	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Norton	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phillip	Cripps	Cathedral City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carson	Cohen	Van Nuys	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Collins	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Goldberg	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Levy	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noyan	Tulmen	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Battista	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Earlene	Newcomb	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwen	Gubeli	Gloucester	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Gomolka	Brunswick	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valerie	Chereskin	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candice	Lowery	Mount Vernon	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leisa	Stamey	Candler	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Muller	Laguna Niguel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Ali	McKinney	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Kay	Foster City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Franck	Highland Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Tofsted	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	White	Hutchinson Island	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Siegel	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Susan	Repplinger	Johnston	Iowa	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger is a dangerous threat to Freedom of the Press. The President has voiced his support of Sinclair and made clear his opposition to any media source which disagrees with his policies. It is imperative that the FCC block this merger which would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, contradicting the FCC's own policies. Free speech and diversity of views in the press and in the airways are essential for a healthy democracy.

Vivian	Corraino	Pinecrest	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Sumler	Dolan Springs	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Tisinai	Longmont	Colorado	As an American, I prefer to choose my sources of information. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I value democracy very much. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of American history and block this merger.
Alison	Manchester	Sedalia	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Blair	Cambridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alison	Brueggemann	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abbie	Wilson	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Lamb	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Burden	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

marta	shannon	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jo	Schillaci	Telluride	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
colleen	corbett	Eastampton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Schroeder	Dummerston	Vermont	Please stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger! There are parts of the country already where news stations are censored or forced to air untrue statements. The merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tracy	Pierson	Wilmington	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	McDaniel	Kaaawa	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Caryn	Dieter	Waterville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Hartshorne	Chula Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda Lux	Striman	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ginger (Virginia)	Donohue, LCSW-R	Hudson Falls	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Gomolka	Brunswick	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Sander	Stillwater	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Hanson	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Douglas	Virginia Beach	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose Mary	O'Connell	Windsor	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Bickel	Winfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley Jane	Coelho	Cockeysville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lilia	Manguy	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Hill	Ft Myers Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melinda	Dunker	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Clausen	Springfield	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Ettinger	SCOTTSDALE	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dustin	McCarthy	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Gomolka	Brunswick	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roozbeh	Kiani	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Ejnes	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Krugly	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Taenzer	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Truesdale	Estes Park	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen Wayne	Best	Hernando	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Davis	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Whitmore	Portland	Oregon	This would be a terrible blow to free speech.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Janet	Maker	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patti	Baker	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mari	Matsumoto	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Huggins	Aurora	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nonato R.	Crespo	Midwest City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Orr	Wyomissing	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rev Marcia	Urban	Des Plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miranda	Bryan	Woodbury	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Roberts	Apple Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Van Loan	Ionia	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Tivol	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah Lee	Chill	Yucaipa CA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Najemy	Albany	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Machin	Redondo Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Schwartz	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Lamb	Robbinsdale	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vickie	Sturgeon	Stillwater	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Okerson	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Coughlin	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Dixon	Wilsonville	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Hauck	Northridge	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Mile	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ruckh	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Ansell	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail	Steinhart	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Showalt	Fernandina Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruno	Greselin	Peru	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Todd	Fairborn	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Pudil	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	McKeown-Gallicho	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ingrid	Lofgren	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Risucci	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristal	Ellison	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Frederick	Edison	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debby	Evans	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherman	Marcia	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Malone	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Boynton	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Shepherd	Cedar Falls	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Hatch	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Paris	Marion	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	Spencer	Long Beach	California	The right-wing argument that our media is corrupt with 'Fake News' couldn't be further from the truth. Our President lies in his Tweets and interviews with almost every breath. I have not seen, nor heard any compelling arguments that dispel the accuracy of our medias reporting, nor any justification proving that the truth in reporting are, in fact, lies or fake news. Right-wing news stations, such as FOX News, continually use "alternate" facts...anything to cover-up Trumps lies and misinformation.
Timothy	Nobles	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Englund	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	McMillan	Warwick	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Russell	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Brault	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Verwiel	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Eccard	Kailua Kona	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia Marina	Martinez	Corona	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nora	Canales	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Herbers	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Van	Butler	South Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Harper	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shapiro	Irving	Cypress	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shari	Leinwand	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Micheau	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Long	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Willard	Greenville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

V.	C.	Bethel Park	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Stout	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Cummings	Springfield	Missouri
Pamela	Stein	Salt Lake City	Utah	Stop this merger. A conservative media monopoly is the last thing th A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Fiedler	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Kelley	Nipomo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Leonaard	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	Beck	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Bowne	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Booth	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sigrid	Bergie	Shadow Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clayton	Creekmore	Sun City	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Britton	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Schira	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Shannahoff-Khalsa	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Redwine	North Richland Hills	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cndy	Meyers	Capitola	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Chatman	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Tunder	Woodacre	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Cox	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruby	MacDonald	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Walter	Galloway	West Greenwich	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Shannahoff	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandy	Levy	Sherman Oaks	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abra	Sonnanstine	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bridget	Whitley	HARRISBURG	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Talley	Round rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laverne	Williams	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Heston	Hayward	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Foster	portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Doty	Belding	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Hung	Catlett	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Groebner	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Lister	Chester	New Hampshire

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Parsons	League City	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Byrne	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Benson	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Wilson	Shady Side	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philippa	Lindwright	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caitlin	Danborn	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Bowron	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Colin	Hart	Purcell	Oklahoma	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vincent	Bausano	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Letitia	Mason	Corona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

olivia	gaddini	Rancho Mission Viej	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Marculescu	Lincoln	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Gallina	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	McNally	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myron	Meisel	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Miller	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Kennedy	Chevy Chase	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Boyce	Booth	Hendersonville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Keenan	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregory	Dean	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Gutierrez	Montclair	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merritt	Tilley	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Paige	Florissant	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Ousley	Warrenton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Vandendaele	Gladstone	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Carlton	Sterling	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Avis	Ogilvy	Gaithersburg	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Nash	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Cooke	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Dall'Orso	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Sarabia	Stockton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Tran	Santa Ana	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Bien	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Longballa	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J.	Ackerman	Apple Valley	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Carlson	Tuscaloosa	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabrielle	S	Kensington	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	Constable	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Gorwin	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Craig	Parker	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Holmes	Fairbanks	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Duff	Franklin	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Bien	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Cavenaugh	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Spaccarotelli	claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Shepherd	Greenwell Springs	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Thomas	Moscow	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Pascoe	Rocklin	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Haslag	Centertown	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dwain	Jones	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Cundy	Custer	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Toth	Salt Lake Cty	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Washick	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Cammack	Abilene	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Gisbrecht	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	McG	Polk City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harvey	Natalo-Lifton	Spring Hill	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Colleran	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Mandel	Fishkill	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
T.	Dahlin	Modesto	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				This has nothing to do with Left v. Right. You may like the political s

First name	Last name	San Diego	California
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nora	P	La Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Reiser	Silver Lake	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Bachman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Robinson	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Sikora	Gibsonia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Eleveld	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tanya	Moskun	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Wilson-Koerschen	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Whalen-Sanders	Des Plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	McBride	Lombard	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Caccamo	Randolph	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kata	Orndorff	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Garcia	Maricopa	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Howerton	Oro Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Bachman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Flowers	Redford	Michigan	Stop this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Weidman	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

debbie	nelson	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Morse	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cari	Zalkin	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Knutsen	Naknek	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

anne	gaydos	Green Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Anderson	Chugwater	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Waters	Voorhees	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Lovacheff	Deerfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Spence	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Beery	Fishers	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Nigh	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Cohen	Garden City South	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	LeCouteur	Middleburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Brown	Green Cove Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doris	Whitfield	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Molly	Lazarus	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danelle	Mann	Redmond	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Renee	Corvo	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josh and Zoe	Loeb	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Spears	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Rosenblad	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Martin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eliza	Fraga	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D. A.	Bozyk	Williamsport	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dwayne	Munar	Waianae	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Stowe	Trabuco Canyon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amber	La	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samantha	Watier	North Smithfield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

D. L.	Wood	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carole	Emerson	Newport News	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Aschettino	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
A.	Srinivasan	Altadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Wyne	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emelie	Neher	San Bernardino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Brookman	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Mudrick	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mandy	Barre	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This is a dangerous precedent and must be turned down! It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
jonah	rodrigues	Los Angeles	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Rosen	Fairfax	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anselm	Berrigan	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Flowers	Redford	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Putzell	Crown Point	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Boortz	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Bachman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Poplin	Round Lake Heights	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

elizabeth	forbrich	evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Hirth	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Lono	Hayfork	California

The FCC must refuse the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger! This would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

The FCC’s own policies state that a single company can’t reach more than 39 percent of households with a TV. The Supreme Court established the importance of diversity in news coverage in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Saira	Malik	Oakland	California	Ridiculous! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jewels	Marcus	Little River	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristan	Karinen	Alameda	California	It's grossly irresponsible to allow one media outlet the opportunity to influence the opinions of a majority of Americans, regardless of that media outlet's political leanings. The Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a captive audience of Americans with no other options to experience a diversity of viewpoints. A singular press is not just a threat to democracy, it is a violation of the fundamental principle of democracy - equal opportunity for all. It is also a violation of the mission of the FCC, thus it is your duty to prevent this merger from occurring. Should you choose to let the merger go forward, don't forget that the precedent you set can be used against your personal political convictions in the future. This is a dangerous path for everyone.
Deanna	Homer	Stillwater	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Justice	Waco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	McCurdy	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Cashman	Conway	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
courtney	kinsey	Homestead	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. To summarize what is stated below a merger of this magnitude would be unconstitutional! We might as well turn America into some form of dictatorship with censorship wide spread through your. It is in our rights to speak freely whether we agree or disagree with what Is said, It is oppressive to force journalist to speak and show what the government wants. There are stations for everyone to hear the news from there parties angle we don’t need to only see one side! “A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

e	uprich	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Farrell	Mount Vernon	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Kies-Lowe	Battle Creek	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ivan	Light	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leif	Jenssen	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lester	Earnest	Los Altos Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Schaem	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Todd	Brazda	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Thomson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandi	Gelff	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Putzell	Crown Point	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Carnahan	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Mitchell	Davidsonville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Lee	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Luban	NY	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Demsky	Pinckney	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Adolphe	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Flowers	Redford	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Lay	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol K.	Rusk	Brooklyn, NY	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Diehl	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Campbell	Pool	Mountain View	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Laurance	Dobbs Ferry	New York	Have you thought about the implications of having a single conglomerate that spins news and controls editorial content across a major portion of America? Have you seen the Deadspin video and reflected on what the implications? A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Erick	Weber	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Sickel	Cypress	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Vedovi	Hidden Valley Lake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pauline	Bedford	Joshua Tree	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tonette	Bowen	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Dalsass	Long Branch	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eithne	Clarke	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MARTIN	PETROFF	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Peer	Independence	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Bachman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	Kirk	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russ	Ziegler	downers grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. PLEASE take public opinion into serious consideration on this issue.
Lisa	Beebe	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Danelle	Winship	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chelly	Glancy	San Luis Obispo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Garry	Utermohle	Fairbanks	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olivia	Fletcher	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bobby	Reagan	Bandera	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbra	Vogen	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	D	Smyrna	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosanne	Kwait	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Shepler	Newark	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Russ	Ziegler	downers grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Vedovi	Hidden Valley Lake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Wojciak	Harpersville	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Hirneisen	Mount Sidney	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Porter	Sherburne	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwen	Weber	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Albarran	Highland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Pearcy	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucy	O'Neal	eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Dolan	Mount Airy	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Don	Blau	Washingtonville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amalia	Wagner	Hamburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Binnie	Zoerner	Collbran	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Wojyn	West Palm Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ayse	Pinkerton	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Smith	Nevada City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Weidner	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles Rush	Rush	Pineville	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Torres	Carmel	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Boehm	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Madeleine	Newfield	Saint Charles	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Later	Woodbridge	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Kaveny	Trenton	Illinois

Since WHEN don't we have laws against monopolies?

Now, apparently. This is egregious.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Allan	Campbell	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nina	Kogan	Short Hills	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S L	Manson	Sun City	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
K.M.	Kowalski	Fairview Park	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would contradict the FCC's longstanding policies and create a TV broadcasting conglomerate that could drastically limit the points of view available to viewers. This would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias. Allowing the merger would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. If you take your responsibilities to carry out the law seriously, if you view yourselves as acting for the American public rather than special interest groups, then please do the right thing. Please block this merger.

Larry	Long	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Terrell	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Habern	Sedona	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita Brooks	Appelbaum	Wallingford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ernest	Hill	Monroeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edna	Sutton	Allen	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luci	Messing	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maia	Palileo	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Cooper	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Randall	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristen	Faughnan	Hopewell Junction	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Oliver	Astoria	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggie Jo	Vincent	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Schalk	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Judd	Green Cove Springs	Florida
Brian	Patrick	Thornton	Colorado

Please stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger. It is another step in a long t

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Waytes	Dexter	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Vedovi	Hidden Valley Lake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mera	Wolf	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Frankel	Lafayette	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Stong	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eve	Bell	Union	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Atheer	Kokaly	ELMHURST	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melanie	Cohick	Boiling Springs	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Juliana	Kailihiwa	Captain Cook	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Sennhauser	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Odette	Mc Millan	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Wong	Penn Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jimmy	mero	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Gerringer	Spencerport	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sage	Dahlen	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Colleen	Rost-Banik	Honolulu	Hawaii	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do not allow the Sinclair-Tribue merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natacha	Lascano	Rocklin	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Naumoff	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deirdre	Popplewell	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Mac Millan	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Ekvall	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
irene	lara	Chula Vista	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Sweeney	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Benson	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Gragg	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Shannon	Benaitis	Darien	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It is already difficult enough to find truly independent news sources, or at least ones that still operate in the realm of provable facts. This merger would make that even more difficult if not impossible. How is this not an Anti-Trust issue and a merger that should be blocked by regulators? We want choices and perspectives, not talking heads and state-sponsored media.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and

Ethel	Ruymaker	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Mattes	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olga	Straka	NYC	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Brantley	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Robinson	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Simon	Levy	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Stock	Pacifica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
H G	Picher	Keaau	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Becker	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Kim	Fullerton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Hayes	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Kittelson	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Gulledge	College Station	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Lubs	EL SEGUNDO	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Whitley	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Kowsky	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Later	Woodbridge	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bob	Kucera	Chicago	Illinois	THE NATION'S PRESS SHOULD BE IN THE HANDS OF A DIVERSE GROUP OF CITIZENS AND NOT A LARGE CORPORATION! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Gil	Medovoy	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Walter	Boyd	Van Buren	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Martin	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Pat	Wilson	San Diego	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rick	Klotz	Bluffton	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
john	mcclure	Deming	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Barton-Maycock	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Lundstedt	Brecksville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Kehoss	Arlington	Virginia
Anthony	Dios	Cliffwood	New Jersey	I strongly encourage the FCC to block the Sinclair merger, as it woul A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irene	Lutz	Canyon Country	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Semrau	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Brisson	Liverpool	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	C Kilbourne	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Diamond	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Torin	Brine	mansfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Travis	Womack	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Carrillo	El Paso	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Schneider	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisabeth	Genaux	Juneau	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Lerch	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brita	Skarbrevik	Plantation	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gordon	Ostrowski	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Cleary	Alamo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patti	Ivry	Katonah	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terry	Ruthrauff	Williamsport	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Owens	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This merger would be a major threat to the United States as a free
David	Henry	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erwin	Reschke	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sarah	Lockhart	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history for once and block this merger. Hopefully public comments will actually have an effect and the FCC will do their job in upholding the will of the public, even though they were thoroughly disregarded when net
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Moss-Racusin	Coventry	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Giardina	La Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Lencina	Amherst	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Fischoff	Silver City	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Campbell	Mendocino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Conner	Pompano Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Schmitt	Joshua Tree	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Burns	Vernon Rockville	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Johnson	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Fryburg	East Lyme	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Robbins	Grand Junction	Colorado

Please stop the expansion of the Trump propaganda machine!

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Liner	Annandale	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Williams	Meriden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Boland	Paauilo	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Chung	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theresa	Galvin	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Laske	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Gooding	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Swinehart	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shelby L.	Hood	Franklin	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia Ann	Kearns	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas M.	Davies, Jr.	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danette Baker	Haley	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Petrich	Oak Lawn	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Watkins	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Devine	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Goodman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Wickersty	Monroeville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Hanlin	Amherst	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
linda	alwitt	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mel	blackburn	Westfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noel	Yates	Guerneville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hubert	Miller	Upper Black Eddy	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Haas	Ripon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hubertus	Raben	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susie	Trenka	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janis	O'Reilly	Denver	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Annie	Chung	Belmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Halperen	Tustin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emma	St Louis	Woodbury	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	McCracken	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianne	Wells	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Reilly	CRANFORD	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Walsh	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Burke	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Hull	Waipahu	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Schioppa	Toms River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Nelson	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Bridgewater	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill S	Plotkin	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Patterson	Ukiah	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Stadelman	Ashland, OR	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Font	Palm Desert	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janie	Macfarland	Bisbee	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Ferguson	Boulder	Colorado
William	Koch	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would bring us one step closer to a state-r A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Mills	Sierra Madre	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sona	Rejebian	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Gura	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helen	Johnson	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeline	Bethard	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Gilson	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Goldman	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanine	Sande	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Evans	Forest Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paula	Yanez	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Resnik	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
steven	shields	Van nuys	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Schaack	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Taylor	Houlton	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Metzker	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dian	Lopez	Morris	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ronald	smith	Mitchell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krista	Harris	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Golze	Hood River	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Faith	Zinner	Vestal	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Romanski	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Troy	Bidwell	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Young	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
RICHARD	Smith	Rockville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayne	Barth	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Israel	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	J	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosemary	Ellis	Portland. OR	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kat	Miller	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bridget	Burns	Annapolis	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyssa	Hopper	San Leandro	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Jewell	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Ciochetto	Brandon	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wilfred	Von Zastrow	Bloomfield Hills	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

HOWARD	GOLDMAN, MD	Miami Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Myrna	Swart	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Silverman	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Dennis	Candler	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Spear	Phippsburg	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Knittle	Nitri	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Brendel	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ilona	Wall	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bronwen	Grebe	Castaic	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Schneiderman	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Doepker	Tiffin	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susie	Duckworth	Oakton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Paulsen	Eden Prairie	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brandy	Hamblet	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	O'Brien	Wells	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Crolwley	Astoria	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Hauss	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Perea	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Matthews	Skokie	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Anna	Quarles	Ashland	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do not allow this merger. It would be an extremely dangerous step towards a state run, propagandist network. There are already too many opinion channels posing as news networks.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Jean	Molentin	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Marquart	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Harding	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawn	Kosior	Canfield	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanie	Glockner	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jon	Schladen	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherri	Roberts	Petersburg	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Johnson	Glendale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Savitt	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Murphy	Windsor	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doreen	Gounaris	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Alper	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Dantzic	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	Riedman	Mcminnville	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Villarreal	Wake Village	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Varady	Perry	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kayne	Ferrier	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				There is already too much media control by this Administration and this ountry USED to have laws against monopolies.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this
Michael	Briney	Naugatuck	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

S. LaVerne	Coleman	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Seely	Jensen beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gallegos	Nancy	Round Rock	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Passon	Kihei	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Gouge	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brita	Dallmann	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sigrid	Swinehart	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cory	Davis	Duluth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Rimby	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Armstrong	E Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Hazeltine	Key West	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Blomseth	Rohnert Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Lange	Santa Ana	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Loney	ROUND POND	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Blake	Lemons	Knoxville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Cassianna	Myrtle Point	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

NC	ross	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Much	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Weiner	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Genevieve	Gates	Culver City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan Hollis	Merritt	Keuka Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, using corporate pressure to prevent the free dissemination of factual information and alternative viewpoints. Thus, this merger could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betsy	Nash	Menlo Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Rubin, MD	Marlton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Cross	Montgomery Village	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Santucci	North Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julian	Green	Spartanburg	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Stokes	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosalia	Arroyo	Dana Point	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Hobbs	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen and Alex	Yezerets	Columbus	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lourenco	Aguiar	Castro Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dana	May	Garden Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	McGrath	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tiffany	Wood	Park City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	McDonald	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sabrina	Gotor	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Porembski	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roslyn	Jones	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarahbeth	Grossman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	St. George	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elise	Green	New York City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Goldhammer	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Williams	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Corey	Schade	Loch Arbour	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Horst	Cuchara	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lakin	Khan	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Weeks	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Knutson	St Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ramona	Ferreyra	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Sauvageau	Seneca Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Samuels	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	St. George	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Olson	Corvallis	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Jordan	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Hinds	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Zapata	Douglas	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Elliott	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Lawless	Lakewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gina	Bates	Apple Creek	Ohio	BLOCK THE SINCLAIR MERGER!! ALL LOCAL NEWS SHOULD BE COMPLETELY UNBIASED!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the
Rivka	Rachum	West Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lum	Henderson	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Kellerman	Augusta	Maine

If Sinclair did not push its political agenda onto its stations, I might f

Gregg	Elberg	San Anselmo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jaben	Cargman	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vera	Tallmadge	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	France	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirkpatrick	Hill	Fairbanks, Alaska	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Frank	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Worrell	White Plains	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucinda	Beckley	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faith	Hurley	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Rizzi	Buffalo	New York

Local news should be controlled by local powers. The monopolizati

Valerie	Auerbach	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Malcolm	Motley	Browns Summit	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Herman	Hillsboro	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vera	Tallmadge	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Park	Glenside	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geraldine	Lipov	sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	Shaphren	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Lesem	Burlington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathleen	rengertr	Unionville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Lauretano	Thomaston	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Jones	La Marque	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Bravo	Park Ridge	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Rivera	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C.A.	Linder	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Wagner	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Antonoff	Marietta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Jensen	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Surprise	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Lippitt	Bangor	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Goodhue	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Lederer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Geoffrey	Butler	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Gallagher	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Makler	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Crawford	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Hoffman	Cottonwood	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Nguyen	Norman	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Caitlin	Munoz	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Anderson	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eduardo	Sanchez	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilynn	Cruz	Plaistow	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Guild	Sherman Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Bates	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I STRONGLY URGE YOU TO REJECT THIS MERGER!!!
Beth	Willer	Westlake Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Van Wyke	Port Monmouth	New Jersey

We need more diversity, more local ownership, less control by concentrated wealth in the news media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would contradict the FCC's own policies, and further impinge on free speech by the non-rich, which is most of the US. Please don't allow the merger.

Sinclair's broadcasts consistently support the rich, and is against working class people, including hard-working immigrants, Afro-Americans, and Hispanics. Remember the Supreme Court's decision, Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC in 1969. I respectfully ask the FCC to block this merger.

Gabriel	Bobek	NYC	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Campbell	Key west	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charlene	Agabao	Vacaville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Mucci	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Hooper	Bartlesville	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Dawson	Milwaukee	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Clark	Orange	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Bergman	Rancho Santa Fe	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilynn	Cruz	Plaistow	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dylan	Hall	Lancaster	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clark	Jamison	Lawrence	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Albertson	Norwalk	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Linda	Bender	San Jose	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Please stop this merger !!!

Joan	Murray	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Wozenski	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sanford	Robbins	Newark	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gabriel	Bobek	NYC	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Perea	Madison	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Surprise	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Alexander	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Carnahan	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Flickinger	Lisle	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Lindner	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Bilsborrow	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Rawcliffe	Pleasanton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Bergman	Spring Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Schuster	Cortlandt Manor	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barry	Block	Little Rock	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malvina	Gregory	Orono	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Appel	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arlan	Martin	Coos Bay	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Roden	auburn	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
carol	lanigan	Brook Park	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Warren	Fee	Springfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathie	Livesley	Wasilla	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rich	Surdyk	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Johnson	LaJolla	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Gartland	Parker	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Hansen	W Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Martin	Woodacre	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erica	Burrows	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Johnson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ursula	Cohrs	Bay Village	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The FCC's own policies would be in jeopardy if a Sinclair-Tribune merger were allowed to happen. A TV broadcasting conglomerate of this unprecedented size and power would stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is needed for a healthy democracy to flourish - now more than ever!
				Sinclair's broadcasts show consistent, unwavering political bias. Yet diversity is a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must block this merger.

Saya	Russell	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Hughes	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

janis	aldridge	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vic	Goodman	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zurisadai	Rivera	Northridge	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanna	Davis	Lewisville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keyvan	Khajehnouri	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Hicks	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Macdonald	Suisun City	California	The media MUST remain neutral. Forcing media outlets to shill for Trump is about as Un-American as you can get. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
William	Claiborn	Venice	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Hirsch	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggy	McLeod	Weaverville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Gutiérrez	Rockford	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Stack	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sydney	Somerfield	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Davine	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Easton	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Newton	Cathedral City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Parker	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Wilkins	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn Sutton	Loos	Haverford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Rice	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Smith	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sayeh	Rafie	Woodland Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ho	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Ediger	Walton	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Taylor	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Nguyen	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Schaffer	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kay	Darwin	Coppell	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Kiernan	Bailey	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Renee	Ducker	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Adler	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Manville	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Cherubini	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	McPherson	El Cerrito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Morsberger	Chevy Chase	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jeanne	subotnick	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Lynch	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Poppen	Abingdon	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lander	burton	Los angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Cappiello	Kapaa	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherryl	Beamon	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Constance	Hildebrand	York	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Devine	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelby	Norris	Lantana	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cassie	Garbe	Bismarck	North Dakota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danny	Martinez	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Sleva	Seal Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Swinker	Winterville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candace	Griffin-Campbell	Irving	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elon	Michaud	Troy	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arnold	Haber	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	Poppel	Salt Lake Cty	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Roessel	Fort White	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We do not want state run media like they have in dictatorships! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aleksei	Grinenko	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Campbell	Costa Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Grace	Bell	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Pearson	Anchorage	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

miriam	trahan	Haiku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dede	Donahue	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Bartels	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cara	Euler	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Rice	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cory	McLean	Buffalo	New York
Marsha	Looney	Clarendon Hills	Illinois

Nobody should have that kind of power over the media.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nona	Weiner	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Burr	Leonard	Sausalito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Roy	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Please! Say NO to the Sinclair-Tribune merger!!

Stephen	Still	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Leah	Stables	Saint Augustine	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Hankin	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Blunier	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Fredkin	Monte Sereno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Walp	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Burr	Leonard	Sausalito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosalie	Riegle	EVANSTON	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	McCombs	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerry	Royse	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jim	Mack	Corona Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Kocher	sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Arkenberg	santa cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Destiny	Brown	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Levitt	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rich	Austin	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruby	Pan	RANCHO PALOS VER	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Mansbach	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Catherine	Leamy	Countryside	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Staggenborg	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mildred	Fryman	Tallahassee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

d	w	Wayzata	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Barthel	Albertville	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A merger of Sinclair with anyone will give them power over the

Scott	Miller	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Longstreth-Brown	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Davin	Peterson	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Johnson	Long Island City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mary ann	shaneen	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
FM	Hayashi	Coppell	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Zaremba	Bordentown	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julianna	Swent	Pleasant Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Demoss	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Mooney	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanna	Bortz	Laguna Niguel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Simmons	Haiku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise & Allan	Gilmore	New York	New York	A free press expressing a variety of viewpoints is vital to America. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Lampe	North Chesterfield	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sherry	baker trovas	Lawrenceville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sheila	Brandlon	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As citizen I urge you to represent me and all who treasure our free

Dianna	Holland	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shane	Johnson	Springfield	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Peterson	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Perrin	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Hurley	North Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nicola	Tannenbaum	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. No, no, no. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Butler	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Anne Marie	Janeway	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please don't allow something that would set back our right to a free press, especially during these times when we need media that will report what citizens need to know, not what a small group of corporate owners wants their employees to report. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Corry	Dastur	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Hornstein	Kitty Hawk	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristina	Bennett	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	McGregor	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Friedenberg	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
John	Schellenger	Denver	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle Americans' free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marti	Beeson	Olean	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julius	Anderson	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

E J	Heard	Surprise	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aida	Scott	Saratoga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	Griffin	Pavillion	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

karen	seavers	Westlake	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicolette	Teeter	Saratoga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Love	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daney	Dawson	Mendocino, CA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Hadden	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Spaziani	Amherst	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ranjit	Chacko	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Koehler	Excelsior	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Zwehl-Burke	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Auerbacher	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daphne	Hanford	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Scanlon	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Webster	Harwich	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Houseworth	Stevensville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Larson	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Grassi	Naples	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Karp	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Pandolfi	Oberlin	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Renee	Bruen	River Edge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Frissell	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Haugen	Underwood	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Steinman	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alva	Ackley	Fairfax	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Agnes	Gillespie MD	Placerville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Wilson	Oak Hill	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joslyn	Pine	Sea Cliff	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Parker	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Baldridge	Flourtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Stephanie	Hysmith	Charleston	West Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Look at your own policies and reject the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. We all make choices in where we search for the news, but the last thing this country needs is a large conglomerate forcing news stations to sing the same tune. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Tracey	Millard	Savannah	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Thompson	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christien	Gholson	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must block this merger.

Alex	Howe	Williston	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Reed	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	Rietzel	North Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	O'Neill	Presque Isle	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Kemps	Saylorsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sean	Wayland	Rohnert Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Weaver	Bisbee	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Campbell	Pomona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Burval	Hillside	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

CATHY	CRONIN	Schenectady	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Belknap	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gil	Copeland	York	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jacob R.	Raitt	Bridgeport	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I have been speaking out about this for quite a while. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Calderon	Bellwood	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Belknap	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Heidelmeier	Grand Junction	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Clevenger	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Martin	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies - for good reason. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I strongly urge you to deny this specious, monopolistic merger.
Donna	Bartlett-May	Spring Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Hoereth	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Schneider	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myra	Aronow	Haddam	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aimee	Myers	Madison	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	Blahaus	Homer Glen	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	Frome	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yamile	Marrero	Hollywood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mike	Miller Jr	Phila	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Kowalski	Cleveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Soper-Oakes	Hornell	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MIguel	Garcia	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanine	King	Fresno	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meg	Sandine	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Jennings	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terri	Brooks	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Silva	Fairfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Michael	Gwynedd	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mike	Miller Jr	Phila	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Kissinger	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nancy	Wood	Denver	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Our President should not be weighing in on FCC decisions President Trump has made clear, time and time again, that he's against freedom of the press – unless it's press in his favor. He once tweeted, "Sinclair is far superior to CNN and even more Fake NBC, which is a total joke." Guess which side he's on with this proposed merger? Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by Adam	Farkas	Chatsworth	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles T	Walsh	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Davis	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phoenix	Brown	Cliffside Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Netzow	Trinidad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Gradias	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Wallenborn	Roanoke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Current	High Point	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Dubas	Ontario	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Bianco	Tarzana	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

constance	rutledge	Rome	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Cavanaugh	Stamford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Stepansky	Woodland Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Shepherd	New Providence	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleni	Beja	Hoboken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Sahler	Gulfport	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kiva	Tidwell	Worthington	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Lustig	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Promis	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ginny	Yarmell	Lincolnville	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Loyd	Leicester	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Heffron	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Nielsen	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Madeline	McCarren	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hayli	Walker	Newberg	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Schmidt	Monroe	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack A	Serber	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerritt and Elizabeth	Baker-Smith	East Stroudsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Stiles	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Newton	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. Lew & Lois	Bishop	West Union	Iowa	The First Amendment is supposed to give us the right to free speech and a free press. A monopoly of news feeds a totalitarian state which is in conflict with our Declaration of Independence. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Lois	Sloan	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Rist	Worthington	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clifford	Smith	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Turner	Fort Myers	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Frazier	Oxnard	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Ellickson	Malibu	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Crystal Foster	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Walker	Newhall	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Carle	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Hankins	Aurora	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joyce	Flanagan	West Kingston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Atkinson	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shane	Lopresti	Port Orange	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

NICOLE	GUSTAFSON	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marissa	Hereso	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Veatch	Chatsworth	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashwini	R	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joby	McClendon	Ponder	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Janis	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Linkous	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meagan	Penney	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Hypki	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samantha	Gamboa	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Larrick	South Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Manley	Tarzana	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Ballerini	Folsom	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
CANDACE	Gazda	West Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Brennan	hammond Ranch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shirley	Sun	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Rothrock	San francisco	California

We need diverse media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Jones	San Pedro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gene	Bivins	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Taffet	Dana Point	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ted	Fishman	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melvyn	Nefsky	Marina Del Rey,	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robyn	Jacobs	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hilary	Forbush	Murray	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stefan	Tucker	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Berkowitz-Berliner	Mount Kisco	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Beyer	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Hosford	Tunbridge	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Villanueva	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Quique	Riojas Berazaluce	Bettendorf	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Cullen	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Manion	Kearney	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Lynch	Felton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cloene	Davis	Blue Springs	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chuck	Rocco	Simi Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Parker	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

corinne	braun	sausalito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dariush	Khadjenouri	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Saarinen	Hilo	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Gonzalez	Lake Forest	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evan	Reinhold	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Barron	Kissimmee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karla	Worrell	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Sayers	Durango	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Scheinman	Mission Viejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Oglesby	SAN JOSE	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Leighten	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gloria	Kapp	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shamaila	M	Irving	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Carter	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keiren	Bond	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Killoran	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Macey	Mott	Jackson	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Snouffer	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Cochrane	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomlerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Pryor-Lease	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Shaw	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimberly	Vacca	Chatsworth	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Bendetto	Glendale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Michael	Parkinson	Prosperity	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The FCC should NOT change their rules to allow this merger to happen. This merger would be motivated by a political agenda. That is not what the FCC is for. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Phillips	Two Harbors	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lisa	amico	Occidental	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Rosner	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Josh	Freeman	Brentwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kalyn	Livernois	Carrboro	North Carolina	As a journalism student who feels that journalism is the "watchdog of the people" and who seeks to tell the TRUTH in my work, I am deeply concerned at how destructive this merger will be to journalists and the public. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Robin	Craft	Plain City	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Roy	Goffstown	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Larson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Twelves	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Jordan	KANSAS CITY	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Franceschini	Santa rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kalyn	Livernois	Carrboro	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As a journalism student who feels that journalism is the "watchdog of the people" and who seeks to tell the TRUTH in my work, I am deeply concerned at how destructive this merger will be to journalists and the public.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Robert	Freidin	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremy	Young	Glendale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	White	Laguna Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregg	Bender	Charles Town	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We don't want or need a scripted press. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Meryweather	East stroudsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tuvya	Bergson-Michelson	San Carlos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Simonton	Fort Bragg	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D R	Spencer	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Green	Kula	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Kelley	Port Clyde	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Meyers	Des Plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ayesha	Vavrek	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Fuchs	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Dundee	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Allen	Snyder	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet D	Carter	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonora	Weimer	Bowie	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Walcott	Port Huron	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Bartos	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bobby	Belknap	Frankfort	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Rhodes	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Weinstock	Spokane	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Gruskoff	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Lange	Roseville	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherrie	Holmes	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Walstrum	Parkville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Cook	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Hall	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Janik	Hampton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Boshkov	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lary	Schiller	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Kolwicz	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Colbert	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Brown	Black Hawk	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Cyzner	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C	Abeyta	North PalmSprings	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Tchelka	West Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary Ann	Foxwell	Somerset	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Nockels	Crestline	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C.Jean	Boomershine	Urbandale	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Held	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Aragon	Provo	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Wagner	Naples	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra Franz	Phillips	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Hendricks	Palm Harbor	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Snigdha	Bobba	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anton	Camarota	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Young Hinck	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Hutchings	Wichita Falls	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Byars	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margie	Rosenblum	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bloxsom	Toronto	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Wardlaw	St Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dolores	K	Mission	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nora	Polk	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Bergener	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evan	Harris	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Winston	Woodland Hls	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Morado	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nadine	Duckworth	Taylorsville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myrtle	Bastien	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tristan	Harter	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Stratman	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Eaton	Middletown	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Healy	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Camilla	Field	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Nino	Corpus Christi	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gem	Bandy barteau	Edgewood	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessie	Ives	Lakewood	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessie	McDade	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Ellis	High Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erwin	Michel	Clearwater	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cameron	Lakenen	Marquette	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie-Elena	Mello	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Morgan	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
alvin	goldman	Denver	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Our media outlets have become ever more partisan. If we are to be able to carry on the public discourse needed in a democracy it is more important than ever that control of media outlets not be concentrated in highly partisan ownership such as that if Sinclair. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Marcile	Jones	Normal	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sandy	Schafer	Newberry	South Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. We need a more diverse media not larger conservation corporations! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Angela	Harvey	Valley Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynne	Higby	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Weber	Rimrock	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
We must ensure the health of our republic.

Noura	Elfarra	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for our country.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Francine	Diamond	Pacific Palisades	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Longan	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lenore	Maybaum	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brooke	Williams	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Larsen	Canton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Martin	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Jones	Golden Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cat	Yang	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlos	Cabezud	San Ysidro	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Wasser	Pound Ridge	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Pearce	Brentwood	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Monga	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Grogan	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Beversdorf	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Morrow	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma
James	Beck	McLean	Virginia

This is simple. We have a free press in this country. Any attempt to thwart the fourth estate either by merger or ideology would dismantle the trust placed in local and balanced news.

“Freedom of speech is a principal pillar of a free government: When this support is taken away, the constitution of a free society is dissolved,” wrote Founding Father Benjamin Franklin in The Pennsylvania Gazette.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	MacDonald	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Barocas	Cedar Grove	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Hager	Ashland	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanine	Malec	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Stewart	Pflugerville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Parkin	Lake Frederick	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Bindner	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Forbes	Hayes	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Farrah	Grant	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Georgiton	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Waid	Keene	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Berliner	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Iris	Wagner	Oak Ridge	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Grotch	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Wise	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Bowden	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Morlani	Cranston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wayne	Keck	San Clemente	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Crane	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Earl	Burton	Lithia	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. towards the news, rarely (if ever) demonstrating that it is a fair and accurate depiction of the news. Since the Fairness Doctrine was destroyed in the 1980s, there has been a steadily erosion of "news as information" outlets. They have instead become "propaganda" to prop up a regime that they agree with.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	McCurdy	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rusty	Dolleman	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Daugherty	Rancho Cordova	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Caudle	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dineen	Sigona	Lindenhurst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kay	Merica	Hope	Idaho	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The Russians invaded our air space before the 2016 election and meddled in our campaigns. By giving Sinclair an open mike to do the same thing .... broadcasting political propaganda

Peggy	Reeves	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Allison	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marlyn	Haber	Upland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Berton	Stevens	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Frank	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	G	Cripple Creek	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

P Jaine	Jacobs	Union	Maine
Christina	Nelson	Stockton	California

I write today to express opposition to the proposed merger of Sincla

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

CJ	RANSOM	COLLEYVILLE	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Klein	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Bygott	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Devlyn	Camp	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Knott	Hinton	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sherrie	mcmillan	University City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Alexander	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Travis	Atz	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Hammond	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Fowler	Annapolis	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Quaid	Riverside	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Nordstrom	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Fazzi	Apple Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Cole	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arica	Dawson	Holly	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Castiglione	Countryside	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Siegal	Topeka	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Sousa	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

EMILY	EIBEL	Tallmadge	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Bishop	Menlo Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Eisemann	Springfield	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Gathright	Lancaster	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Emery	La Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Troy	West	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Fericks	Park City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Clark	Grandview	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edith	Leary	Freeport	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Robert	Cruder	Elizabeth	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I have the choice to avoid news outlets owned by Sinclair. It is difficult enough to find sources which are not inadvertently biased but Sinclair is intentionally biased with must-show propaganda editorials. If the Sinclair-Tribune merger is allowed, there will be areas in which all significant news outlets are owned and scripted by Sinclair. That also means Sinclair can dictate what people believe and how they will vote. In a democracy, that is unacceptable. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Robert	Paulson	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Hillmer	Placerville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kurt	Cruger	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Holmes	Carbondale	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Marshall	Pacific Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger frightens me. Having a TV broadcasting conglomerate of such unprecedented size and power contradicts all that our country stands for. FCC's own policies are geared to thwart such a risk. We're a country that believes free speech and the support of divergent views is critical for a healthy democracy. The Supreme Court backs this right. Sinclair's broadcasts show no evidence of such support. Instead, they portray consistent, unwavering bias that is scripted by an authoritarian point of view. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynda	Bryson	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Hancock	Reidsville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Warneke	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Keevert	Rochester	New York	I am concerned that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It is already clear that Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Czekala	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Whitaker Emrich	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ben	Kalenik	manhattan beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Bray	Lawrence	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Pardini	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

AmyLeo	Barankovich	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Parry	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Isaacs	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Krista	Yurik-Zientara	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Vogel	Santa Clarita	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hertha	Schulze	Palm Coast	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neal	Baron	Fredericksbrg	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Josephine	Heino	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zsoka	Toth	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Wise	Erie	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqui	Deveneau	Old Orchard Beach	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	Pauza	Pacifica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Blank	Haines	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Linda	Montalbano	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. DO NOT ALLOW propaganda to infiltrate credible journalism! WGN is a beloved and trusted brand with integrity that will be trifled if this merger takes place. Protect our rights by preventing this merger!
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Cade	Gallal	San Clemente	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Lee	PHOENIX	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C.	Saunier	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Courtney	Wilson	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darrell	Neft	Costa Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
jennifer	thomas	columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mariana	Valdez	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Sonandres	Cave Creek	Arizona

Please block the Sinclair merger with Tribune media which violates t

C	Boomershine	Urbandale	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Childs	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Mock	Kensington	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Gerber	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

BETSEY	BRADA	PORTLAND	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rick	Dinihanian	PALM SPRINGS	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

RICHARD	GAMBLE	Palmyra	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marta	Phillips	Midlothian	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Nagle	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Levine	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Heinrich	FREMONT	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Norman	Illsley	Ft Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Lynn	Bala Cynwyd	Pennsylvania	We are on the cusp of a total fascist authoritarian government. If you think this extreme, you need to go back to George Mason University, the Kocks and their strategy to turn The United States into a 1% controlled government, the constitution without amendments. If you don't turn this down, you are complicit in taking down the country in this death and destruction administration.
lyric	apted	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Croke	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Kerrigan	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger disrupts the identity of small, local media. The local media will just be another national media.

I also watched a really interesting documentary about Sinclair, and their broadcasts are politically biased and not even-handed.

Beth	willer	Westlake Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Eckes	Castro Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

P.M.	Martin	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Russo	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Miller	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Lies	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randall	Lake	South Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Kubelka	AUSTIN	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Buddeberg	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Pentecost	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Moyer	Pottsville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Brown	Springfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Ragland	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Miller	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

F. Gene	Merica	Hope	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Martin	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Morrison	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Moore	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Moyer	Pottsville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carole	Silverstein	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Stoff	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alwen	Bauer	Palos Verdes Estates	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin J.	Gosztonyi	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Culver	Pleasant Hill	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Perry	Bard	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
caroline	ledford	hanahan	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Benson	Lebanon	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
David	Outteridge	Highlands Ranch	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. This is very bad for democracy. Please stop this merger.

David	Perkins	Oro Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Crysler	Pottstown	Pennsylvania

A diverse media is essential to keeping informed – the Supreme Cou

Jan	Welch	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marvin	Lehrman	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Goldstein	South Bend	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Millhollen	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Hesh	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jon	Krampner	Los Angeles	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We already have Faux News. We have the right-wing talk radio echo chamber. Unless you're a partisan hack of their ilk, why would you want to exacerbate this situation?
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Shelly	Clapp	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Migdalia	Jimenez	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Schneider	Tolland	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yehoshua	Rom	Campbell	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deb H	Cookingham	Silver City	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Neikirk	Troy	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Kranz	Marlton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Mcdonnell	Aliso Viejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Berson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Solis	League City	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Cunningham	Grants Pass	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Emmanuel	Guzman	Riverside	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. For the record I am a real American citizen and tax payer. I am not a bot, hacker, or spammer, nor was I when speaking out against removing title 2 classification for ISP.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Rolfe	Juneau	Alaska	Monopolies are not in America's best interests. This has been proven time and again. More competition is better for all parties and and especially consumers. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Daryl Ann	Neubecker	Farmington	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Amkraut	Palo alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Foreman	Farmington	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Schloessinger	Great Neck	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristin	Jacobs	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Rothman	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rolanda	Tubbs	Sugar Land	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Harrington	South Bend	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It absolutely would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech. By definition it would stifle the diversity of views in the press, the diversity that a healthy democracy demands.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias. That bias, like all bias, undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of democracy and history: block this merger.

Robert	Lucas	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Newton	New City	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Getty	Collinsville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

teresa	toolen	Saint Charles	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Marian	Sweeney	Austin	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is a scary proposition for free speech and health of the media. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger, PLEASE!

Susan	Richards	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemarie	Beedy	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Johnson	Alto	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry R.	Antila, Jr.	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Karasek	Aliso Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee Levin	Friend	Emmaus	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Gore	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russ	Lucas	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Witting	Tivoli	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Richards	Maugansville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amie	Corrado-Babe	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arthur	Rosenberg	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Berg	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Hand	Sterling Heights	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Reich	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	DeCapua	Glendale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Esten	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cherish	Chen	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Youn	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Johnna	Arnold	oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Byers	Durham	North Carolina
Kayte	Spector-Bagdady	Ann Arbor	Michigan	The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger would be a disaster and go ag A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Wineholt	La Porte	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linny	Stovall	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandra	Rethore	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Bennett	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Conlan	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brad	Cleaveland	Council Bluffs	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald Stuart	Moore	San Leandro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Chong	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Wright	Stone Mountain	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gina	Medsker	Alexandria	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The Sinclair-Tribune merger should NOT be approved. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vernita	Gutierrez	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Kennedy	Venice	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Kelly	West Caldwell	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Natalie	Fine	Pikesville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Mueller	Pownal	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Crist	Pacifica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Alan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Gibson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Kenney	Upland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lana	Schaffer	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Tata	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patti	Aleem	Bowie	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Locasio	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
damian	buffa	mount sinai	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Coburn	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Golden	Linden	New Jersey	BLOCK THE SINCLAIR-TRIBUNE MERGER! A diverse media is essential to keeping ALL Americans informed. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Bob	Conrich	Fort Lauderdale FL	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	McKaye	Richmond	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patty	Morris	Cape Elizabeth	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Bledsoe	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniela	Stokes	Poughkeepsie	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ketchek	Rochester	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Coen	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Miriam	Sarnoff	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harold	Craw	Chattanooga	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Gillis	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Christensen	Urbana	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Rutkin	Barryville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Heroux	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Vandiver	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Finazzo	Catonsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Goldman	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	R	Graham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanna	Brewer	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tinne	Van Loon	Saint Louis	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clare	Lipinski	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Rizzo	Bushnell	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Flato	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Welch	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Mathes	Rochester Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Daraio	Lake Worth	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Kendall	Lamy	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Drake	Chestertown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Chase	San Lorenzo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Lyman	Bethel Park	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Vazquez	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	hyorth	asheville	North Carolina
Jenny	Platz	Wakefield	Rhode Island

I urge you to block the Sinclair Broadcasting Group merger with Trib

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Halligan	Woodbury	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joe	Bongiorno	Valley Stream	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beatrice	Soutar	Montrose	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Rogers	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Amodeo	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Waters	Athens	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leanne	Perry	Saint Charles	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janis	Dairiki	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Breanna	Wilson	Costa Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Archibald	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte T	Tracy	Fairfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Peterson	Perham	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonja	Noring	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Arnold	Lombard	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Lave	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Ray	albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Reyes	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Greg	Silsbee	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Rigberg	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Pederson	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Mazich	Yorktown	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katrina	Michie	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Montesano	Martinez	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Hill	Morgan Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Hutchinson	Rogue River	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Yarrobino	Ozone Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Helen	Emmerson	Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mara	Feigelson	BELLMORE	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Landstad	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Kallas	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Quentin	Fischer	Roanoke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candace	Newland-Holley	Wilsonville	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Fegan	Pomona	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan Hale	Whitmore	Niagara Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	McDowell	Hudson	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barnsra	Vaughan	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pablo	Florian	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Brunkhorst	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Tierney	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Goldhaber	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Kaplan	DURHAM	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pawiter	Parhar	West Chester	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Violet	Gautesen Krukonis	Essex Junction	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Guertin	Green Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Gillman	Woodland Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
June	Higgins	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	O'Connor	Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leanne	Apfelbeck	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Gutierrez	Bakersfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melliny	Lamberson	Brooksville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Rogan	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ingrid	Porter	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Schlesinger	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Rushforth	Orem	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Thompson	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Garston	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay Lee	Willens	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cesar	Gonzales	Katonah	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Harbutt	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Zung	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vaughan	Shelby	Yorktown Hts.	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorie	Ham	Reedley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Brutocao	Napa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Wolff	Palm Coast	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Blythe	Dixon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Friedman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Skonberg	Wnchester	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ed	Lalor	Saint Cloud	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marybeth	Rice	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Terry	Gray	Las Cruces	New Mexico	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. Sinclair already controls 2 of the 4 stations available in my area. I compare the broadcast content between the 4 stations by watching them all at different times. There is no doubt that the 2

Rob	Veis	Pacific Palisades	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Zehala	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Myron	Mohr PhD	Van Wert	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Young	University Place	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert C	Wehr	Ellijay	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Siegelman	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Long	Grandview	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Witt	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

rob	johnson	columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Atwood	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Brech	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Hartmann	Albert Lea	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Rutherford	Staunton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noah	Blumberg	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Doyle	Steubenville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Paynter	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Galloway	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Wisniewski	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Till	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	O'Connor	Cupertino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Brown	Lafayette	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Flo	Conway	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Rummel	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Lokman	Studio City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Berg	Wailuku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Racine	Auburn Hills	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Harkness	Kent	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Doty	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Pope	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Manion Mulligan	Fountain Hills	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Calambro	Henrico	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Wheeldon	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Jeror	Saint Regis Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Brazier	Williamsburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Hoffmann	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stefanie	Gee	Capitola	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sylvia	tellez	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathan	Vogel	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Hintze	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Pringle	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Gardner	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Racine	Auburn Hills	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Brooke	Aiken	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William Gene	Periard	Maple City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Burczak	Granville	Ohio

Please consider carefully how a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Kelley	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esther	Boyd	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brad	Hoggatt	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Aldridge	Birmingham	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It also undermines free enterprise because Sinclair has not had to earn its way in the public square to have affiliation with the four major network operations. Viewers in the cities it proposes to gain footholds have been promised already to have their information controlled from outside. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Landry	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Andrus	Cortez	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremiah	Watkins	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Peterson	Northbrook	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Cikowski	San Luis Obispo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Effie	Fern	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Rapine	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Mustovich	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karole	Benson	Aurora	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Milton	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diana	Rowell	Florence	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teri	McCaskill	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Marder	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Watson	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Dragoumanos	Saco	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Rodgers	Jemez Pueblo	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Scholz	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Lauderdale	Plantersville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	White	Brooklyn	New York

The FCC should serve the interests of citizens, not corporations. A Sinclair / Tribune merger will dangerously restrict the spectrum of media options for a vast portion of the country, depriving millions of Americans of the ability to remain informed.

I urge the FCC to reject this merger, and to protect the rights of ordinary consumers to select the media provider of their choice.

Robert	Yeager	Venice	California	The consolidation of media is a danger to our democracy! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Audrey	Patton	College Station	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M.	Canter	Tiburon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Largent	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Chase	Fremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Gilmore	Dobbs Ferry	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Larew	Bristol	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Gartz	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emmanuel	Francisco	Fremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Parkinson	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Virgo	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Ridgeway	Scranton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Goggin	Hamburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margarite	Reynolds	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Faust	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nichole	Wilson	Orwell	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hattie	Hair	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Wright	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph C.	Ellett	Benicia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Kintner	Mishawaka	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Baker	Coral Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Kohn	Hinesburg	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Dedmore	Prescott	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
roger	lema	hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Nichols	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, which could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kurt	Rupprecht	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Shorser	River Forest	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J	Nickum	Fountain Hills	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Newman	New Paltz	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Mota	cloverdale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Mcgrath	Brookhaven	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aureen	Almario	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Cunningham	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawn	Heiser	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrill	Bobele	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Croy	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Cook	Thornton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gary	Lee	Palm Springs	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger should not be allowed. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech, something essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernie	Yu	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Novick	Old Lyme	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Flynn	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Ferrell	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Thomas	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Gibet	Montrose	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Wu	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Shorser	River Forest	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Boone	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Iris	Nasir	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tabitha	Petrini	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This is against the law and it is so so wrong. We're better than this. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Ruhloff	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	McEwen	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
N	Tashiro	LA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Schenk	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Saxton-Lopez	Ridgewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Greene	Mission Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mercedes	Montes	Sebring	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jared	Bottorff	Minooka	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nistasha	Perez	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabrielle	New	Poway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Soljaga	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Helms	Hazel Park	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaymeson	Catsouphes	Emeryville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Shaw	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Etta	Worthington	Forest Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Sims	Everett	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Kusnitz	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rowena	Kitchen	Lebanon	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Rubel	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

glenn	gemelli	New Meadows	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna Louise E.	Fontaine	Lantier, QC	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Miskell	East Brunswick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Barnett	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Naut	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Taylor	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	Kubelka	AUSTIN	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
TERESA	HEDANI	Pittsburg	California	Please stop this merger. Our access to fair and balanced news is under seige. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Nirenstein	Kentfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michele	Chavez-Pardini	Kamuela	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Khadder	winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
MARY	HOCK	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Harris	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Toizer	Kentfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Twomey	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Herbert	Ocean View	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr James L	Rowland	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Russell	Loma Linda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Flores	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean G.	Cochran	Pomona	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Toepfer	Saint Cloud	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Quint	Erwin	Los Angeles	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	North	Pebble Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Sims	Everett	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edith	Kaplan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Pedneau	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	O'Connell	Baltimore	Maryland

In one month Napoleon trimmed the number of newspapers from 73 to 13 following the Coup of 18 Brumaire.

Don't land on the wrong side of history. Don't let Sinclair violate the constitution.

Michael	Gaffney	Belmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annis	Cassells	Bakersfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Bierbaum	Alton	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Shofnos	Clarksville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	McClanahan	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Blume	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara-Jane	Wilson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristine	Chapin	Sain't Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Van Horn	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Paul	Turlock	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morris	Green	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Reeve	Grosse Pointe Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tad	Swackhammer	Cutler Bay	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tanya	Burkey	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Bowles	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maya	Nojechowicz	Arlington	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Albert	Somers	Johns Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Mullins	Dry Branch	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Farris	Hamwi	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Cook	Mill Valley	California

conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marisa	Gonzalez	Shavano Park	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helane	Weingarten	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Jackson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bethe	Goldenfield	Pleasant Plain	Ohio	I urge the FCC to deny the merger petition between Sinclair Broadcast Group and Tribune Media. Sinclair is already the country's largest broadcast company and if merged with Tribune Media, they would own stations that reach 72% of American households -- consolidating the power to decide what information reaches us into the hands of a powerful few.
Jim	Evans	Cincinnati	Ohio	Sinclair has a history of forcing local stations to air politically biased segments produced at their corporate headquarters rather than news that reflects the concerns and interests of the communities. I urge you to reject the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Reeve	Grosse Pointe Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
jake	culver	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This proposed merger exemplifies that which the FCC was created to quash in the first place! Get serious.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Elizabeth	Jacob	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert J	Barnhart	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bridget Mahoney	DePriest	Springfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Suzanne	Lee	Phoenix	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Yarno	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shannon and Joey	Jarmusz	Itasca	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	DeJager	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Salchli	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucinda	Roberts	Cornelius	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Daveiga	concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Luttrell	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Lyons	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merle	Solway	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joe	Goodwin	Pittsfield	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Wassell	Keaau	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jen	Tobias	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Richards	Arroyo Seco	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Maltenfort	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecilia	Hill	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brooke	Haid	Cheswick	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Anderson	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Nevill	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

WB	McKinney	Thomasville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Norman	Roberts	long island city	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Blitstein	Surprise	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaine	Maulucci	Conshohocken	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Wood	Saratoga Springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Corwin	Estancia	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This level of market power in one company that does not permit

Gary	Epis	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Daveiga	concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J Alexander	Vargo	Carmel-by-the-Sea	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Moreno	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenny	Kerr	Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Golub	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Kurmai	Monroe	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Young	Muncy	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Barrett	Englewood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C	Pawelek	Fairhope	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Strock	Torrance	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Osterhoudt	Rancho Santa Marga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Mitchell	Kurtistown	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Gilbert	Bellingham	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elissa	Thompson	Riviera Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michaline	LePaule	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Wimberg	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karl	Twombly	Palm Desert	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Franklin	Crabtree	Union	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Hayes	Leesburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Niemiec	Lisle	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Webster	Huntingtn Bch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jereece	McKee	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hamideh	Farimani	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tamara	chin	Providence	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Tyler	Georgetown	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Mathews	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maggie	Topalian	Chardon	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Bogardus	Novato	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Hayes	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Beynon	Cuyahoga Falls	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Fillin	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	McEnery	Greenwood Lake	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenn	Rocks	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Dawid	Monument	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Rice	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Brown	La Habra	California

This merger of Sinclair and Tribune would create a TV broadcasting Network wielding powerful influence not seen before in our country! And, it would contradict the FCC's own policies! It would impede our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Shachory	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Cole	Twentynine Palms	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeane	MacPherson	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Greenberg	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allen	Liou	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Armstrong	Fort Davis	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

shannon	finnegan	Cedar Rapids	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Hasings	Mariposa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Madeleine	Brown	Los Alamos	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Pliner	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aixa	Fielder	La, Ca	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Barmore	Little Falls	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Hanson	Wimberley	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Fend	Rochester	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maura	Ridge	AURORA	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rochelle	Grober	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
steve	andresen	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Carter	Boulder City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Daveiga	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aixa	Fielder	La, Ca	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Muehlhof	Conshohocken	Pennsylvania

The Sinclair/Tribune merger poses a serious threat to the future of

Sarah	Rusnak	Westerville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Patton	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Koger	Woodbridge	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Flores	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jose	Guardado	Reseda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Preston	Elrod	Gloucester	Virginia	I am very concerned. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

gabi	edwards	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	O'Keefe	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Bronk	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Troy	Vegeler	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Voorhies	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacomina	Newman-Osmon	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Arnold	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Zirpolo	Ramsey	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosie	Hill	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tal	Allweil	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Davey	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Behrendt	Oneonta	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arnold	Ponce	Woodburn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Carbone	Haddonfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Kindland	Cannon Beach	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
L	W	Gresham	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Hoeffler	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Cole	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kelli	bourne	laguna niguel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Wippman	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Kramer	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Dipace	Scotch Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Samis	Rancho Palos Verdes	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monique	Edwards	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Schoonaert	Michigan City	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
BRENT	KOEHLER	EXCELSIOR	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Notaro	Colonia	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Josephs	Jacksonville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Harvey	Kings Mills	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
edward	irvine	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Van Leuven	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monique	Edwards	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Munson	Oxnard	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paige	Ziehlermartin	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Bateman	Talent	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jason	Schober	Evanston	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jody	Sackmann	Pearce	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Oliver	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Hayes	Leesburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonio	Lomeli	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Ericksen	Piedmont	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Sarrett	Tempe	Arizona	Protect free speech! The Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Spencer	Duluth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frances	de Usabel	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frieda	Caplan	Los Alamitos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Greaney	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Shapiro	Hays	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	McKean	YUMA	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brenda	McVey	Weaverville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Kipp	Granville	Ohio	Sinclair Broadcasting is not a credible news source due to their A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Witt	Rowlett	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeane	MacPherson	Sonoma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Miller	San Juan Capo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
H Ellis	Griffin	Poughquag	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Nubel	Clive	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Homer	Lubbock	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ducker	Ypsilanti	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jack	Webster	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erik	Sandvold	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Williams	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Bachelder	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sandra	marr	Guilford	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Hilton	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Gordon	Anderson	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Davies	Tigard	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Schaffer	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G.W.	Cheney	Boone	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary-Beth	Winn	saratoga springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Pantell	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Ramos	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wanda	Webber	Brunswick	Maine	Don't allow it! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helene	Zera	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Wilson	Fair Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Lippert	Broomfield	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mary	henderson	Story City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Care	Boonsboro	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Davison	Idyllwild	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melinda	Cespedes	Medford	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gilbert	Mendelson	Kailua	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Burke	S Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Gee	Carrollton	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Hicks	East Meadow	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Shirk	Peoria	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Barhydt	Norfolk	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glen	Moy	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Daniel	Hilton Head Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Sales	Birmingham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Corey	Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Galler	Conroe	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bryna	Hellmann	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rod	Yabut	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tina	Benson	Lebanon	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Garrett	Clearwater	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Selbin	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. The merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Haviland	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Dougherty	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merilie	Robertson	West Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lorraine	triolo	S Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dimer	Orland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Boswell	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Reed	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
West	Smith	Ojai	California	I WILL NOT WATCH ANY STATION THAT HAS ANYTHING TO DO WITH TRUMP NEWS. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Anna	Parsons	Broomfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Hanson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Croteau	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amelia	Willits	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Heneghan	Portland	Oregon	Free speech is a founding principle of the United States of America. It was not founded on the belief that one person should dictate their beliefs over free airwaves. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jeanne	Sipahigil	Liberty	Indiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Murphy	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evan	Sederquest	Chester	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	gillespie	Santa margsrita	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen	Corcoran	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keegan	Bisch	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	McNamee	Rochester	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johnston	Philip	Scotts Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	Williams	Fairfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Baum	Alta Loma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Goldberg	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angie	Heide	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Fried	Pacific Palisades	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Halsey	Rodman	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terry	Gopadze	DEL MAR	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgia	Simpson	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Holtzman	Laguna Niguel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Elwardt	Plainfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angie	Heide	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Brandt	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Alice	Feldman	Oak Ridge	Tennessee	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Prescribed, biased content is what is not free press or journalism; it is propaganda that totalitarian countries force stations to air as news. Please block this merger.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Flynt	Springfield	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Murphy	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edda	Spielmann	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Fraser	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Smith	Fort Pierce	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ross	Larson	Trinidad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Anthony	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	McLaughlin	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Conrad	Bertz	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tess	Broxholm	Walworth	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Atcheson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. Sinclair has a history of suppressing true news in favor of views and positions that it deems correct. This merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neil	Freson	Henrietta	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	McCann	Escondido	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ingrid	Stromberg	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erma	Lowe	Clarksville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melvin	Turcanik	Dodge Center	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Barbi	Milton	New Hampshire
				US Citizens demand unbiased news sources in order to make informed decisions! I care -and- I vote!!!
Toni	Rivers	Atlanta	Georgia	Almost every travesty in our nation's history is the result of too much greed and too much power in the hands of a few. Diversity and varying perspectives is what facilitates the pusuit of truth and justice, not for a few but for all! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Jared	Best	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Seckinger	polk city	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	D	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ian	Westcott	Brooklyn	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				I believe that allowing Sinclair Broadcasting and Tribune Media to m

Martin	Wolf	Colorado Spgs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eileen	Mars	Monroe Township	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Gibler	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Aleta	Deroy	Mena	Arkansas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. If this merger succeeds we will be in the company of Russia, North Korea and other oppressive regimes. We must not let any organization limit our access to any and all news. It is up to

Norm	Brewer	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Umberg	Chino Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Kemp	Dyer	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

laura	walpert	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josef	Ragaller	Tuscon	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Welch	North Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Tucker	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tammy	Yazzie	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Kolegas	LOS ANGELES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	D	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Weatherup	Jamul	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Cornell	Romeoville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Zylberman	Owings Mills	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John D	Lazar	Roya[Oak	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonard	Barham	Copake	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Lacy	Bakersfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albert	Vetrini	Brick	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Rooney	La Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lotti Pharriss	Knowles	Valley Glen	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen Shanley	Kurowski	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

June	Pence	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Whitney	Wayzata	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Formento	Slidell	Louisiana
Kelly	Montano	Lakewood	Colorado

Preventing journalists from expressing their independent views is a violation of the First Amendment and of the human dignity of every man and woman who works in the field. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Movsesyan	McKinleyville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Davolos	Maitland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Tate	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Weiskoff	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Kadar	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lamont	Jones	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Sorkin	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Chapman	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Cornell	Romeoville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Kramer	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ralph	Harrison	Pensacola	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Steinberg	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Zaenen	Emerald Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Liya	Schwartzman	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alvaro	Garza	Modesto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Taylor	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maryjo	Callahan	Chico	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Brannan	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Wagner	Oxnard	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Kent	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	DeNio	Duluth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kristopher	Kazlowski	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Nakamura	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Kimball	Huntsville	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Cole	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Branson	Pomona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Gustavsson	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bhaskar	Balaji	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Jamieson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Wasson	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	McCay	Kamuela	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Miles	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Callahan	Chico	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Darden	Fayetteville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Knoblock	Joliet	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Zafren	Anchorage	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tristan	Petraglia	Connellsville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregg	Lowe	Greenville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curtis	Keedy	Lincoln	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Audrey	Jin	Palos Verdes Estates	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindsay	Turner	Pittsford	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alene Kiku	Terasaki	Laguna Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Adame V	denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
William	Fast	Ozawkie	Kansas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The congealing of our press, both printed and broadcast, is approaching regional monopoly statuses. A truly free press operates very independently and reflects regional interests and perceptions, while easily a and openly soliciting the viewpoints of its local residents for feedback and dialogue. We need to break up and diversify press ownership most of all.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Deb	Van	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Rowland	Brooksville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Jones	West Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauren	Weinstock	Denver	Colorado	A TV broadcasting conglomerate of Sinclair-Tribune merger would be unprecedented in size and power in this country. Wouldn't this contradict the FCC's own policies? We are opposed to any harm to our free speech. This is essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shabnam	Hakimi	Chapel Hill	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Hale	Daly City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Weisman	Independence	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Williams	La Quinta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mel	Apodaca	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harvey	Winokur	El Cajon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Paulk	Ottumwa	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Finney	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Fergus-Irvin	Grove City	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Altschul	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Traci	Matthews	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Kurimay	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophie	Byerly	Brooklyn	New York
Jason	Rosenbaum	Los Angeles	California

A single entity shouldn't have control of hundreds of media outlet n

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jameka	Armstrong	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Greene	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Puccio	Danbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanna	deFelice	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Bills	Van Nuys	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Eiseman	Corrales	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Carmichael	Pacifica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Matchette	Rohnert Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Frantz	Paoli	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	O'Neal	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Volk-anderson	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vinita	Sehgal	New Rochelle	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Monitto	Kissimmee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Ward	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Cicchi	Placerville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It would purposefully give untrue or tainted news -- worse than we get now. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lara	Niederhauser	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	Rocks	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Blanc	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joel	McCoy	Orinda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Nichols	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Switzer	Davenport	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Mikell	Johns Is.	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Kayser	West Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laila	Dadvand	Hoboken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

May	Mantell	Middlebury	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Windham	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dominica	Lo Bianco OSF	Aston	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Kissilove	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Joseph	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniela	Ross	Los Altos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Hess	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
anne	williams	Fredericksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rudean	Leinaeng	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelley	Butler	Shoreview	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Cohen	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sean	Murphy	Johnson City	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Roberson	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Griswold	N Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marguerite	Royse	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kaitlin	Goldsmith	Annapolis	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Boblit	Bettendorf	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brent	Gaisford	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Britton	Portland	Maine
Michele	Flom	San Luis Obispo	California	I am absolutely against Sinclair's attempt to become a news monop A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jamie	Lowry	Hermosa Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Liza	Norman	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Bryant	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ria	Tanz Kubota	El Sobrante	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

patsie	johnston	junction	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Weck	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Heisel	Kihei	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Frillman	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Lamb	Minnetonka	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trisha	Pahmeier	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dayna	Leong	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	Kaye	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	McCaskill	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dean	Pryer	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liza	Norman	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Norris	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marisa	Bennett	Bakersfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Palmer	Indianola	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eddie L. and Yvette B. S	Smith	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Green	WEST PALM BEACH	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Olsen	Brooklyn Park	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meryl	Rowin	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Hazelton	Bennington	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol Anne	Ikard	Julian	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

joan	macbeth	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

patsie	johnston	junction	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Smith	Marshall	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Sheridan	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Schacht	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregg	Yeomans	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Van Allen	Hamburg	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverly	Railsback	Lambertville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Miller	Wilkes-Barre	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Long	Mt. Solon	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Alexander	Windsor	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charlotte	Glauser	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Lampton	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erica	Fox	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Billie	Spell	Roseburg	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Nielsen-Clesceri	Crystal Lake	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Schultz	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leanne	Friedman	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

F	Hammer	san francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country.
				It would violate the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press which are essential for a healthy democracy.
soheila	Taylor	McKinney	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts reveal a consistent political bias, which could A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Drapkin	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Kaplan	Monterey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Coyle	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carmen	Rodriguez	North Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Stormon	Auburn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dunham	Sherer	Occidental	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maeve	Callaghan	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Baillif	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Luehrmann	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Justina	Pernette	Lake Forest	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianna	Mejia Contact	Soquel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Greenwald	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Kohl	Sun City West	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marianne	Lappin	Las Cruces	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

zachary	Taylor	McKinney	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
